The efforts of the department to keep the place free from complaint should receive encouragement and support from public spirited citizens.

THE WORLD'S FAIR

AS SEEN THROUGH A PAIR OF NEWTON SPECTACLES.

If one is interested in any special department he will probably find himself lingering long over the exhibits contained in that department here, and he will be sure to gather many fresh suggestions from what he sees. The Fair thus becomes a great object lesson to a large number. Of course the majority not being specialists wander here and there and find more enjoyment than instruction from their hasty look at this vast array of fabrics and inventions, machinery and their products.

The exhibits however, are capable of conveying a vast amount of instruction even to those who are not specialists. For example, in the Transportation building, there has been gathered together whatever will illustrate the various methods by which men have travelled from place to place. Here are the rudest forms of conveyance, and here the most elaborate. The whole story of railroading is told in a most impressive way as you see the long array of engines and cars, proceeding from the little insignificant affairs of long ago, and ending in the magnificent train of Pullman cars and the engine known as "999," a great monster that towers up like an iron house on wheels.

And so the story of road wagons is told with equally graphic power as you look at the many intervening steps from the lumbering ox cart to the light, cobby buggy with its pneumatic tire.

It is probable that a feeling almost of awe comes over one as he enters the Electricity building. The practical application of this subtle and mysterious agent, which we call electricity, has been so recent that we hardly understand it yet not to look on with a surprise, not unmixed with dread. The building devoted to electrical work is so large that it almost tells you before you enter it, that now you are to see a great storehouse of modern wonders.

And so you find great whirling machines, revolving lights, brilliant colors, and a bewildering array of things with whose uses you probably are entirely unfamiliar.

You find this newly harnessed agent doing all kinds of work, from driving heavy engines, down to the most delicate illumination of a surgeon's knife while performing an operation upon the human body. How many uses it serves! It is hard to draw up a list of the various applications which have been actually made, up to date, to say nothing of the experimental processes which are likely to increase the number in the near future.

You will go up and down the building that stores these electrical exhibits and when you can tear yourself away it will be with a great increase of wonder and admiration.

The Art building will invite you to a highly interesting exhibit of paintings, drawings, architecture and sculpture. It can hardly be called a surpassingly grand display, for it is not up to some of the foreign galleries, and there are not many things of such excellence that they would be classed as unique.

However it has a good collection of pictures and statuary, and considering all the difficulties in the way of getting together the materials for the exhibition it is well worthy the occasion.

WEALTH AND THE COMMONWEALTH

(Joseph Wood in Seedtime, London.)

In the propaganda of socialism nothing seems to me more important than to get people to see and acknowledge the indebtedness of the individual to the community; that there would be no wealth but for the commonwealth; that the main element in property is not personal but social. It is only in fellowship and combination that property is acquired. The social life is the only answer, in fact, which meets the individual's desire to live. It may seem for a moment that the world of labor is just a world of toiling units, each bearing the burden of its own life. But this is only a fragment of the truth. Never in any past which history brings within view has the individual ever labored to support his own life by himself alone. As soon as industrial and economic life begin to have any history at all, we are following forms of combination between man and man, which daily become more intricate and complex. No progress, no wealth, no accumulated stores, no life, in fact, is possible except in fellowship. The duty to live is the duty to labor, and this becomes the duty to live in mutual helpfulness with others. In the light of this idea, what becomes of private property? How much of that which a man calls his own is really his own, and how much is the creation of purely social forces?

Certain it is that if we have any private property at all it is in our bodies, and yet we are told "we are not our own." For we are not our own makers. We are what we are because we are filled by the ministry of past ages with all the fulness of humanity. Today we are fed in body, soul and spirit by the millions of human beings all over the wide world. Into the composition of our souls, into our affections, purposes and wills, into our very mind and thought, the affections and wills and minds of millions of mankind have entered, and we, so made and fed and living in all this world wide life, fulfill our destiny in becoming in turn instruments to meet the needs and lives of others.

Think how much is done for us; what we receive and absorb. Let our imagination travel for a moment over the scenes where toil is now going on for us, to the far countries whence come our food supplies—all the world laid under tribute; think of our sailors in their hard and dangerous work; think of our miners, our factory-workers, our laborers in the East and the West, in the rice fields of India or in the wheat fields of California; think of all the myriad-headed service of this great city. It passes all imagination. Others are always working for us. We are always being ministered unto. Day by day, hour by hour our indebtedness to the community increases. To the community we owe everything. Or go back again over your own life. How many have toiled that you might become what you are—educated, refined, the scholar, the gentleman. Think that this is the result of creating the civilization we unconsciously inherit. Which of us can repay to the existing generation, still less to the world, the vast debt we owe? We talk about our right to our own! What is our own? We are bankrupts everyone except by the grace of the community, and our only right is to serve. Each for all can be our only motto, and private property becomes a mere convention, more or less convenient, but a convention only, which society allows and which society can abolish without wronging any man.

Although it is a simple and obvious fact that the social element in production is a hundred to one compared with the individual element, it is necessary to illustrate its working. For this purpose no better example can be found than our old friend Pugson, the typical cotton-lord, whose portrait has been painted for us by Carlyle. Consider a day in the life of a man like Pugson. He comes down in the morning and finds on his breakfast table a newspaper, which gives him tidings from all over the world and which he eagerly consults, that he may know how the money market stands. Look at that printed page—price one penny. Remember that there was a time when there were no newspapers, no sheets, no papers, no writing, no alphabet. Pugson's power to make money lies largely in that penny newspaper; without it he would be a poor man. But he did not invent the alphabet; he did not invent the printing machine; he did not elaborate all the arts by which the penny newspaper or possible. It is fair to say that without that morning sheet on his breakfast table Pugson would be worth less by $50,000 than he is. He has received a magnificent gift from the past; 10,000 experience has been made during the last thousand years before he could have his morning newspaper. To whom do the result of these men's efforts belong? To society as a whole; to civilization; to the multitudinous community.

Having finished his breakfast Pugson hurries off to catch the train for business, and looking at the church clock sees by it he is a minute late. Pugson believes in punctuality, and quickness of stride. Minutes are money! But how comes it that Pugson is also so accurately to mark the minutes? Did he invent watches and clocks? That church clock sums up in itself a long series of efforts and failures, and centuries of thought and labor, from the time when men first marked the sun by sun dials, on to the time when Galileo saw the censer swinging in Pisa cathedral and conceived the idea of the pendulum, on again, through a score of inventors, of workers, to our Dollands and Bensons. At what cost has this triumph of skill been won? Whose cost? Not Pugson's. And yet how much of his wealth he owes to the convenience of clocks and watches; that is, to the accurate registration of time.

Pugson just catches his train, and in 30 minutes is landed in the city, having traveled 12 miles in that short space of time. Is it any merit of Pugson's foot that he can fly over the ground at this speed? What does that steam engine represent, which economizes his time and adds so much to his wealth? It represents an amount of thought, patience, experiment after experiment, stretching back for hundreds of years, almost inconceivable in variety and extent. No one man invented the steam engine. Before the steam engine was invented some one had to invent screws, nuts, bolts, the smelting of iron, the manufacture of steel; the laws of compression and expansion had to be discovered; many lives and countless treasures were expended in building up this wonderful fiery steed. What a mighty movement along the ages is represented by the steam engine! To whom does the steam engine belong, with its thousand inventions? Not to Pugson, not to this generation; to society as a whole. And the wealth we acquire through the steam engine is society's gift to us; we did not make it all.

Leaving the station, Pugson steps out into the smoothly paved, well-lit, carefully swept and watered street. That street was once simply a mud lane between rows of tumble-down cottages. What a convenience it is to Pugson that he can walk in ease and safety along the smooth pavement and well-kept road. Who made that road? Whose efforts laid down that cunning macadam? Who first thought of slightly arching the road that it should be kept well drained? The very streets of our town we did not pay for; previous generations have built them and left them to us for a legacy. Yet without such well-kept roads how would Pugson do his business, run with ease from his office to the Exchange, send his wagons swiftly and safely on their errands?

As we might go through all the day in Pugson's company, might see him writing out checks, using the telegraph, eagerly opening the letters which have come by post, answering them by the aid of a typewriter, recovering a debt in the county court, giving orders through the telephone and securing to himself his gains and fortune, not one tenth so much by his own brains, skill, knowledge, invention, muscles, nerves, activities, as by the forces and conquests of civilization which he has received from the past, and which he is just clever enough to turn to his own account. And now tell me how much of his $100,000 he made himself? How much of it does he owe to society? Nine tenths of any man's wealth is not of his own making at all, it is a social product, and it is the community to say how its private possession shall be regulated and on what terms.

This again is true of nine tenths of capital, that it is a social and not an individual creation. Where does capital come from? Who created it? The usual answer is capital is labor saved. It is nothing of the sort, except to a very small degree. Nineteen twentieths of capital is labor taxed. In asserting that capital is the result of savings, we insinuate that capitalists are a highly deserving class of people indeed, since it is due to their self-denying, wonderful "abstinence" that we have any capital at all. This is perhaps the greatest of all the fallacies of the old political economy.

Here is a man who begins life with the typical half crown and at 50 years of age retires with a fortune of $50,000. This is how so much capital which he invests. But how did he get it? At 20 years of age he found himself working shoemaker, earning £2 a week. He lived on £1 and saved £1, and at the end of five years found himself with a capital of £250. This he has saved and he deserves much credit for his abstinence. But mark you, this is all he ever does save, for now he changes his method and instead of saving from his own earnings begins to tax the earnings of others. He takes five people into his employ—two girls, two boys and a man. He gives the boys and girls each 5s. a week, and the man 25s. a week, a total of £25s. But the profit of the work done by the five people amounts to £5. He need do no work himself except that of superintendence, and he will receive more for his own portion than he did when he toiled all the week to earn £2. Now he receives £2 15s. But he is better off not because he saves labor, but because he taxes labor. He need not save another penny. Indeed he begins to spend. He lives in a larger house, keeps servants, in time sets up a carriage, and by his method of taxing labor, every year extended, gradually accumulates £50,000.

Given the possession of £50,000 gained in the way I have described, what does it do for him? He retires from business and lives upon what he pleasantly and emphatically calls "his savings." Well and good. But does he? Nothing of the sort. He proposes to eat his cake and have it too. He lives on interest. At five per cent. he receives £2,500 a year and at the end of 20 years has received his £50,000 in annual payments. His capital is gone? Not so. It is there just the same, and he proposes to tie it up and leave it to his family in such a way that they shall become a perpetual rent-charge of £2,500 on the community. Because he was clever enough to amass £50,000 he proposes to fasten his family upon the country for the next 200 years, or perhaps longer, as members of an idle class who draw their living from the community. Now why, in justice, should 50 families have to work harder than otherwise would be necessary in order to keep this one family in idleness and luxury for ever and ever? For where does the interest on capital come from? Again it comes from the taxation of labor. Labor pays it; every farthing of it!

Let us press home the indebtedness of the individual to the community. Our wealth, our ordered world, our civilization, our freedom, our knowledge, have been bought with a great price. We are the result of that age-long conflict, the tears, the labors, the spiritual upheavals, the tremendous strain which make up the long roll of history. There is no province of human life in which we are not reaping golden harvests which were sown for us by men of other generations. Our inventions, our just laws, our systems, jurisprudence, our agricultural methods, all the things that contribute to the ease and safety of human life have been won for us by the desperate struggle, "the agony and bloody sweat" of a vast succession of obscure as well as of illustrious ancestors. For as well as our wealth, or our moral ideas as well as our material possessions, all are under infinite obligations to the past. We owe all that we value to the community in whose life we live and move and have our being. What then? Well, this, at least, that the simple-minded disciples of older time, of whom it is written, "Neither said any of them that aught of the things which he possessed was his own," had more insight into economic truth than half the professors of that much misunderstood science.

Stole Milk in Waltham.

Tuesday morning E. J. Hoffess, who runs a milk farm in Waltham, discovered that during the night previous someone had entered his milk house on Lexington street and stolen nine large cans, together with 25 quarts and pails of milk. This he promptly reported to the police.

Later in the day F. W. Farley reported that his man, John Hughes, had been held up on River street the night previous and 16 quarts of milk stolen. The men who stole the milk from the Hoffess' farm, drove to Newton, where they were arrested as suspicious persons, they having the milk in their possession. They gave their names as Matthew Riley, Michael J. Anderson, John J. and Morris Corkery of Cambridge. In the Newton district court they entered a plea of guilty to a charge of larceny, and were held for the grand jury.

BOSTON AMUSEMENTS.

COLUMBIA THEATRE—The regular season of the Columbia will open Monday afternoon, Sept. 4th, with Mr. Peter F. Dailey in J. J. McNally's new farce-comedy, "A Country Sport," under the direction of Charles J. Rich and William Harris. The Columbia will, during the coming season, fully sustain the standard it has achieved since its opening, and Managers Rich and Harris will present in rapid succession the best plays and companies obtainable. Nothing will be left undone to secure the comfort of all classes of patrons, and under the direct supervision of its well-known managers this charming house will undoubtedly enjoy a season of unlimited prosperity.

PARK THEATRE—At the Park Theatre, Monday night, the past week, the "Golden Wedding" began upon another week of its triumphal success. Every night there have been very enthusiastic audiences present to greet the new members of the company, and of course the new members give new business and there has been lots of it. Beginning Monday next is the last week, and then for the first time after a remarkable run of sixteen consecutive weeks in Boston, and in summer too, this merry skit will be seen outside of Boston. Rehearsals for E. E. Rice's production of "Venus" have been for sometime in progress at Palmer's Theatre, New York. The first performance occurs at the Park Theatre, Boston, Sept. 11th. The libretto of Venus is by Chas. Alfred Byrne and Louis Harrison and the music by Gustave A. Kerker. The company come to the Park, Saturday, to rehearse one week before opening.

GLOBE THEATRE—An unconventional Irish play is indeed a novelty; a play which deals with phases of life and with characters different from those usually portrayed in dramas. Erich's Isle, and which introduces themes and subjects not hitherto touched upon by the writers of Hibernian plays. Such a play is "The Wicklow Postman," written by the well-known author and actor, Mark Price, and in which the popular comedian, Eugene O'Rourke, will be seen at the Globe Theatre, Boston, on Monday, September 4th. Mr. O'Rourke, who is himself an artist of repute, having been connected with first-class organizations for years past, and will be remembered as a prominent member of Ed. Harrigan's company, and was Murty Kerrigan in "The Ivy Leaf," will be supported by a well selected company, including the pretty and clever comedienne, Miss Mattie Ferguson, who was for three years one of the features with the favorite W. J. Scanlon. There will be a special matinee Labor Day.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE—Last week's entrance into the theatrical world of Boston of the new Grand Opera House stock company was an event of far more than ordinary moment, and theatre folk recognized it by filling the spacious house at every performance. "The Grand Opera" was given an artistic and most finished production, and every member of the company was heartily received. Augustus Pitou's successful war drama, "Across the Potomac," will be the attraction next week, the first performance to be given at a special Labor Day matinee Monday. The scenery is the work of artists, massive and effective, and in the matter of detail there is nothing to be desired. Mr. Pitou has a strong company to present "Across the Potomac," among the people being such well known artists as Miss Amelia Birmingham, Miss Fanny Gillette, Miss Julia West, Miss Grace Pierpont, Miss Bessie Stevens, Charles J. Richmond, J. M. Drew, Lloyd Melville.

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE—Manager Isaac B. Rich announces the opening of the Hollis Street Theatre on Monday afternoon, Sept. 4th, with that ever charming play, "Blue Jeans," as the initial attraction. "Blue Jeans" has been superbly mounted and cast for the present tour, and as it never yet failed to draw large houses in Boston, its engagement will be certain to be most prosperous. The Hollis Street Theatre will present during the coming season the high class of attraction that has characterized its career in the past and which has made it the leading theatre of Boston. Manager Rich has booked Miss Marie Tempest, the Keadals, John Drew, Daniel Frohman's company, Augustin Daly's company, Mr. N. C. Goodwin, Mr. W. H. Crane, Mrs. Langtry, Miss Johnstone Bennett, Mrs. Leslie-Carter, Miss Julia Marlowe and many others of the leading stars. It is difficult to see how anything can interfere with the uninterrupted career of prosperity that the Hollis Street Theatre has always enjoyed.

BOWDOIN SQUARE THEATRE—Manager Atkinson's enterprise in securing the first production of William Gill's new play written for "Billy" Barry, the popular comedian, and called "The Rising Generation," will be fully appreciated by the friends and admirers of this favorite dramatic artist. The play is a prologue and an act, the action showing the rise of Martin McShayne from being a laborer on the public works to an aqueduct contractor with a "pull" sufficient to land him in the State Senate. The construction of the play is such that it easily permits the introduction of the music for songs and careful dances, many of which have been well written and selected by Mr. Emil Wolf. The character of Martin McShayne fits Mr. Barry's special gifts as a comedian with rare success. Miss Lydia Barry is given some pretty songs, and a half dozen graceful girls figure in the dances of the piece, which, in these matters, Mr. Wolf have given an excellent setting. It is announced for only a single week. "The Lost Paradise" is the next attraction.

Literary Notes.

The Bronte Family, by Dr. William Wright, will be published by D. Appleton & Co., with illustrations. This remarkable book contributes absolutely fresh information to the history of the Bronte family, and it presents certain romances of family history almost as strange and thrilling as anything in the novels of the Bronte sisters. The complete book will prove a work of absorbing interest, and one which will be indispensable for those who wish to understand the influences which directed the development of the Bronte sisters.

Wagleigh—Well, dear, don't let that worry you. After Bridget has handled it for a week or so it will be in a good many more pieces than that.—Pack.

A GOOD SHOWING.

The tax rate and the valuation of the city for 1893 is now announced, the assessors have been delayed chiefly by the very thorough manner in which they have gone over the city, looking up values and searching for personal property and also by the fact that so many new members were placed on the board.

The tax rate will be $14.80, an increase of only 20 cents over last year, and most people will feel relieved that it is not greater, owing to the extraordinary expenses for sewerage and other matters. The rate will compare very favorably with that of other suburban towns, who have anything near the public conveniences that Newton possesses.

Tables are also given this week showing the comparative growth of the city, and the valuations and polls in the different wards. It will be noticed that the total of taxable polls shows a slight falling off, as usual, but this will be more than made good by the Board of Registrars. Ward five loses the largest number, and Wards six and seven lose slightly, the other wards gaining.

In real estate there is a total increase of nearly two millions, which is a healthy showing. Ward six gains a large portion of this, which rather justifies the assertion that has been often heard, that the valuation in Ward six was the lowest of any ward in the city. Wards one and seven were so highly assessed before that there was not much chance for any large gain, but the other wards show a good increase.

In personal property, there is a falling off of about half a million, owing partly doubtless to the hard times, and partly that no large estates have been divided up the past year. The tables will make interesting reading.

The passage of the silver repeal bill by the House by such a large majority was very encouraging and gives hope of speedy relief. It is rather disappointing to find that the Senate is still bent on talking instead of getting down to business, but there seems to be very little doubt that the Senate will finally follow the example of the House and vote for repeal. The good effect of the House vote is already felt in business, and we read now in the daily papers of as many mills starting up as of those that shut down. A funny story of the present business crisis is told by a writer in the Waterbury (Conn.) American, who says he met a New Haven manufacturer the other day who was complaining wofully of the hard times. For a year now he has been running his factory full both night and day, and now he is running it full days only. He says he has enough good orders ahead to keep him busy for some months yet, but he is afraid that then his orders may fall off. His case is truly pitiable, but the Contributor fancies he is a type of many who are making their complaints heard the loudest.

The only new thing about gubernatorial candidates this week is the discovery of the number of political drummers who are out after Hart delegates. The central and western parts of the state are said to have been pretty well covered, and the number of delegates this year is so large, and so many from the remote districts will probably be willing to pass over their credentials to someone who can afford to go, that the Hart men may be able to make a large showing. Mr. Pillsbury continues to remain the popular favorite, though the Greenleaf men dispute this and make great claims for the strength of their candidate. With such a three cornered fight, there are some who predict that there will be an inability to nominate and that the choice will finally fall on Lieut. Governor Wolcott. In many ways he would be an even stronger candidate than Mr. Pillsbury, as his course in office has commended him to those who have followed affairs carefully, as a wise and liberal-minded man, who is too much of a statesman to be a mere politician.

On another page will be found an article on socialism, from an English paper, which gives one a good idea of what is meant by socialism in its best sense. The writer's idea is that there would be no wealth but for the commonwealth, and he aims to show the indebtedness of the individual to the community. Looking at it in this light there is some justice in the feeling that a rich man who has been able by our laws to amass many millions, is recreant to his duty as a citizen, if he does not return a portion of it in the form of public bequests, when he dies. Some even go farther, and think that such a man as Mr. Carnegie, who has made such an immense fortune by taxing the public on the products of his factories, is not really making things even by building a public library or a music hall now and then. There is a good deal to be said from the socialist's point of view, even if it is a one-sided one, and it is well to recognize it.

THE hurricane of Tuesday did great damage in Newton, in stripping the trees of fruit. Orchards were a melancholy sight after the blow, as the ground was covered with half grown winter apples and pears, and very little fruit is left on the trees. Many trees were broken down and in driving about the city one saw large trees broken clean off, as though a cyclone had passed over them. The damage in Newton alone will probably amount to a thousand of dollars, and the loss in the country visited by the hurricane is said to mount up into the millions. As a result of the two storms within a week, fruit will probably be scarce and high.

PROF. JOHN BACH McMASTER, of the University of Pennsylvania, has a very interesting article in the September Forum, on "A Century's Struggle for Silver." The article is especially timely just now, when so much is said of the silver question, as it gives in brief the history of our national coinage, and the various acts which have been passed by Congress in regard to gold and silver, with the results that have followed, including the present Sherman law, which is soon to be repealed. From the article can be seen the great fluctuations in the price of silver, which render it so untrustworthy as a part of our national currency.

THE Vermont Episcopalians have elected Rev. Father Hall, formerly of the Mission church of St. John the Evangelist, as their bishop. If Father Hall accepts he will be the third bishop of that diocese, and it is supposed that the Vermont church must have had some information of his views, and that the Cowley Fathers would release him from his vows. While in Boston Father Hall gained many devoted friends, and his eloquence and energy would make him a great power in the Vermont church.

THE Waltham Free Press calls attention to a serious question in regard to ordinances, which affects that and other cities. It says:

"Newton is struggling with a building ordinance. A few arrests and fines where ordinances are violated are just as essential as a good law. But as our local inspector of buildings says—what are you going to do when the proper authorities take no action when a complaint is presented to them?"

THE uncertainty of all mundane things was again illustrated by Frederick H. Hovey's defeat by Robert D. Wrenn, at Newport, in the contest for championship of the United States. Mr. Wrenn is comparatively a new player, and the result of the contest was a great surprise to Mr. Hovey's friends, but it is a great honor for Newton to have the second best tennis player.

The editor of the Brookline Chronicle has been to Chicago, and says in his paper that as to extortion, such a thing is unknown there. Evidently the editor had a pass to everything.

THE Cambridge Tribune and the Chronicle both came out for Mr. Hart for governor, last week, and everyone is wondering how it happened.

NEWTON'S VALUATION.

QUITE AN INCREASE IN REAL, BUT A DECREASE IN PERSONAL PROPERTY.

The assessors of Newton completed their labors yesterday afternoon on the real and personal valuation of that city. The announcement of the figures has been delayed because of a large amount of extra work this year, in part because of the introduction of sewerage, involving considerable statistical labor, and owing to the changes in the board, several of the former assessors retiring with the inauguration of the present city government, their places being filled by new men.

The rate, was fixed at $14.80 per thousand, an increase of 20 cents over last year's figures. The rate is considered low in view of the large expenditures for sewer and highway improvements during the past 12 months, beside a large outlay for new school buildings and other expenses connected with the public property, fire and police departments.

The increase in total valuation over last year is $1,453,221. The increase in real estate is $1,948,425. There has been a decrease in personal property of $479,094. The largest increase in both real and personal property was in ward 6—$508,900 real; $70,790 personal; total, $579,690.

The total increase in the number of polls for the several wards is 440. The table of valuation figures is appended:

Squelching an Old Gentleman.

She stood before the great painting, "The Fall of Babylon," and was absorbed in thought, at least thought she was thinking. Her escort and another lady were modestly lingering in the rear with the "Falls of Niagara." Presently they edged around to the former picture. The studious first gazer never stirred.

"How can you spend so much time over this wicked picture?" inquired the female newcomer.

"Which is Belshazzar?" was the answering query.

The figure of the profligate king was pointed out to her as "him there up on the big throne."

"So that's the man who ate grass, is it?" she said inquiringly.

"Probably only took grass in his whiskey," suggested the male escort.

"Wasn't it Nebuchadnezzar who was driven out to grass?" smilingly inquired an old gentleman who overheard the conversation. He was a nice looking old gentleman, with a Wanamaker countenance. All three of the party turned upon him, and the young woman snarled:

"No, it wasn't! You needn't think you're the only one who's been to Sunday school just because you come from Philadelphia!"

The nice old gentleman wilted. I passed him in the entrance a few moments later and he was consulting a railroad time table of the Pennsylvania. —New York Herald.

At the Columbian Fair.

That was a sad affair that took place in the bureau of public comfort the other day. A distinguished looking foreigner, with three small boys, came up to the parcel room and checked a traveling bag. Then the gentleman took his overcoat, wrapped the boys' outer jackets in it and handed the bundle in for another check.

"You will have to pay 10 cents and take a check for each article," said the young woman in charge.

"But that would cost me 50 cents merely to leave my wraps and a bag here for an hour or two. I assure you, madam, that they have allowed me to make the topcoats into one parcel when I have left them in the other buildings."

The parcel lady leaned her elbows on the counter and leaned her chin on her hands, and calmly and deliberately, looking the gentleman in the face, said, "Why don't you take your things to one of the other buildings then?"

The man flushed, took up his coat, unfolded it and handed the jackets to the boys. He was too well bred to wrangle or to speak till out of hearing of the young woman.

"American manners, boys!" he said then, and he shrugged his shoulders, and the three boys shrugged theirs, and a nice reputation they will give us when they get home. In Europe we will be regarded as barbarians for another hundred years, it is feared. —Newport News.

The Only Woman in the County.

Annie Thomas is the only woman in Kamania county. She is a squatter and lives in Rattlesnake hills. There has of late been a great strife for her hand in marriage among the rough settlers of that region. Hank Monley and Jerry Woods seemed to be the highest in her favor, and so it was finally agreed that these two men should settle the question between them by a duel with bowie knives. After a desperate fight, in which both were wounded, the battle was declared a draw. It was then agreed that the matrimonial question should be settled by a game of seven up. The fortune of cards favored Monley, and he was declared the winner of the squatter bride. A person was called in to assure him his prize.

The fickle Annie had a long talk with the person, and though she had never seen him before she at last announced her intention of marrying the person himself and not Monley. In vain did the hero of the bowie knife duel and the victor in the game of seven up object to this proceeding. The woman was firm in her intention, and the upshot was that the person got the woman. —Spokane Cor. Chicago Tribune.

An Important Railway Decision.

The decision of the United States supreme court in the case of the Union Pacific against Goodridge, just reported, holds that all shippers must be treated by carriers with absolute equality and distinctly recognizes the right of law-making bodies to regulate railways through railway commissions, especially the feature of state and federal regulation which requires carriers to obtain permission of the commission before granting lower rates to persons and places. The case was brought under a statute of Colorado which prohibits unjust discrimination in practically the same language as that employed in the interstate commerce law.

Boston to Build a Big Dam.

Plans have been filed with the Worcester county commissioners for what will undoubtedly be the largest dam in New England. It will be known as Dam No. 5 of the Boston Waterworks association and will be situated in Southborough in the Sudbury river valley. It will be 2,000 feet long, and in the center will be 75 feet high. It will have a 300 foot rollway, which will be constructed of solid masonry. The dam will overflow 1,800 acres. The work of cleaning the basin and building the dam will probably take five years. The dam will be built mainly of solid masonry, banked by earth and plastered with concrete, etc. —Boston Transcript.

A Horse For Three Dollars and a Half.

The crowd laughed when the auctioneer's assistant brought forward a horse at a sale in Ottawa one day last week. One dollar was the first bid. By easy stages this was raised to $3.50, and at that price the animal changed owners.

Bullets made of precious stones are rarities in warfare. But during the recent fighting on the Kashmir frontier, when the British troops defeated the rebellious Hunzas, the natives used bullets of garnets incased in lead.

Four Lectures.

The Rev. J. J. Lewis, the well-known lecturer upon "The Passion Play," "Canadian Rockies," and European travel, is to give courses of four lectures during October, in Armory hall, Newton; city hall, West Newton; Lincoln hall, Newton Highlands.

The courses are to be managed upon the subscription plan and will be made up of the following lectures:

1. The Passion Play of Oberammergau, as witnessed by Mr. Lewis, August 10, 1890.

2. From Amsterdam, the Dyked City, up the Storied Rhine to Lanterbrunnen, the Alpine valley.

3. From Lake Thun to the Tiber with glimpses of Berne, Genoa, Chamouni, Glacier du Rhone, Lakes Como, Lugarno and Maggiore, Milan, Genoa and Pisa.

4. Through the Canadian Rockies, the Wonderland of America.

Mr. Lewis' lectures are all illustrated with fine light, dissolving views, made by Levy of Paris and Black of Boston. The announcement means an intellectual treat to the Newtons. The Rev. J. J. Lewis is so well known to Boston and vicinity by his past successes, that it is not necessary to say more.

—Mr. Heman L. Putnam died at his residence on Winthrop street, at 11.15 Sunday evening, after a brief illness. Deceased was 62 years of age, and resided here. He was in the bedding business for more than a quarter-century, and was at one time located on Beach street, Boston, with his brother. The firm later removed to Congress street, where a large factory was erected, the Putnams a few years ago, however, selling out their interest.

—The business is now continued by the Putnam Company. Mr. Putnam was a highly respected resident of this place. He was prominent in Baptist church and held the office of deacon for many years. He was a man of retiring disposition, devoted to home. His sympathies were easily aroused, and he gave largely of his means for all charities. He was a kind friend to the deserving poor, and the memory of his good deeds will live long after him. A widow, daughter and son survive him. The funeral took place from the house Wednesday afternoon, Rev. Dr. Faunce officiating. The Dalhousie quartet rendered appropriate selections. The services at the grave were conducted by Rev. Richard Putnam, a brother of the deceased. The interment was made in the Newton Cemetery.

—Mr. Heman L. Putnam died at his residence on Winthrop street, at 11.15 Sunday evening, after a brief illness. Deceased was 62 years of age, and resided here. He was in the bedding business for more than a quarter-century, and was at one time located on Beach street, Boston, with his brother. The firm later removed to Congress street, where a large factory was erected, the Putnams a few years ago, however, selling out their interest.

—The business is now continued by the Putnam Company. Mr. Putnam was a highly respected resident of this place. He was prominent in Baptist church and held the office of deacon for many years. He was a man of retiring disposition, devoted to home. His sympathies were easily aroused, and he gave largely of his means for all charities. He was a kind friend to the deserving poor, and the memory of his good deeds will live long after him. A widow, daughter and son survive him. The funeral took place from the house Wednesday afternoon, Rev. Dr. Faunce officiating. The Dalhousie quartet rendered appropriate selections. The services at the grave were conducted by Rev. Richard Putnam, a brother of the deceased. The interment was made in the Newton Cemetery.

A RAINY DAY.

It rains. What lady loves a rainy day?
 Not she who puts prunella on her foot,
 Zephyrs around her neck and silken socks Upon a graceful ankle—nor she who Sports her tassel'd parasol along
 The walks, bent crowded, on some sunny noon.
 Or trips in muslin on a winter's night
 On a cold sleighride to a distant ball.
 She loves a rainy day who sweeps the hearth
 And threads the busy needle, or applies
 The scissors to the torn or threadbare sleeve;
 Who blesses God that she has friends and home;
 Who in the pelting of the storm will think
 Of some poor neighbor that she can befriend;
 Who trims the lamp at night and reads aloud
 To a young brother tales he loves to hear,
 Or ventures cheerfully abroad to watch
 The bedside of some sick and suffering friend, Administering that best of medicines—
 Kindness, tender care and cheering hope;
 Such are not sad, even on a rainy day.
 —J. G. Brainard.

A PLUCKY WIFE.

Sage Bar was excited. Six horses were missing from Bill Hines' drove. Fifteen minutes after Bill had reported his loss at the bar a party had found the trail and ridden off toward the southwest. Presently, as they were crossing a wet bit of land in a hollow, Bill, who led the party, looked sharply at the hoof prints sunk deep in the soil and reined up quickly.

"Look at that shoe mark!" he exclaimed, pointing down at the trail.
 "By guns! it's the easterner's horse shoe!" ejaculated Sam Pike after an instant's scrutiny of the hoofprints among which were several larger than the rest and showing the clear impress of a shoe. The others were those of unshod horses. Then the party scanned the marks closely. Then the men looked at each other with ugly frowns.

"Well!" said Bill tentatively at last. No one answered for a moment. Then Sam remarked: "It looks bad for our easterner, sure! Th' hain't any one got hoss shoes like them in th' district 'cept him. I'm sorry 'th' feller's put his head in a rope's end, boys. But we'll have ter foller him up. Who'll go back?"

A couple of the party volunteered. The men separated. Part of them moved forward on the trail. The others turned their horses at right angles to the former line of march and loped on toward the easterner's cabin.

The easterner, otherwise Jack Craig, of whom they had been speaking, had been in Sage Bar only a short time. He was a tenderfoot, out and out. When he came to the bar he brought his wife with him. She was a bright, pretty little woman, but they hardly knew her in the settlement. Craig always had been reserved, and the two had kept by themselves in the little cabin which stood a mile 'or more away from town. So Sage Bar had come to consider the pair a "queer lot," and to designate them as "th' easterner an' his wife," which was intended to be anything but complimentary.

When the trailing party reined up in front of Craig's cabin, they found the object of their search sitting on a log before the door smoking. From his dress, bespattered with mud, it was evident that he had just returned from riding. The party exchanged glances of understanding.

Sam Pike came to the point at once. "Craig," he said, "yer wanted down ter th' bar!"

"What's that?" demanded the easterner angrily.

"Yer wanted down ter th' bar!" Sam repeated. "For hoss stealing!" he added.

Craig's face was aflame in the instant. He sprang from his seat, throwing back his hand to his hip. But the others had him covered, and his hand dropped loosely by his side again. "It's a — lie," he said, "and you know it!"

Just then a woman's figure appeared in the cabin doorway. It was Craig's wife.

"What's the matter?" she questioned anxiously, seeing her husband's attitude.

Craig spoke up quickly: "Go back, Dolly! They've got up a dirty story about me and want me to go to the bar. But I'll come back in a little while."

Sam had a great fear of women's tongues and tears, and immediately ordered Craig to mount a horse which another man at a word secured from the stable near by. The woman had looked on dumbly, seeming hardly to comprehend what was taking place, but as she saw her husband walk over toward the arms about him, holding him tight to her. He unclasped her arms gently after an instant and mounted the horse, and turning in the saddle waved his hand to her. Then they rode away, and after they had gone a piece Sam looked back and saw the woman still standing there, her hands loosely locked before her, watching them with wide open eyes. "She's grit ter th' backbone," muttered that worthy and lashed his horse into a gallop.

All Sage Bar crowded around the party when they drew rein in town, and there were some who would have strung Craig up upon the spot when Sam had told the story. Sage Bar was in that stage of progress where horse stealing was a capital offense and a short shift was granted to offenders. But Sam's protest that nothing should be done until the Hines party returned was heeded, and the prisoner was put in an empty cabin, tied hand and foot, several of the men agreeing to stand guard.

The afternoon waned away, and evening came, and the Hines party did not make its appearance. So Craig was given something to eat and then was fastened tightly once more, and the men rolled themselves up in their blankets in front of the cabin about 11 o'clock, leaving only do Stetson on guard.

Stetson sat himself down on a stump and lit a pipe, and with his rifle across his knees fell to thinking about some "unavericks" he'd had branded that day. Presently he imagined he heard a soft step from the prairie. He raised his head and listened. Just then the moon showed a rim beyond a sailing cloud, and its light fell on a figure—a woman's figure—making its way toward the cabin. Stetson rose to his feet, letting his rifle butt drop on the ground, and curiously surveyed the woman, who was close to him now. It was the easterner's wife.

"Is he in there?" she said, her voice trembling a bit.

"Yes," answered Stetson.

"Can I see him?" she asked. "Only for a moment," she added.

"Can't do it, marm," said Stetson.

For a moment she was quiet, looking longingly toward the cabin and clasping and unclasping her hands softly. The man hoped she would go. He had hated to say no, and he didn't know how long his determination to refuse would last. "But they say they're going to try him tomorrow; and I mayn't get another chance." She looked at him so sadly and yet so bravely withal that Stetson wavered and was lost.

"For five minutes, then, no more!" he said, half repenting of his words the instant they were uttered.

But he unlocked the cabin door for her and locked it behind her again. Then he stood outside the door cursing himself. Presently there was a rap from the inside of the cabin, and much relieved, he undid the door, but he kept his finger on the hammer of his rifle as he stood aside to allow her to pass.

She came out quickly. Stetson turned and bent to fasten the door. As he did so he felt a tiny ring of cold metal against his head and heard, in her voice, now without a tremble:

"Put up your hands and do it quickly!"

The order was so distinctly put and so emphatically backed up by the cold metal which Stetson knew only too well was the dangerous end of a revolver that he did not hesitate. As he threw up his hands the door was pulled open from the inside, and a man dashed out and melted in the darkness of the prairie. A moment more, and the hoofbeats of a horse came back, sounding clear and sharp on the still air.

The men who had been asleep till now, awakened by the noise, sleepily raised themselves on their elbows. The woman had not moved the pistol from Stetson's head, but now she dropped the weapon quickly and started to run. In an instant Stetson was after her, and wild at being outwitted had run her down and caught her before she had gone 50 yards. As he grasped her by the shoulders the hoofbeats were dying on the air, and the woman looked into her captor's face with an exultant smile.

Stetson brought her back to the cabin and in a half shamed way told his story. The woman was quiet and did not seem to hear what they said. Despite their chagrin at having been worsted by a woman, the men could not but admire her pluck and skill. Then they argued as to what they should do with her, and finally decided to take her into town as soon as it was light. They locked her in the cabin and then sat up and talked the rest of the night. They felt that it would be useless to attempt to trail Craig in the dark, and, to tell the truth, they were just a bit fearful that the woman would escape them unless they kept a sharp lookout.

When morning came, a big party set off in pursuit of Craig. But they had scant hope of overtaking him with a horse under him and his many hours' start. The easterner's wife still remained locked in the cabin. Sage Bar for once found itself nonplused. Law and order had been reversed by a woman, and the town had the offender in custody. But smoke and ponder as it might, Sage Bar was at a loss to know how to proceed. All the laws of the settlement, unwritten though they were, had sprung from an acute sense of frontier needs and referred to men. There was an indefinable feeling among the Sage Bar solons that these laws could not be applied with propriety to women, and so they talked much, smoked, and drank much more and did nothing.

When the Hines party came in, tired, hungry and empty handed, no solution of the difficulty presented itself, and so with admirable judgment the town decided to free itself of further responsibility by setting the woman at liberty. The easterner's wife was pale and evidently worn out when they brought her out of the cabin; but she said not a word when they told her she might go and walked off in the direction of her home with a smile, half of defiance, half of satisfaction. That night the party which had gone in pursuit of Craig returned, having made a fruitless search.

Two days later, just as Sage Bar was preparing its evening meal, two men were seen riding over a swell from the northeast. Five horses were driven loosely before them. When the men got nearer the town one of them was recognized as the easterner. He was riding bareheaded, and beside him rode another, dark and swarthy, his arms bound to his sides, his horse led by Craig. All Sage Bar assembled about the party, while Craig told the story of how he had ridden away that night, had struck the trail of the horses, and following it had brought the Mexican thief to terms with a shot from his rifle, and then came back. And when he had done there were cheers for the easterner such as the town hadn't had a chance to relieve itself of for a long while, and to this day there is not a man in Sage Bar but touches his slouch hat to the easterner's wife, whom Jo Stetson declares is "th' sandiest little woman in the west!"—Kansas City Times.

Getting Something Like It.

The following little experience, recently enjoyed by a well known tenor, seems worthy of narration. Having mislaid his copy of Handel's air, "Where'er You Walk," the artist in question sent a faithful but unmusical servant to procure a copy of the song. In due course the messenger reappeared, bearing in place of the required piece a certain music hall ditty entitled, "I Like a Little Toddle Down Regent Street"—not by Handel.

He had failed to secure the object of his quest and so, imagining that words of an ambulant tendency were the chief desideratum, had picked out what he thought to be "the nearest thing." The story certainly seems to require a grain of salt for its due assimilation, but it must be borne in mind that truth is stranger than fiction.—Sheffield Telegraph.

The Irish potato season, which has just ended, has been the most profitable one on the eastern shore for years past. The shipment has been larger, and the prices have been and are yet the very top of the market. During the past three weeks over 2,500 carloads of potatoes have passed over the peninsula. One day's shipments from Cape Charles alone amounted to between 8,000 and 9,000 barrels or 50 carloads. The sweet potato season will be in full blast in a few weeks.—Richmond Times.

The Comet's Engagements.

Isn't it lucky that the comet has changed its course?

No doubt you know that the little blazing thing has been the direct cause of hundreds and hundreds of engagements, and what summer girl likes the prospect of devoting the whole of lovely August and September and golden October to one solitary man?

Somehow or other looking at the stars makes love making men dreadfully serious. All you have to do is to stand one of him on a back porch with an opera glass and a girl, and he'll never dream that wedded life is shadowed by such things as grocery bills and ice men.

"Let's go look at the comet!" Marie would exclaim every time she had a caller to entertain. There's the very loveliest place upon our roof!—and away she'd fly, followed by the unsuspecting visitor.

Sometimes the visitor thought it rather strange that the roof was covered with a nice rug and that little divans seemed plentiful, but he never said anything. He just looked wise and put all his athletic strength into helping a burrhead and belated little figure to clamber up steep ladders. When the figure got to the top she was sure that she could never get down again, and if she wandered within 10 feet of the edge of the roof she clutched desperately at a coat lapel, and then he always had to locate the comet for her—but of course you understand.

So of course it is a good thing that the comet finally went away. — Chicago News-Record.

An Indian Owns the Town.

Bonner's Ferry is puzzled. The citizens don't know whether they are at home or on Indian land. Until a few days ago they were not worried about Indian claims, but at present these form a very lively topic for discussion.

The trouble was started by the announcement that the government had allotted 10 tracts of land to the heirs of old Dick Fry, the pioneer settler at the ferry, who married a squaw. The 10 allotments aggregate 680 acres, and one tract of 40 acres, claimed by Arthur Fry, includes the original town site. This has been indifferently known as Fry's post-office and Bonner's Ferry. It includes the hotel, the postoffice, a number of stores and many residences. Altogether it is claimed to be the most valuable part of the town site.

The people of Bonner's Ferry do not know what to do. Some of them think the title can be overthrown. Others are inclined to think the Indian's title indefensible and attempt a compromise. The fact that if this title is sound he will not be able to dispose of the land for a quarter of a century adds perplexity to the case, although attorneys say there may be ways to remove that difficulty.—Spokane Chronicle.

Attack on Missionary Work.

American missionaries have been in trouble of late in Turkey, China and Japan. The Japan Herald makes the bitter charge that the "native Christian pastors have no scruples about appropriating the property of other people," and goes on to say that "it is well the charitable, although misguided, enthusiasts in America and Europe who furnish the funds for the support of missionaries in China and Japan should know what has occurred." The Mail goes into specifications of its accusations of gross dishonesty.

As to the brutal assault by Turks upon Miss Anna Melton, a Presbyterian missionary in Amadia, the facts of which have been printed, the Presbyterian board of foreign missions and the state department of the United States are exchanging communications, but it is not unlikely that the diplomatic abyss of Constantinople will bury the whole topic.

A New Yorker in China.

Mr. William Pethick, United States vice consul, for many years a confidential adviser to H. E. Li Hung Chang, has resigned his position of manager of the railway and after 27 years of continuous residence in China is going home. His thorough acquaintance with the Chinese language, his indefatigably studious habits, his almost unequalled opportunities of observation and knowledge, give a weight to what he says about China which would not belong probably to 10 others in the empire. It is well known that he has prepared a compendious work on the life of his great patron Li, and it is hoped that the work may soon be published.—China Mail.

An Excuse For Fighting.

Joseph Chamberlain, in the speech he was not permitted to deliver, got as far as to liken Gladstone to Herod. He was on the verge of likening the home rulers to the innocents. At that point their indignation became insupportable. The fist fight which followed was a healthier and manlier recourse than the reduction of expression to a science of insult within the elastic limits of parliamentary permissibility. It is better to call a man a liar and have him to hit you in the nose than it is to declare that he is the lineal descendant of the impudent thief who died on the cross and for him to retort that you are a blank leaf between the Old and New Testaments.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Life Guns For Firemen.

Had the fire department been equipped with apparatus for throwing ropes to great heights or distances, such as are carried by all life saving stations, many lives could have been saved from the flames at the cold storage fire. Every man who escaped alive did so by a flimsy rope. With a proper gun or cannon a rope or numbers of them could have been shot up over the tower and made fast by the imprisoned men. The ropes ran be rendered noncombustible. No new or expensive machinery would be required. At the life saving station at Jackson park could have been found huge guns with endless coils of lifeline attached. The guns fire a heavy spear, which carries the lifeline out to wrecks, helpless boats and drowning men. Twenty such lifelines could have been fired up and over the burning tower. Every shot of the gun would have saved the life of a brave fireman.

With the high buildings in the business center such apparatus would be most valuable and could be carried on every hose cart. Individuals imprisoned in the tenth story, cut off from all escape, could be saved. A lance could be shot into the window and the rope made fast. Nothing would be easier. If the gun, the lance and the rope are good to save lives at sea, why not use fireproof ropes to save men from death by fire?—Chicago Globe.

Spoiling the Administration Building.

The beauty of the Administration building rotunda is being marred slowly but surely. First came a guidebook stand; then cigar and tobacco showcases obtained a footing, and last, but not least, is the alleged model of the treasury building at Washington, which is being constructed of pine, blue cheese cloth and Columbian half dollars.

The wooden base on which the coins are being glued is extremely inartistic itself, but the man who made it evidently failed to take into consideration the size of the half dollars, and the coins are being cut into all sorts of shapes and de-faced in every conceivable manner to make them fit and hide the lumber.

There are 340 windows in the thing, and each window represents at least five mutilated coins, entailing a loss of $1,700. To make all the edges and corners of the porticoes, verandas and cornices straight will necessitate the spoiling of 2,000 more coins.

The whole thing, from the coarse iron fence to the tin window frames, is an eyesore, and none is quicker to recognize this fact than the visitors from the country, for whose delectation the thing is being built.—Chicago Tribune.

Reunited After Twenty-one Years.

After a separation lasting 21 years, John H. Morrison and his wife have been reunited. In 1865 Squire Morrison wedded Miss Fry in York county and five years later came here to reside. He remained here for two years, and, meeting business reverses, went west, leaving his wife and four daughters here, and nothing was heard of him until last March, when an advertisement for a wife appeared in a Harrisburg paper signed John H. Morrison. It was seen by one of his daughters. She answered it.

Morrison received 617 answers to his advertisement, but replied only to the one written by his daughter. In the correspondence that followed their relationship was disclosed, and when he learned his wife was still living he made arrangements to take her to his western home. A letter received states that they recognized each other on sight at the railway station in Oklahoma.—Lancaster Cor. Philadelphia Record.

Effect of a Sentimental Song.

Mr. Whitebread is a tinsmith in Weaverville. His wife's name is Ann, and Ann and the tinsmith have never got along very well together. Mrs. Martin and Mrs. Whitebread, so the story goes, became quite chummy. There was a piano in the tinsmith's house, and Mrs. Martin was in the habit of playing "The Old Oaken Bucket." The man of soldier rather liked it at first. But when Mrs. Martin continued to thrum out the same tune day after day it got kind of tiresome. He remonstrated with Ann, but the wife told him to mind his pots and kettles and not to meddle with music.

One day the tinsmith lost all patience and went up stairs, and after dancing a jig on the keys wound up by smashing the instrument all to pieces, ending the performance by remarking, "To — with your 'Old Oaken Bucket.'"—San Francisco Examiner.

Bad Boys at Asbury.

What bad boys there are at Asbury! The summer boy here is a little demon in human form who goes in bathing with all his clothes on and keeps his mother and his various nurses at high concert pitch all the time. This is owing to the absence of the paternal presence during the week. Feminine correction means nothing to an American boy, and that's all they get down here, for you can't very well take your eldest hopeful one side and administer a corrective spanking with a whole hotel full of guests ready to declare you inhuman for so doing.—Cor. New York Herald.

Advice For Hot Weather.

Always carry an umbrella! If it rains, there you are, don't you know, and if the sun comes out and you are idiotic enough to be out in it, protect what head you have with intervening shade. How many sunstrokes have been saved in my particular case by the intervention of my parachute friend it would be difficult to determine.—Howard in New York Recorder.

For a mosquito bite, or for any stinging of insect or small eruption, there is nothing better than the old fashioned remedy of our mothers, soda mixed with vinegar until it foams well.

Saved Her Life.

Mrs. C. J. WOODBRIDGE, of Waltham, Mass., writes: "My child, a year and a half old, was seized with a severe case of Croup. The case was attended by my physician, and was supposed to be well under control. One night I was startled by the child's hard breathing, and on going to it found it struggling. It had nearly ceased to breathe. Realizing that the child's alarming condition had become possible in spite of the medicines given, I reasoned that such remedies would be of no avail. Having part of a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in the house, I gave the child three doses, at short intervals, and anxiously waited results. From the moment the Pectoral was given, the child's breathing grew easier, and, in a short time, she was sleeping quietly and breathing naturally. The child is alive and well today, and I do not hesitate to say that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral saved her life."

QUARTET OF MILK THIEVES.

IMPORTANT CAPTURE MADE BY THE NEWTON POLICE.

The Newton police captured four milk thieves early Tuesday morning. They drove through West Newton about 1.30 o'clock and acted in such a suspicious manner that their movements were watched closely.

At Gate's stable they stopped and inquired about the roads leading to Cambridge. Patrolman J. J. Davis gave them the necessary information, and was much surprised to see the wagon a moment later going in an opposite direction from Cambridge at a pretty rapid pace.
He then gave chase and notified Sergt.
Huestis of police headquarters, who came immediately to his assistance.

The officers followed the wagon as closely as possible, and finally heard it stop. About five minutes later its occupants decided to come back and take the Cambridge road. They were suddenly confronted by the officers, and the wagon brought to a standstill.

Only two men were visible at the time, those on the wagon seat. These two fellows were unable to give a satisfactory account of themselves, and were, therefore, taken into the police station.
They continued to make conflicting statements and were finally confined in a cell.

Officer Davis then went to search for the wagon, and discovered that two men had secreted themselves in the bottom of the cart, lying full length on top of the rows of milk cans. When they saw the officer both jumped out. One of them he captured and the other got away. He was arrested about twenty minutes later in Newtville by Officer Soule.

The four men were booked as follows:
John J. Coskery, Maurice Coskery,
Matthew Riley and M. J. Anthrim, alias Thomas Anglin. The latter two have done time, and were photographed for the city marshal's gallery of rogues and hard characters.

The quartet stole 35 eight quart and 25 two-quart cans of milk. Of the 21 were taken from the Lawrence farm, Lexington, and nine from F. J. Hoff's place, Waltham.

In the police court the four men were arraigned and held in the sum of $500 each for the grand jury.
The Waltham police have warrants out for the men, and will bring them in to court there on the serious charge of breaking and entering.

I have been a great sufferer from catarrh for over ten years; had it very bad, could hardly breathe. Some nights I could not sleep and had to walk the floor. I purchased Ely's Cream Balm and am using it freely. It is working a cure surely. I have advised several friends to use it, and with happy results in every case. It is the medicine above all others for catarrh, and it is worth its weight in gold. I thank God I have found a remedy I can use with safety and that does all that is claimed for it. It is curing my deafness.—B. W.

SHADY NOOK FARM.

LAKE WINNEPESAUKEE.

Newfield, Me., Aug. 26.
This part of the country has experienced a drought during the summer, which has been exceedingly severe, more so than for several years past.

This was broken some ten days ago and since then rain has come in abundantly.

Now and then there would be a few hours of sunlight, but it would not last and the clouds would shut down again with more rain.

I had planned taking a short trip to Lake Winnepesaukee, thence on by boat to Alton Bay, which is noted for the yearly camp meeting gatherings of the Advent denomination.

Having made satisfactory arrangements I waited for a favorable day, and on Friday, the twenty-fifth, my patience was rewarded.

I found a clear, beautiful morning, the air pure and bracing and the dust well laid from the recent rains.

The railroad station is four and a half miles away and a stage runs daily with the mails and for the accommodation of passengers.

So having an early breakfast I was soon en route for the lake.

The stage driver who is an old hand at the business amused me with many stories and anecdotes of his long service in this line during our drive to the station.

Presently the mountain train bound for the Hub came along and getting on board I was at Wolfboro Junction where cars were changed for Wolfboro and the Mount Washington's wharf.

I had an hour to wait here before the steamer's arrival so amused myself by walking about the town.

This is the former home of Mr. Brewster, the well known Boston banker, recently deceased.

He set a good example and lasting memorial for himself by giving a sufficient sum for a handsome public building and also bequeathed money to found the Brewster Academy.

The first building of this new training school, a handsome one of brick, has recently been finished and now others are planned by the board of trustees.

The tuition is free and with a nominal price for board enaled many a poor but ambitious student to continue in his or her efforts for an education and better fit themselves for life's work in the future.

Near by is situated the Kingswood Inn, formerly the Pavilion which is the largest hotel in the place.

On my way back I stopped here to make some inquiries and entered into conversation with the clerk who proved to be a college student.

He, like many others, was working his way through college by his own efforts and had secured this pleasant as well as profitable position during the summer months.

Thanking him for the information I continued my walk to the wharf where prettily the steamer Mount Washington came on its way to Alton Bay.

Going on board I was greeted by Capt.
Wiggins and invited up into the pilot house where a fine view of the lake and shore was obtained.

Before reaching the Bay I decided to continue on around the lake returning later in the afternoon.

Presently the wharf is reached and we are off again for the round trip.

We pass by many pretty little wooded islands, while here and there a choice bit of landscape is seen to please the eye.

Fine residences and hotels are being built along the shore, which will probably be entirely covered in time.

A stop is made at Wolfboro again and then on to Long Island and Center Harbor.

Near the lake, and connected by a plank walk is the new and handsome Seifer House, which was built some years ago, to replace the old one destroyed by fire.

Other hotels and boarding houses are near by while back on the hills over the line in Meredith is the handsome summer residence of R. H. Clouston, Esq., well known in the Garden City.

This part of the country was at one time the favorite resort of the poet, Whittier, and the Whittier Pine is one of the objects of interest to see.

From here we continue on to The Weirs, noted for its camp meetings, and other annual gatherings, and then are off on the return trip. The water is as smooth as glass, untroubled save by the passage of the steamer, while in the broadest parts, land is scarcely discernable. We are enjoying the beautiful passing panorama, when at a certain point near Long Island, notice is given out that a view of the White Mountains can be had.

This proves correct and presently a magnificent view of Mount Washington and several peaks of the Presidential range are seen, through a break in the hills, rising over and far back of the low ledges of Mount Pausus.

Before the summer heat and in the late autumn, snow is seen on the higher peaks, while at these times glitter in the sunlight. With all the birds view during the summer the finest is in the autumn season after the foliage begins to change on the hill and mountain sides and in the valleys.

The firs, spruces and other trees of a similar nature retain their green, while the rest change to red and yellow, giving variety to the landscape coloring.

As we approach Alton Bay a crowd can be discerned on the wharf awaiting our arrival and soon we are on terra firma again.

The camp meeting grounds are situated on the side of a hill extending back from the wharf at railroad station, which is the terminus of the Boston &
Main and Lake Shore lines.

This latter road has opened up the southern side of the lake, which is becoming rapidly built upon, the houses being of a neat but inexpensive kind.

On the opposite shore is the fine estate of ex-Alderman Kelly of Boston, and his friend, Mr. Fitten.

These two gentlemen have beautified their summer home and are making other improvements yearly. A fine boat house has been built where a steam launch is kept, and a broad path leads up to the house on the hill beyond.

The steam launch is the popular boat here and several are owned by clubs and private parties.

Sunday is the last day of the meeting and I find the hotel and boarding houses well filled with those coming to the closing exercises. I am able to select a room in one of the large wooden buildings or tents, as they call them, on the square. This is of rough construction, wooden partitions between the rooms, and furniture consisting of a hanging table nailed to the wall, a few chairs and bedstead. The toilet facilities are not of the best or most expensive, consisting of a tin wash basin and water pitcher on a wooden shelf in a corner.

There is a small looking glass and a bracket lamp on the wall, and these with the bed complete the furnishings of the room.

The large square is surrounded by pretty little cottages, and from here extend the numerous streets and paths of the grounds.

A short distance west from the square is the tabernacle where the large meetings are held, and near the speakers stand is the house of some friends.

Here I am cordially greeted and invited to rest on the piazza, the shade of the grove being a pleasant contrast to the heat of the square beyond.

People are gathering for the evening meeting and soon the large square is filled with a sea of faces.

The speaker's stand also fills with the more prominent elders and clergy of the denomination and at six o'clock the meeting is opened by song.

This is followed by several notices and then the speaker, who proves to be a lady, is announced.

She gives a long but powerful sermon, which is listened to with interest by the vast throng under the trees.

Before she finishes, the evening shadows gather and the lamps are lighted.

The exercises close with the impressive service used to welcome a new worker to the ranks, and consists of prayer, the words of welcome and the charge. Where I sit the rays from the lantern shine on the young minister's strong intellectual face, which has a look of power and determination to do good work in his chosen calling. The whole scene impresses one strongly from the eager faces of the audience to those gathered around the young man on the stand. This tabernacle for the worship of God has nothing but nature's handiwork for its decoration.

The earth is the floor, the blue heaven the roof and unmeasured space the boundaries.

It is a fitting place for religious worship with all these beautiful works of God's hand and is a proof of the existence of God. The meeting is concluded by a hymn of praise and then the audience slowly disperses, some to their homes, while others attend the various small prayer meetings held in the tents.

A large number go down to see the last train come in and then walk on to the store and post office for the evening mail. The hotel is near by where music and singing is being enjoyed by an audience of all ages.

The hour is late, quiet reigns, and the grounds are deserted. In the morning we are awakened by the bustle and busy life about the store and café near by.

Later, breakfast is served in a sort of picnic go as you please, first come, first served fashion. The food is placed on the table and each one helps himself.

Spoons are pester, knives and forks steel, and napkins are conspicuous by their absence. For the price of twenty-five cents, however, it is all very good, and makes a pleasant change and variety from home customs.

I took the first boat back to Wolfboro where a stop of several hours was necessary.

These were passed in walking about the town, and at the proper time I took the train back to Wolfboro Junction on to East Wakefield station and home, having had an enjoyable trip.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful.
It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure.

—Fred Hovey's defeat at Newport this week by Wrenn who has very seldom if ever beaten him before, was a very disagreeable surprise to all the former's friends. The only question in the minds of those who know Fred's play was his contest with Hovey who almost always defeat him and when Hovey vanquished Hovey the idea of Wrenn winning the championship was not seriously considered. When one stops to think of Hovey's achievements on the Newport courts during the past four years, it shows a remarkable career for so short a period. In 1890 at Hovey's first appearance he was the winner of the consolation prize. In 1891 he won all comers and in 1892 was the runner up, playing against Campbell the world's champion. This year he was again the runner up in the Newport tournament.

Noble, the cane is now on exhibition in the window of his drug store. The contest will be continued during the Labor Day festival, which will be held in Association hall, on Monday, September 4, afternoon and evening, and the result of the contest will be announced during the evening festivities. Vote early and often for your favorite. Ten cents pays for one vote. The proceeds will be added to the building fund of the Church of the Sacred Heart.

M., the hall will be opened again and the evening festivities for adults only will begin with instrumental selections by Rand's orchestra, who will furnish music till the close of the festival. Peck of the street department, are the competitors for this valuable trophy. —Rev. Dr. Hooker, wife and daughter, formerly of the Highlands, were on board the wrecked steamer, City of Savannah, on their way to Winter Park, Fla. They were saved on the life raft. Dr. Hooker's mind became unbalanced, but it is hoped that it may be only temporary.

NEWTON SCHOOL BOARD.

SEVERAL RESIGNATIONS OF TEACHERS AND NEW APPOINTMENTS CONFIRMED.

A special meeting of the school board was called for Wednesday evening to arrange necessary matters before the opening of the schools next week. The mayor presided over the meeting, and a quorum were present, including Messrs. Hollis, Ward, Mason, Smith, Ober, Bond, Hale and Mrs. Martin.

A communication from the city council informed the board of the addition to the school appropriation of the dog tax, amounting to $2645.18.

The following resignations were received and accepted: Leila A. Denol, of the Hyde school; Nora Taft, as assistant at the Pierce school; Ella M. Hersey, as assistant at the Eliot school. Nominations of teachers were confirmed as follows: Julie E. Young as kindergarten teacher in the Hamilton school at a salary of $500 per annum; Sybilla A. Pfaffman, as assistant in the High school, at a salary of $800; Mary W. Holden, as assistant in the Hyde school, at a salary of $620; Lucy M. Morrill, as assistant at the Prospect school, at a salary of $620; Lillie A. Cobb, as teacher of kindergarten at the Franklin school, at a salary of $500; Minnie A. Nickerson, as teacher of kindergarten at the Underwood school, at a salary of $500.

Mr. J. Edward Hollis presented the resignation of Mr. George G. Edwards, master of the Eliot school, which was accepted without remark, notwithstanding the hope expressed by a large number of residents of the Nonantum district that his services would be retained.

EVENING SCHOOLS.

The report of the superintendent dealt mainly with the question of evening schools. Evening school instruction of two varieties was required in cities of more than 10,000 inhabitants. One of these must be for the study of arithmetic, geography, grammar and kindred studies, and the other was for industrial and mechanical drawings. The Prospect and Jackson schools were used for these schools last year and three teachers had to be employed, but the success of the schools might be increased by the employment of better rooms, furniture and material for study. It was a mistake to take an evening school to be successfully conducted with poor accommodations and second hand books, when the opposite was the fact. He believed better results could be obtained by establishing one of the schools in the old Clafin building at Newtonville, and changing that in the Nonantum district to the Eliot school building. By this change the city would receive a more adequate return for the appropriation made each year.

The report was adopted.

Mr. Bond made his regular report for the committee on finance, which was accepted.

An order was passed appropriating the sum of $10,761.40, for department expenses during the months of July and August.

An order changing the evening schools from the Prospect and Jackson buildings to the Clafin and Eliot buildings was passed.

THE WADE SCHOOL.

Mr. Hale presented a petition signed by John A. Gould, George Pettee, Otis Pettee and upwards of fifty prominent citizens of Newton Upper Falls, requesting that the name of the present Prospect school be changed to the Wade school in honor of its first master, the late Hon. Levi C. Wade.

The petition was received and a hearing ordered for Wednesday evening, Sept. 27, at 8 o'clock.

The board then adjourned.

PICNIC OF ST. JOHN'S PARISH.

GREAT VARIETY OF SPORTS ATTRACTED A LARGE ATTENDANCE.

No more fitting description can be given of the scene Monday on the lawn surrounding St. John's Catholic church than that presented to the readers of Goldsmith, when he paints the former glories of his deserted village. All day, within the shadow of the church, the parishioners enjoyed themselves, together with their friends from the surrounding churches in the Newtons, Naick, Wellesley, etc.

The occasion was the second annual picnic of St. John's parish.

Rev. P. H. Callahan, the pastor, assisted by the men of his congregation, had expended much untiring energy in preparing for the day, and the result amply rewarded his devotion. As early as 11 o'clock a. m. the throng began to gather, and by high noon every booth and side show was doing a big business. One of the features of the day was a wood-sawing contest, in which there were three competitors, James Delaney proving the winner by sawing one foot of wood in nineteen minutes.

A novel feature was the prize declamation in the open air. This was open for boys and girls from any parish. There were seven competitors, each of whom reached a high standard. The gold medal was awarded to Miss Margie McLoughlin, who read "The Village Cornet Band." The other contestants were Annie Keely, Margaret Sullivan, M. J. Spillane, Bridget McGrath, Eva McKay and Julia McLean.

The judges were Rev. John F. Broderick of Foxboro and Principal Bernard M. Sheridan of the South Dennis high school.

The St. John's light infantry band of twenty-eight pieces and an orchestra furnished concert and dance music at intervals during the day.

The names of the winners follow: 100-yard dash, for girls, Agnes Donlon; for boys, John McDonald; for girls under 11 years, Grace Cunningham; for boys under 10 years, Fred King.

Jumping rope, 100 yards, Grace Cunningham.

Boys' sack race, William Madden.

Boys' potato race, William Madden.

Girls' potato race, Villa Coulter first and Louisa Richard, second.

Standing broad jump, with and without weights, A. D. Mills.

Three standing broad jumps, Martin Dorsey.

Running broad jump, William Pendergast.

Standing high jump, A. D. Mills.

Backward jump, Edward Dorsey.

Putting 16-pound shot, Martin Dorsey.

Throwing 50-pound hammer, Martin Dorsey.

Half-mile bicycle race, Ernest Keenan.

Pole vault, Fred Kimball.

100-yard dash, Robert Smith.

Walking match, William Hayes.

Wheelbarrow race, John Pendergast.

Catching greased pig and game rooster, James Pendergast.

The prizes were distributed early in the evening. They were all very useful and several were very costly.

A STORM AT SEA—FROM LAND.

Like slouthbonds loosed upon their prey,
The greedy waves devour the land;
To angry surf is changed the spray;
Foam-covered is the sloping sand.

Like armies marching seems the sea,
Their tents the white caps, far and wide;
Or like vast mountain, wild and free,
The billows rise on every side.

O home of navies! resting-place
Of gallant ships and valiant men;
We greet thee, Ocean, face to face,
And sing thy praise with tongue and pen.

SHADY NOOK FARM.

THE COACHING PARADE.

Newfield, Me., Aug. 21, '93.

"Red and White, Red and White, we're from Shady Nook, we're all right." This call has been given many times today in answer to others while a final one was given on the piazza of Shady Nook cote in the evening, awaking the echoes among the dark hills and valleys surrounding us.

A large yellow poster had been seen around of late in the stores, depot and on the trees announcing that the East Side Coaching Parade would be held at North Conway on Thursday the thirty first of August.

Special excursion trains would be run, so the poster read, from all directions, with tickets at reduced rates.

This was talked over at the farm and we decided to make up a party to take in this annual show.

The morning was clear and cool, just the day for this kind of an outing, so having an early breakfast, we were off in ample season for the train.

Our party consisted of twelve ladies, another gentleman and myself, we being in the minority and fully realizing the responsibility resting on our shoulders. We started for the depot with three teams, and as we rode along others joined us from the cross roads.

Some one remarked that here was a parade of our own and that if we had time it would be well to keep on to North Conway.

This with many other jokes made the ride seem short until presently the depot was reached in ample time for the train.

There was quite a crowd gathered on the platform and as we drove up I saw among them some friends from the town. I was greeted with a pleasant good morning by our minister and his wife, the former and myself having become good friends over the chess board.

He wished to know if I wanted to get beaten some evening soon and I replied that I would be ready to defeat him any time that suited his convenience.

This rivalry of words created a laugh and as a train is heard approaching, we all start for the front platform.

This proves to be a false alarm as it is the express from Wolfboro Junction, but soon another is seen, which stops and getting on board we are off again toward our destination.

The train which consists of ten or a dozen cars moves slowly stopping at each station for its load of passengers, until on the arrival at North Conway, it is packed with people.

I got out with the rest of our party, but soon leave them and walk on to the Kearsarge House.

This is the largest hotel in the place, and accommodates some three hundred guests.

Following the plank walk which leads from the depot to the hotel, I enter the large, roomy office.

Off this is the parlor, dining room and private office.

Here Mr. Ricker, the proprietor, greets me pleasantly and while we are talking, a friend comes up, who invites me to dine with him after the parade.

We go out on the front piazza and join the crowd, which is packed in so tight as to make it hard work getting through to the other side.

The hotel sets a little back from the street and is connected by a circular drive-way.

To the left of the entrance is the judge's stand, and a little beyond, the reporters, where I see the familiar face of our old friend and former townsman, Mr. H. M. Bart, who is getting material for his paper, "Among the Clouds," printed on top of Mount Washington during the summer.

His son is also there with his family, on their way home from the World's Fair, and later I see Miss Beecher of Newtonville in the judge's stand, and have a pleasant chat with her.

The day could not have been better, if made to order, the sky an intense blue with here and there a few fleecy clouds, the air cool and bracing and the roads in the best condition after the recent rains.

North Conway is a pretty place with its fine views and rides.

From the piazzas of the Kearsarge, in the immediate vicinity, can be seen Kearsarge, Mount Middlebury and many other small mountains, while in the distance against the horizon looms up majestic Washington and the other mountains of the Presidential range.

To day the house on the summit can be readily seen with the naked eye, while with a glass one can make out its size and shape.

There is also a house on Mount Kearsarge built to replace a former one blown down some years ago.

The drives are numerous and very pleasant, the most important being to Intervale, Jackson, Conway, Diana's Bath, Artists Falls, White Horse Ledges, Cathedral Rock, Devil's Den and Echo Lake.

There are two railroad lines, the Boston & Maine, and Maine Central making the town easy of access to the traveler.

The town looks gay to-day with its hotels and boarding houses decorated with colored bunting and flags.

There is a big crowd on the hotel piazza, steps, and on the lawn and sidewalk beyond, while hawkers are numerous, and boys selling candy and peanuts.

From where I stand I have a fine view of the main street for some distance each way beyond the hotel.

The parade is nearly an hour late, but at last it comes in sight up the road, and turning into the drive-way goes slowly past the hotel. Mrs. Mauran, well-known to theatre as Mrs. Harry Bloodgood, who owns a fine place near here, announces each coach and team as they pass, from her place on horse back under the judge's stand.

I will mention only the principal turn-outs as the daily papers have a full account of the whole parade. The different teams and coaches as they pass in order, were as follows. First came General Wentworth of Wentworth Hall, Jackson, the marshal of the day, followed by lady and gentleman aids and a band.

Then the Intervale coach, undecorated, the ladies dressed in white with white sunshades, the Sunset Pavilion coach, which was one mass of gold and red poppies from the wheels to the foot board and rails, the ladies dressed in pale blue.

The next was the Ridge tally ho, draped in the American flag and the house colors, the ladies costumes being of the Continental style.

The Wentworth Hall coach was festooned with red and white roses caught up here and there with red ribbon bows, ladies in white with red roses.

This was followed by the Bellevue coach undecorated, and a band of boys, who gave excellent music. The North Conway coach was decorated in pink and white, the ladies dresses being of the same colors. The Kearsarge Tally-ho was in the Louis XIV style, with costumed footman, the McMillan coach, white and yellow, and the Maplewood Cottage coach, silver with pink chrysanthemums, yellow ribbon and pink roses.

The Fabyan House coach was resplendent in green and gold while the top was filled with gayly dressed children.

But these I have mentioned are only a few of the many artistically adorned, which completed the gay procession.

Two or three small village carts decorated and driven by children, were cute and pretty, and helped to fill up the line. From here the parade went on through the town to Intervale and back by the way of Kearsarge village.

We had to wait over an hour for their return when they would pass the stand again and those entitled to prizes would receive them.

During this time my friend and I had our dinner, which was an excellent one as it might well be for the price of one dollar and a half per plate to those stopping at the hotel for the day only.

Afterward I met some acquaintances, who were there either for the summer or the day, and was much amused by several characters. One in particular was a typical representative of the western Yankee, who had made his pile in the mines, or by the rise of price in western real estate.

He was dressed well in black broadcloth, white vest and necktie and black slouch hat, but this did not quite eliminate the roughness of face, seamed and wrinkled by the former years of hardship and toil.

His hair and whiskers, the latter worn in the Yankee Doodle style, were light in color and slightly grey, his whole appearance reminding one of such characters as Crane in the Senator, and Raymond in the Almighty Dollar. I was fortunate enough to get a place on the stand when the parade returned and drove by the hotel again.

Hon. John B. Nash of Conway awarded the prizes, after making a short speech, to each team or coach as they passed.

The prizes were handsome banners of silk and gold, and the principal ones were awarded to the Intervale, Kearsarge, Bellevue, Fabyan and Maplewood coaches. Besides these a few smaller prizes of whips, horns and umbrellas and cane baskets were given.

Two pictures were the prizes for the best decorated houses and were awarded to the Clarendon and Centre Villa, both near the Kearsarge House.

After this the crowd dispersed, some to see the game of base ball between the Wentworth Hall and Intervale teams while others drove around town or took the early trains home. As our train did not start till 1 P. M. I went down to call on Sam Thompson, well known as the former proprietor of the Kearsarge.

On the way I met his father, a man of eighty-five, but hale and hearty.

He built up the Kearsarge from a small country tavern of years ago, before this region became popular, to its present size. His son, Sam, after leaving the Kearsarge was manager of the Pemberton at Hull, for some years, and is now the proprietor of the Elms where he is meeting with good success.

He was in front of the house holding his saddle horse, which had been in the parade and was mad clean through as his man had gone off with his best girl and taken the key of the stable with him.

When I left, Brother Thompson was still holding the horse, but I hope he was soon relieved by the appearance of the much desired hired man.

I went down to see the ball game for a short time, and then returned to the station. On the way I passed numerous booths where lunch and drinks were served to the crowd not caring to patronize the hotels.

I noticed a very pretty rustic building on the main street, which had been erected for the sale of confectionery and fancy articles.

It was built of logs with the bark still on, while pieces of bark were nailed on roof, steps and doors.

Soon we were on the train again, and arriving at East Wakefield, took our teams from the stable, where they had been kept, and were off for home.

The roads were dark but we arrived safely in time for a late supper, and with the satisfied feeling that as "We're from Shady Nook, we're all right."

We were a tired, happy crowd, but voted the day's outing a grand success.

FRANK DUNLAP FIDBIE.

The following from the New York Recorder will be understood by all who have seen the Massachusetts congressman and the well known humorist:—

"Hello, Bill! How in the world did you get on to the floor?" exclaimed Amos Cummings to a tall, slender individual, with a pretentiously solemn visage and a head as smooth as a baby's, who was strolling leisurely down one of the aisles of the House. "My name is not 'Bill,' this person accented replied with a great assumption of dignity, "and nobody ever had a better right to the floor." "Well, if you're not Bill Nye you look enough like him to be his brother," retorted Amos, slightly taken aback. "My name is McCall," said the stranger, "and I represent the 8th Massachusetts district."

"Oh, come on, Jones; have a drink with me." "Can't, old fellow; haven't had dinner yet." "Well, come and have an appetizer." Appetizer! Great Scott! Since the bottom dropped out of the street, I can't feed the appetite I have. Do you want to ruin me?"—New York Recorder.

Clara: "See, dear, a diamond; I don't believe any other girl was ever half so happy over an engagement ring."

Madge: "Pooh, darling, I was just as foolish when Charlie gave that same ring to me."

THE LITTLE BROWN WREN.

There's a little brown wren that has built in our tree,
And she's scarcely as big as a big bumblebee.
She has hollowed a house in the heart of a limb
And made the walls tidy and made the door trim
With the down of the crow's foot, with tow
And with straw.

The coolest dwelling that ever you saw.
This little brown wren has the brightest of eyes
And a foot of a very diminutive size.
Her tail is as trim as the sail of a ship.
She's demure, though she walks with a hop
And a skip,
And her voice—but a flute were more fit than a pen
To tell of the voice of the little brown wren.

One morning Sir Sparrow came sauntering by
And cast on the wren's house an envious eye.
With a strut of bravado and toss of his head,
"I'll put in my claim here," the bold fellow said.

So straightway he mounted on impudent wing
And entered the door without pausing to ring.
An instant—and swiftly that feathery knight
All tumbled and tumbled, in terror took flight.
While there by the door on her favorite perch,
As neat as a lady just starting for church,
With this song on her lips, "He will not call again."

Unless he is asked," sat the little brown wren.

A LOVERS' QUARREL.

Dick and I had quarreled and parted.
I cannot tell you how it all began, or why it ended in this serious fashion, but I can assure you I felt very miserable as I saw him striding away over the fields, although I had told him to go myself. Still I never thought he would have taken me at my word.

"What shall I say to Aunt Maria?" I thought as I turned my steps homeward. This was a very serious reflection indeed, for it had been the dream of Aunt Maria's existence to see me united to Dick Johnson, the handsome only son of our wealthy neighbor, Sir Henry.

Dick and I had played together as children, danced together, flirted together, and finally fell in love with each other.

We were to have been married in a month, and now I had sent him away and told him I never wished to see him again.

"What was to be done—and, oh dear! what should I say to Aunt Maria? There was no help for it, however, but to go home and explain the situation to the best of my ability, and accordingly home I went.

Aunt Maria was in the drawing room, and I stole softly in and took up a book, hoping that she would not notice me. But she saw me directly and inquired:

"Where is Dick?"

"He has gone home," I replied, trying to assume an unconcerned manner and failing most signally in the attempt.

"Gone home? Why? Did you not tell him I expected him to dinner?"

"Yes."

"Then why is he not coming?"

"He had an engagement," I mumbled. "For goodness' sake, child, speak out! Come here where I can see you. How red your face is! What is the matter?"

I rose obediently and stood before my aunt, who fixed a relentless gaze upon me.

"You have been crying," she said. "Now, just tell me the truth at once, Daisy. Have you and Dick quarreled?"

"Yes," I faltered.

"And what about, pray?"

"I don't know."

"You don't know!" This in a very sarcastic tone.

I remained silent and fumbled for my pocket handkerchief.

"Who began it?" pursued Aunt Maria sternly.

"I don't know."

"Have you broken off your engagement?"

"Yes," I burst forth. "I hate him, and I will never speak to him again." Then I began to weep copiously.

"If you're going to howl," said Aunt Maria, with bitter irony, "you had better leave the room. I shall require a full explanation tomorrow from both you and Mr. Johnson."

I fled up stairs and did not appear again that evening. I passed a wretched night and had a fearful scene with Aunt Maria the next morning. She stormed and expostulated, but I remained firm in my resolve to return Dick's ring and presents that very day.

Accordingly I spent a couple of hours in crying over them and packing them up.

After luncheon Aunt Maria announced her intention of visiting some pensioners of hers in a village about three miles distant and ordered me to accompany her, which I prepared to do with a very bad grace. I fear. We walked for about half an hour without exchanging a word, and a more thoroughly ill tempered pair of pedestrians could hardly have been found anywhere.

Our way led through some fields, and on reaching the first gate I noticed a man leaning against it. As we came up he opened it for us and politely raised his hat. He looked like a gentleman and was dressed in a well fitting suit of blue serge. I saw that he was a stranger and wondered where he came from, as strangers were rare in our secluded part of the world.

A little way further on I looked back and observed that he was following us.

He overtook us before we reached the next gate, passed us and opened this one also, again lifting his hat as we went by. I thought this rather odd, but having resolved not to speak to Aunt Maria until she addressed me I held my peace.

At the third gate the same performance was repeated, but this time the stranger did not fall behind. He walked to Aunt Maria's side and asked, "May I offer you my arm?"

"Certainly not, sir," was the indignant rejoinder. "I have not the honor of your acquaintance, nor do I desire it."

"At least you will permit me to carry your umbrella," continued the stranger unabashed. Aunt Maria merely snorted, and clutching her umbrella more firmly marched on at an increased pace.

"Is there no little service you will allow me to render you," pursued our unwelcome companion in tragic tones.

"Go away, sir!" said my aunt furiously.

ly. "We do not wish for your company. Your having spoken to us at all is a piece of the most unwarrantable impertinence."

"Do not drive me from you," was the reply. "I love you. I have loved you from the first moment I saw you. You are the only woman I have ever loved."

And with these words this most extraordinary individual threw himself on his knees right in Aunt Maria's path. At this point a light broke in upon me. There was a large private lunatic asylum in the neighborhood. This must surely be one of the patients who had eluded the vigilance of his keepers and escaped.

"He's mad," I whispered to Aunt Maria. "For goodness' sake humor him or he will murder us both. I have always heard they must be humored."

Aunt Maria, however, paid no attention, and I almost doubt if she even heard me.

"Let me pass, this instant, sir," she gasped, crimson with wrath.

"Never! never! till you promise to be mine."

At this point, I regret to say, my aunt lost her temper altogether, and raising her umbrella she brought it down on her suitor's head with such force that she quite crushed in the top of the bowl.

He hat he wore, and which fortunately protected his skull. For a moment he seemed petrified with astonishment. Then he sprang to his feet, and seizing Aunt Maria in his arms lifted her bodily from the ground and carried her along the path. She struggled violently, and I followed, screaming for help.

The lunatic strode on until he reached the gate which led into a field, on one side of which ran a rather high stone wall. Upon the top of this wall he placed my unfortunate aunt and then stood and calmly surveyed her.

"Take me down! Let me go!" she shrieked.

"Not till I have your promise to marry me," replied the lunatic. "I am quite prepared to remain here until tomorrow morning if need be," he added, with great coolness.

"Oh, aunt, do say 'Yes,'" I implored, but at this our persecutor turned upon me. "Will you have the goodness not to interfere?" he said, so fiercely that I was terrified and shrank back.

For about 10 minutes Aunt Maria sat on that wall and raved. Then she burst into tears. At this juncture I perceived a man's figure in the distance. Was he coming this way? Oh, joy, he was! As he drew nearer I saw to my mingled delight and dismay that it was Dick, and seeing that the lunatic had his back to me I ran to meet him.

"Oh, Dick," I shouted as I came up to him, "we have been so terribly frightened by a madman! He has put Aunt Maria on the wall and says she can't get down until she promises to marry him. Do come and save her!"

Dick ran quickly to the spot, and the lunatic turned and faced him.

"You rascal!" cried Dick. "Stand back and let me take that lady off the wall."

"You shall not touch her," said the lunatic fiercely.

Dick took him by the coat collar and flung him aside with such force that he stumbled and fell. The next instant Dick had lifted Aunt Maria safely to the ground. He had scarcely done so when the madman leaped upon him, and a terrific struggle followed. Suddenly I saw the lunatic place his hand in the breast of his coat, and the next instant there was a flash of steel. He had drawn a knife.

"Oh, Dick!—oh, my darling!" I screamed, "he will kill you!"

In that moment I forgot our quarrel. I forgot everything except that I loved him better than anything in the world, and that he was in peril of his life, and rushing forward I grasped the madman's arm and hung on to it with all my weight. Aunt Maria screamed lustily for help, and as I spun round with the combatants I caught sight of two men running across the field.

Aid was near, so I clinched my teeth and held on like grim death. In a few seconds it seemed like an eternity to me—the men were on the spot, and after a brief struggle the lunatic was secured and disarmed by the two keepers, who had been searching for him all day. As for me, the danger being over, I promptly fainted away. When I came to myself, Dick was kneeling beside me, supporting me in his arms.

"Are you all right?" he asked anxiously.

"Yes," I replied, with a smile, "I am quite well."

We all three walked home together, and Dick dined with us that evening.

Afterward, when I accompanied him into the hall to bid him good night, he asked as he held me in his arms, "Tell me, Daisy, would you have been sorry if that fellow had killed me today?"

"Don't talk about it, dearest," I answered, with a shudder. "It would have broken my heart."

"Then you cannot live without me after all?"

I leaned against his breast in silence, and he kissed me very tenderly.

Dick and I have never quarreled since, and I do not believe we shall ever quarrel again as long as we live.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

A MIST QUOTATION.

An attaché of a religious bookstore in this city has spent so many years of his life among theological volumes that he is Scriptural or nothing, but he sometimes evolves a misfit. When his attention was called the other day to a rose neatly attached to the lapel of his coat and an insinuation thrown out that a lady friend might have had something to do with it, he paralyzed the insinuator by saying, "No, sir; I gathered that rose from my own vine and fig tree."—Pittsburg Commercial-Gazette.

A Girl Battles With Rattles.

While we are telling snake stories the following good one comes to us from the mountain region, Mr. E. T. Dulin standing as authority: The country around Little Big Black Mountain is a ginseng region, and the Parker family are noted as "sengers." The girls go out barefooted in the mountains, though the country is infested with rattlesnakes and copperheads, and dig the ginseng, for which they get good prices at the stores, from which it is taken to Pennington gap for shipment.

But along Clover gap and up Rattlesnake creek there are numberless reptiles. Beckie Parker is a good girl, about 19 years of age, strong, healthy looking and handsome, but with a very determined face. She is a splendid shot and often takes her Winchester.

She goes after ginseng barefooted and often alone. The roots are gathered in May and September, and during the month just passed she did a thriving business. One day, however, she came across a den of rattlesnakes. She had only stones and sticks with which to fight the desperate battle. Some of the snakes were larger than a man's arm and a few of them as large as the calf of a man's leg. For hours she fought them as they hissed and writhed and rattled around her. But the brave, determined girl battled with them until she killed every one that did not succeed in hiding among the crevices of rocks and in the dense undergrowth. When she had crushed the last one to be seen, she counted the dead, and there were just 63.—Fredericksburg Star.

Fredericksburg Star.

The residents of Chester county had a man hunt the other day. The object of the hunt was Wesley Mitchell, a colored character, who had spread much terror among the Chester countians, and who is wanted by both the Delaware and Maryland authorities. The entire neighborhood turned out to hunt the would be murderer down, but Mitchell was too quick for them. He speedily scaled the tallest tree in the forest, and in spite of all the pursuers could do he sat there like a wild beast viewing the scene below.

Constable Strode of West Grove and Officer Grace of Kennett Square, the leaders of the band in pursuit of the assassin, concluded that Mitchell would come down if an attempt was made to dislodge him by felling the tree, but they were mistaken. The tall timber was completely cut down before Mitchell budged, and then he carefully rode down on the fallen tree and bolted far into the forest. The hunters were dumfounded. They expected to see him instantly killed by the falling tree. He quickly swam a small stream on the edge of the forest and in a few minutes was entirely lost to his pursuers.—Wilmington Cor. Baltimore American.

The Crowds In the Midway.

Referring to the crowds in Midway plaine in Jackson park, a correspondent writes to the Paris Figaro: "They move along like a procession of Quakers. They have no jokes, no frolics, no shouts, no fun. The dead silence that marks their promenade makes one think of the processions of the pupils of some deaf and dumb institution." etc.

This is not strictly true—not so truthful as it would be for us to say that the Parisian idea of fun and frolic involves barricades, riots, murder, arson and queen killing.

We are grateful for serviceable suggestions, but we must beg to be excused from practicing that kind of sport which appears to be so popular in Paris and which has made Paris infamous in history. We are proud that we have remained, in spite of all temptations, so Quakerish as to regard with horror the low fun, the lubricious jokes, the bawly shouts and the licentious frolics which the correspondent of Figaro ruefully fails to find among us.—Eugene Field in Chicago News-Record.

A New Prophet and Mystic In Kief.

A new sect whose prophet is a certain peasant called Kondrat is making extraordinary progress in the provinces of Kief and Poltava. Kondrat is a man of considerable power as a speaker, but who was at one time confined in a lunatic asylum. He was arrested some time ago and sent to Transcaucasia, but his followers are most energetic apostles and continue to propagate Kondratism. Their principle tenet is that all men are as Christ was, and in exactly the same way sows of God when they have been touched by the Spirit. The plainest facts and statements in Scripture are interpreted in a mystical spirit. There is also a tendency to free love among them, but as the last statement is vouchered for only by the Russian clergy it may have no foundation. The Kondratists already number 7,000.—Christian World.

Our Recent Statues.

Any foreigner who intends writing his impressions of the United States should not fail to notice our statues and in the case of the two erected Fourth of July in New England he should certainly find room to say something. At Newburyport the figure of Garrison in bronze was uncovered, and at Bridgeport that of Barnum. The ordinary foreigner would have a mental struggle to comprehend why the two cities should select such different subjects for memory and honor, but nevertheless any schoolboy could explain the whole matter, though we doubt if the foreigner would be wiser even with an explanation from our most enlightened citizens.—Providence Journal.

A poll parrot, owned by a New Yorker, seeing smoke in the adjoining house to her master, a few months ago, awoke him by shrieking frantically, and in this way was probably the means of saving property, if not lives.

CRICKET.

BOSTON, 77; NEWTON, 21.

At Franklin field, Boston, on Saturday, the first eleven of the Newton club was beaten by Boston, 77-21. Boston batted first, and by good work by Simmons, Newkirk and Merritt 77 was reached. To this Newton responded with 21, the fine bowling of Shepherdson and Beaumont being too much for them. The visitors fielded well, and Lyons and Sadler bowled in good shape, but the team showed up weak at the bat. The score:

SENSATION AT MONROE.

A Cure Without Parallels in Its History.

About three years ago I was taken sick with La Grippe, which left me in a bad state. I thought as the warm weather came on I would recover my usual health but instead I grew steadily worse, and I was obliged to give up my work entirely.

I employed four of the best physicians in my vicinity without receiving any benefit or encouragement. I tried several sarsaparillas without obtaining any benefit. Last fall I had a terrible cough, night sweats, loss of appetite, hectic fever, and had several attacks of bleeding at the lungs, and at all times raised more or less pus. I was extremely weak and emaciated, and I was thoroughly convinced that mine was a hopeless case of consumption. At this time, hearing that a lady in my own town, Mrs. Jeremiah Bowen, had been cured of consumption by the use of Rodolf's Medical Discovery, I resolved to try it. My appetite began to improve before I had finished taking the first bottle, which gave me new courage. Continuing its use my cough became loose, night sweats stopped and I began to gain in flesh and strength. I have now taken four bottles, in conjunction with Rodolf's Cream Emulsion, and during that time have gained twenty-two pounds. At present I am working every day on a farm, have a good appetite, sleep well and am entirely free from my cough. It seems almost a miracle to me, but the above statement is true, and I will testify to it. I shall tell everyone I know to be suffering from that terrible disease, Consumption, to take Rodolf's Medical Discovery and Rodolf's Cream Emulsion, and will cheerfully answer any and all questions and letters that any person may care to write. I believe these medicines to be the best on earth.

Very truly yours,
GEO. HUSTIS.

THE REPRESENTATIVES.

There is one question in the coming election in which Newton is vitally interested this year, and that is the question of the choice of representatives to the General Court. The convention has been called for October 5th, and it is time that candidates were being discussed.The representatives the past year were Messrs. Chester and Estabrooke, the former having served three years and the latter one year. As it has not been the custom here to give a representative more than three years, probably a new man will be chosen in Mr. Chester's place, although he has made an excellent official, and served with great credit to himself and to the city.We hear rumors that there is to be opposition to Mr. Estabrooke from some of the corporations which he antagonized, in the interest of the people, but in such a city as Newton, such opposition ought not to count for much. Mr. Estabrooke has been an unusually active representative, and has shown great interest in all the legislation that threatened in any way to affect Newton. He had independence enough to take a decided stand whenever it was necessary to do so, and his searching questions were very annoying to the promoters of various schemes, which were being pushed through quietly.On all questions in which the city was specially interested, he sought to carry out the wishes of the majority, and his efforts were generally crowned with success. There should be no doubt of his renomination, as he is just the kind of a man Newton needs at the State House.
With all sorts of corporations seeking for favors, the people need men who are shrewd enough to see what the purposes are, and also who are not afraid to stand up and fight for the rights of the people.
There ought to be a more careful scrutiny of candidates for positions of this kind, and men should be chosen, not because they want the honor, but because they can be of some use to the people and to the state.

THE CAUCUSES.

The Republican caucuses are called to meet on Thursday evening, Sept. 21st, at the usual places, to choose delegates to the State, Councilor, Senatorial, County and Representative conventions.The date has been placed unusually late, this year, so that all the voters will have a chance to return from their vacations, and the announcement so long in advance ought to call out an unusually large attendance.The new rule gives Newton an increased representation in the various conventions, each ward being entitled to one delegate at large, and additional delegates as follows: Ward One, two;
Ward Two, three; Ward Three, three;
Ward Four, two; Ward Five, three;
Ward Six, three, and Ward Seven, three.For the state convention there promises to be quite a contest between the friends of Mr. Pillsbury, and the friends of Mr.
Greenhalge, and some of the wards are already confidently claimed for one or the other. Mr. Hart's friends, if he has any in Newton, are so far keeping very quiet. If the attendance is as slim as is usually the case, a dozen men could carry any ward for any candidate, and it is surprising that a better organized effort is not made by the friends of a candidate, as a little quiet work would be all that is needed to decide the matter, but perhaps the voters will adopt that long talked of reform this year, and all attend the caucuses.For the councilor convention, the delegates will all be for the renomination of Hon. J. R. Leeson, who has served so creditably the past year, and who has abundantly earned the honor of a unanimous renomination. For the senatorial convention, Newton is not particularly interested this year, and the present incumbent will doubtless be renominated.The American Bar Association has been considering the question of taxing inheritances, and Justice Brown took rather surprising ground in his address, by advocating that no one should be allowed by law to devise more than one million to a single individual. As a result of the address the association passed this resolution:That the committee on jurisprudence and law reform be directed to consider and report at the next session whatlegislation, if any, is desirable and feasible touching the limitation of the power of transmitting property by device or gift, and the imposition of a graduated tax upon inheritances for educational and kindred purposes, and to lighten the burdens of taxation upon the poorer classes.THE vacation season has now practically ended for the majority of people, and all the week, Newtonians have been coming home in crowds. The Boston trains are again resuming their crowded condition at certain hours of the day, and old habits resume their sway. The stay-at-homes have had a very comfortable summer, and the travellers all seem rejoiced to get back again to comfortable quarters and city conveniences.THE Prohibitionists nominated the following ticket at Worcester: For Governor, Rev. Louis Albert Banks, D. D., of Hyde Park; for Lieutenant-Governor, Henry C. Smith of Haydenville; for secretary of state, Samuel B. Shapleigh of Boston; for treasurer, Wilbert D.
Farnham, Jr., of Somerville; for auditor, Alfred H. Evans of Ashburnham; for attorney-general, Robert F. Raymond of New Bedford.GEO. H. CARY of Lynn is the nominee for Governor of the People's party. The other candidates are for Lieutenant-Governor, Joseph K. Harris of Haverhill; for secretary of state, Isaac W. Skinner of Waltham; for treasurer and receiver-general, Thomas A. Watson of Braintree; for auditor, Maurice W. Landers of Pittsfield; for attorney-general, Conrad Reno of Boston.THE railroads centering at Newtonville have this week adopted a transfer check system, the checks costing seven cents.
This change will be appreciated by the patrons of the cars and shows that the management of the roads is trying to meet the wishes of the public.THE Prohibitionists lead off this year, as usual, with the nomination of a full state ticket. If there is any truth in the old adage about the early bird they are bound to take advantage of it.MASSACHUSETTS has got another honor, in having Capt. J. G. B. Adams chosen commander-in-chief of the G.
A. R. at the convention held this week in Indianapolis.HON. ALDEN SPEARE of Newton Centre will represent the Boston Merchants' Association at the Sound Money Conference in Washington, Sept. 12.NEXT Monday both branches of the city council will meet after the summer vacation, and the regular routine will be resumed.

NONANTUM.

-At the meeting of the Watertown school committee Wednesday evening a petition was received from George Hudson and others, for permission to lease the hall in the Bemis school house as a meeting place for a Sons of Temperance lodge.
Nearly a year ago a similar petition was presented to the school board, but was refused. The petitioners then had an article inserted in the warrant for the annual town meeting. The voters present at that meeting voted to allow the use of the hall as requested. Although authorized by the town, the petitioners were not quite sure that they had the proper authority, and again petitioned the school committee, who refused it on the ground that it is a question whether the school committee has the right to let a schoolhouse for public uses.-Jones seems to have thrown his weight into his business.

Police on the Wheel.

The proposal to mount a part of the park police on bicycles is timely though hasty. Already the world's armies have organized their bicycle service, and it can hardly be contended that this mode of locomotion is more appropriate, there than in the police service or likely to be so useful. In the event of the wheel's adoption by the police authority the public may assume that the men will be required to sit it properly. They will not offend the eye by contributing to the monkey on a gridiron exhibition.
In fact, their martial appearance could be expected to contribute by its example to diminish that depressing practice.
It is certain that the seat of the mounted police has stimulated perception of the ridiculous in equestrians bobbing from the saddle like cockney tailors out for a holiday.The extension of the use of the wheel is among the interesting phenomena of the day. The French postal service has adopted it extensively in rural service.
Even the stolid Briton has proposed the reform. In England, however, the magnitude of the mail offers some difficulties. Its growing extension in the colonies is marked. The export of bicycles now cuts a respectable figure in board of trade returns. During the past year the value has nearly doubled.—New Exiled Socialists in Siberia.

A number of socialist exiles have been located at Chita, Siberia. Our correspondent tells us that, though not allowed to leave the city, they move about freely enough within it and in various kinds of skilled handicraft are earning their own livelihood. They are in this way quite an acquisition to the neighborhood. If you have a scientific instrument to be repaired or any work to be done in which delicate manipulation and special ingenuity are essential, you must send for one of the socialists.They bear an excellent character, and the superintendent of police in Chita says, "If all the people in this province were socialists, there would be nothing for us to do." Alas for this province, a large proportion of its people are of a very different type! What Van Dieman's land and Botany bay were to England, half a century ago the Transbaikalia is to Russia now—a cesspool for its criminal punishment is comparatively rare in Russia, and villains who would without doubt receive the death sentence in England or be lynched without judge or jury in some parts of the United States are in this country condemned to life banishment in Transbaikalia.—London News.

The Chicago Fair's Bad Management.

Either the blood sucking parasites at the fair must be dispensed with, the deathead leak stopped and expenses cut down, or there must be a default on the bonds which the corporation owes. The directors have outstanding five millions of bonds and floating debt, and they have not yet a dollar to apply on the bond payment. They have not yet paid the floating debt by perhaps a million, and from present appearances will not until late in August.The fair is costing $800,000 a month for operating expenses. The army of dea-heads who enter its gates is steadily increasing. Friday more than one-third of those in attendance went in on passes.
The deadheads ought to be cut down at least one-half. At least half of the police force at the fair ought to be mustered out and taken off the payrolls. The expenses of operating the fair ought not to be over $300,000 per month at the very outside. The directors must face the music.—Chicago Tribune.

Offer to Float the Victoria.

Signor Balsanello, the inventor of the Balla Nautica, the submarine vessel with which several successful experiments were performed lately at Civita Vecchia in the presence of a commission appointed by the Italian government, declares that by the aid of his invention he can float her majesty's ship Victoria at a cost of less than £40,000. He says that with the Balla Nautica he can make arrangements for raising weights far exceeding that of the sunken ironclad. The preparations and placing of grapnels and chains around the Victoria would take a month and would be performed by the crew of the submarine ship, which has already descended to depths beyond that in which the Victoria lies. The bringing of the ship to the surface would take two days.—St. James Gazette.

Singular Case of Insanity.

Professor Alfonso Carpentieri, the famous gynecologist of the University of Naples, became suddenly insane a few days ago. He imagined that he was dying from starvation and thirst, and entering a restaurant, drank four cups of coffee, a bottle of wine, a bottle of cognac, and ate 15 sandwiches and more than a dozen eggs. When the proprietor declined to serve anything else, the professor sprang on the table and cried, with the voice of Stentor:
"Eggs, eggs! Give me eggs and keep me from starving!" When he began to break chairs and tables, he was overpowered and placed in a hospital. He is one of the most famous physicians in Italy.—Chicago Times.

A Thirty Pound Nugget of Gold.

The recent gold strikes made at the Virtue mine, near Baker City, is the richest and most extensive revealed for years. One afternoon a chunk was taken out weighing 30 pounds, which is estimated to contain $3,000. On account of the extreme richness of the ore it is not run through the mill, but it is pounded up in a large mortar.—Cor. Portland

Daughters, composed of eight members, reports that last year it chloroformed
4,089 cats, 71 dogs, 6 wounded sparrows,

The ceremony was performed at eight o'clock in the presence of immediate relatives. Rev. Alonzo Mayo of Salem, N. H., officiating, assisted by Rev. Samuel Jackson of Newtonville. Mr. Charles E. Gerrish of Somerville acted as best man and the bridesmaids were Miss Alice Crockett, of Baverhill and Miss Leda F. Wade of Halifax. The bride was gown in white silk en train, wore the usual tulle veil and carried a bouquet of white roses. The bridesmaids were attired in white and pink. The pages were Master Harold McHugh and Miss Helen Baker.

After the ceremony a short reception was held and the wedding supper served at which Mr. and Mrs. Fuller departed on their wedding trip. There were a large number of presents. The first at home will be on Thursday, Sept. 14, at 15 Carleton street, Newton, where they will reside.

—Capt. C. E. Davis and Patrolman Purcell went to the house of John Gaw off Webster street, Tuesday afternoon, armed with a search warrant. The visit was the result of certain information which the police had received to the effect that Gaw had an unusually large supply of silverware about his premises, some of the articles, it is said, having attracted the attention and suspicion of his neighbors. The officers at first found only a small box on the dining table which contained spoons and forks some of them marked. They were all plain. In response to questions Purcell said that he found a silverware in the will which he collected from houses about the city. He informed his visitors that the box of spoons and forks represented all the articles of silverware accumulated in that way. Later, however, a box was discovered in a bureau drawer which was found to contain solid silver valued at about $50, besides plated ware, principally forks and spoons, marked Joseph Lee and S. K. Harwood. The solid articles were marked with various initials and monograms. Gaw was taken into custody on the charge of larceny and was arraigned in the Newton police court Wednesday morning. He asked for a continuance in order to secure counsel and it was granted until Friday. The spoons marked Joseph Lee and S. K. Harwood came from the Woodland Park and Huntington Hotels, and were in good condition. If they were thrown out in the swill buckets by domestics, the carelessness of the servants, the police think, is something extraordinary, especially as there was no discrimination shown, apparently, in the throwing away of both solid and plated ware. One child's spoon was marked "Grace" and another "Harold."

—A man giving his name as Jack Murphy is wanted by the police of Newton and Malden. Murphy came to Nonantum on Monday and very soon made the acquaintance of a number of local horse men. He drove a large bay horse attached to a new Goddard buggy. Shortly after his arrival he expressed a willingness to dispose of the rig either by sale or exchange. At last he arranged an exchange with George Miller, who paid $10 to boot. The horse which Murphy obtained was valued at about $125.

The sale of the buggy to another party netted $40 more. On Wednesday Deputy Marshal Enright of Malden came to Newton and notified the central police station that a horse and carriage, answering to the description of those sold by Murphy, had been stolen from Malden, and that C. O. Davis soon located the missing property. Marshal Enright thinks Murphy is to be found around Boston.

CLIMATE AND CROPS.

HOW THE FOOD SUPPLIES OF THE EARTH ARE REGULATED.

Agriculture is the Basis of All Subsistence, but Yet the Most Thoroughly Settled Spot Are Not by Any Means the Most Fertile Java's Population.

How much room is there still on the earth for mankind? This is a question which is often raised and which is answered in a great many different ways. As all food is either directly or indirectly derived from the vegetable kingdom, and the plants need the light and the heat of the sun, the question as to how the light and heat are distributed is an important one. If we assume (which is true) that only 60 per cent of the heat of the sun reaches the earth, the remainder being absorbed by the atmosphere, then latitudes 20 degrees north and south will receive 92 per cent; 40 degrees north and south, 68 per cent; 60 degrees north and south, 40 per cent; and the poles only 17 per cent of the heat received at the equator. Therefore the countries which on account of the amount of heat received are in the most favorable circumstances to produce a great amount of vegetable food lie in the tropics, provided the other condition of plant life is found—that is, dampness.

In Europe people were particularly impressed with the information communicated by Humboldt, on his return from his American journey, concerning the great amount of food furnished by the banana in tropical countries. It was later proved, however, that the distinguished naturalist was mistaken, first, in ascribing so high a state of productivity to the banana, and, second, because the banana is not generally suitable to be used as the principal food for man. As the grains are cultivated wherever agriculture is advanced, in the damp parts of south and east Asia we find rice, in the dry parts of India and the greater part of tropical Africa, millet and sorgho, and in tropical America, principally corn.

The banana is even less fitted to furnish the staple food than the potato. As an accessory, however, like the potato in the wealthy countries of Europe and North America, it is very important. As a dense population is only possible where there is a certain amount of cultivation, we must keep in mind the experience of many thousands years and accept the grains as the basis of nourishment.

The Little Antilles and Mascarene islands are of intense fertility and export a great deal of sugar and import not only industrial products, but a good deal of foodstuff. The ground, therefore, does not directly nourish the population. Several parts of India export foodstuffs, and there is no trustworthy information as to the interior commerce in these products. Tonquin has too lately been annexed to France to obtain trustworthy statistics. Java, with Madura, is alone suited to our statistical necessities.

This country is sufficiently large, it furnishes good statistics of agriculture and commerce, and the imports and exports are carefully registered. The population is about as dense as in Belgium and Saxony, but life is supported under very different circumstances. Saxony and Belgium import foodstuffs and export mineral and manufactured products. Java imports a very small amount of rice and salt fish and exports many more agricultural products. It not only supplies its own people with food, but finds it possible to buy mineral and manufactured products. It might be supposed that this immense population would be divided in a certain proportion on the island, and either that its increase would be small, as in France and Belgium, or else there would be a large emigration, as from Great Britain or Germany.

Neither case is true. Emigration is scarcely known. The population increases at the rate of 1 per cent a year, and its distribution varies so greatly that in the eastern portion there are fewer people than in the swampy province of Minsk, in Russia, and in the central part there are almost twice as many people as in Belgium and Saxony, and yet 80 per cent of the population in this part of the island live by agriculture. Rice is the staple, and the statistics give 238 kilograms to each inhabitant. Only about 15 per cent of the surface of the island is devoted to the culture of rice. This is still in a very primitive state, but the government has taken it up, and the production will be greatly increased. Java is a mountainous country, but these mountains are not high, and the rainfall is great, and rice can be cultivated on 30 per cent of the surface for the first crop and 10 per cent for the second. We have therefore a possible extension of the cultivation of rice to 5,200,000 hectares. An average crop to this amount of acreage would support 9,000,000 people.

The surface of Java could be divided in this manner: Thirty per cent of the water surface would produce rice, vegetables, breadfruit and agricultural exports. Fifteen per cent, not watered, would produce breadfruit and agricultural exports; eight per cent, not watered, coffee and tea plantations; two per cent, watered, sugar cane. There would then be left 45 per cent for forests, gardens, meadows, waters, roads and dwellings. The people of Java need not then be condemned to live on rice alone. Fruits are very important and necessary for health, and in Java alone are found 100 different kinds. Cattle can be easily raised, and the superabundant numbers of water plants, insects and worms that are found in tropical countries furnish an easy means of feeding fish and fowls. We find therefore that in this country 800 men could find support on one square kilometer, or more than four times as many people as are now there.—Alex under Volkoff in Breslau Deutsche Revue.

GARDEN AND CRADLE.

When our babe he goeth walking in his garden,
Around his tinkling feet the sunbeams play,
The posies they are good to him,
And bow them as they should to him,
As far as he can reach his way,
And birdlings of the wood to him
Make music, gentle music, all the day,
When our babe he goeth walking in his garden.

When our babe he goeth swinging in his cradle,
Then the night he locketh ever sweetly down;
The little stars are kind to him,
The moon she hath a mind to him
And layeth on his head a golden crown;
And singeth then the wind to him
A song, the gentle song of Bethlehem town,
When our babe he goeth swinging in his cradle.

JASPER'S WOOLING.

Jasper Greene dismissed the driver when he reached the wharf after crossing the Ottawa at the Four Corners and looked round for Daoust to carry his baggage up to Labelle's as in days of yore. But old Daoust was dead and therefore could not come.

Millette put the heavy trunk on a truck sleigh and began to trot along the wooden wharf. Then, when Millette paused for breath, Greene pushed the old man aside and took hold of the truck. "Say, Millette, I'll wheel this up for 50 cents for you," he said.

Millette ran panting alongside. "Ah-h, ze drôle monsieur. It will provide for ze christening."

Greene stopped short. "What, another?" he said in pretended amazement. "How many?" he asked briefly.

"Twenty-seven," rejoined Millette, with ill dissembled pride. Greene stopped again and carefully counted out 27 cents. Here's a cent each for your children, Millette. Don't stand still any longer or you'll get frost bitten. I dare not run the risk of having to provide for 27 orphans."

Millette took the money with profuse thanks and hurried off, leaving Greene to go on to Labelle's hotel with the huge truck sleigh. By the time Jasper reached the postoffice a procession gradually formed on the sidewalk to welcome him back from Montreal. When Lily Labelle saw him, she came out and promptly gave the children a holiday for the rest of the day. Then she joined him at the head of the procession. When they reached the veranda, the children gave three cheers for Jasper and called for a speech.

He waited for the crowd to disperse before he approached Lily, who stood leaning against the veranda, an amused look in her dark eyes. "Are you glad to see me?" he asked. "Come in to dinner," she said. "I'll answer your questions—some of them—afterward."

Mrs. Labelle greeted him with a kiss on both cheeks, while her husband bowed with grave politeness. Lily seated herself at the upper table. Jasper at once took possession of Lily and held his prize against all comers, especially the cashier of the Four Corners bank. The latter was not easily disconcerted, but prepared to demolish Jasper.

Miller, the cashier, asked her to go for a sleigh ride that afternoon. "So sorry," drawled Jasper. "Miss Labelle has been engaged to me for a sleigh ride for a year."

The cashier, without waiting for a reply, went angrily out. Lily raised her eyes from her plate. "Why are you a week before your time, Jasper?" she asked.

"That's the reason," said Jasper, indicating with a fragment of mince pie on his fork the retreating form of the cashier. "If I'm only allowed one sleigh ride a year, I don't see why that fellow should get ahead of me and have three a week."

"But your work, Jasper?" "Oh, McQuire's looking after that for me. I explained to him that it was rather important to clear up matters here, and so I came."

Lily had not expected her coquetry to become known. "It is so dull," she said in extenuation.

Jasper commenced another mince pie. "Don't be afraid of its being dull while I'm here," he said, with sublime self confidence. "You promised me one sleigh ride a year for seven years if I wanted it, and I guess I'll take this year's today."

Lily pouted. Jasper smiled and rumbled his yellow hair. "You'd better own up," he said, with unabated cheerfulness. "How soon can you be ready?"

Lily was cowed. "Oh, in half an hour," and ran away to get her things on.

When Lily came down arrayed in her most becoming furs, Jasper smiled approvingly. "You only want some flowers to be perfect," he said.

Lily gave a little cry. "Ah, flowers! But they are impossible."

"Not at all," said Jasper, taking a box from his pocket. "Nothing impossible if you want it badly enough."

Lily opened the box and gave another cry. "Orange blossoms!" she said.

"Yes," answered Jasper. "From Florida. People there stick the ends in a potato to keep them fresh. Capital dodge, isn't it?"

He took out the orange blossoms, threw away the potato and pinned them to her jacket.

"Now we're ready to start. Stop a moment!" and he drew her back behind the curtain as the cashier drove past on his way to the schoolhouse.

Lily began to laugh. "It's very wicked of you, Jasper."

"That will teach him to go sleighing with my sweetheart," said Jasper calmly.

Lily protested: "You've no right to say that, Jasper. I only promised you a sleighride once a year for seven years, and then if I liked you well enough—then perhaps I might marry you."

Jasper was drawing on his sealskin gloves. "That's all very well," he said, "but we haven't the time to waste which those old Biblical people had. In seven years' time I expect to be in the cabinet."

Lily followed him to the door only to recall in dismay. "That" was all she said.

"He's not handsome to look at," said

Jasper drily. "Rather three-cornered and lopsided. Still, I don't suppose that cashier fellow can overtake even a venerable ruin like this."

"If he does," flashed Lily, "I'll change sleighs."

"Well, that's fair," gently asserted Jasper. "In you go. There isn't much fuss and feathers about the old sleigh, but it means business all the same."

Lily was furious at being treated like a child. Besides, she had determined to teach Jasper a lesson.

"Rather like Deacon Platt's sermons. They always hang fire at the start," said Jasper.

"Now, we'll go to Hawkesbury by the river track. That fellow can see us coming. Ah, I thought so. He'll be down here in a minute."

Lily looked rather frightened as the chestnut came along at a furious pace. It was evident that his driver resented being made a fool of and that there would be a scene as soon as he could get his horse alongside Jasper's funeral quadriga. But no sooner did that dejected animal touch the ice than he became a different looking horse altogether.

His head went up and his tail out at the ring of the chestnut's hoofs on the smooth ice which connected the river with the shore. Then Jasper, leaning back, waited until the chestnut was within 20 yards and suddenly loosed the reins.

"What, w-what?" said Lily. "He's running away, Jasper?"

"Yes, he's doing his level best," said Jasper as the bank seemed to spin by. "If the chestnut catches us, you can have his master."

Jasper kept the black's head straight. That was all he could do with the unmanageable beast. "You see, Lil," he explained, "you've been fooling one of us to the top of your bent. Now, you'll just take the chances of war. If he collars us, I shall have to give in."

"I won't," said Lily stoutly, beginning to realize the situation and how Jasper had awakened to life under the influence of jealousy. "Nothing shall make me m-m-marry him. I only drove with him because it was so dull down here. That was all."

"Chestnut's coming up a bit," said Jasper cheerily, after another mile. "Hope Baalbec will hold out."

Lily gazed anxiously at the animated "ruin" in the shafts. The chestnut was gaining. Then she looked at the black horse. "C-c-c-couldn't you whip him?" she asked.

"I could," said Jasper, "but it's hardly fair. He isn't the one that should be whipped for this."

Lily turned pale. "You're very cruel, Jasper, but I deserve it all. Nothing shall make me marry him. I'd rather go to the bottom of the river with you."

As they neared Hawkesbury the chestnut steadily gained. Jasper had succeeded in pulling the old black back into his gait and began to whistle. Suddenly he turned pale.

"How far's that fellow behind, Lil?" he asked.

"Forty yards," said Lil in an agony. Jasper spoke quite lightly. "Lil," he said, "did you mean you'd rather go to the bottom of the river with me than let that fellow catch up?"

"Yes," said Lil, without hesitation. "What do you mean, Jasper?"

"This," said Jasper. "I forgot the spring thaw. Three hundred yards ahead of us the river's split right across. Shall I pull up?"

Lily stood up in the sleigh and looked round. She gave a little shudder and laid her hand on Jasper's arm.

"Go on, Jasper," she said. "I'll risk it."

Jasper looked down for a moment into her white face. "I'll pull up if you wish, Lil. 'Twill be too late directly."

"No, Jasper, I deserve it. Go on, and—if it's to be goodbye"—She kissed him.

"Hold tight," said Jasper, beginning to pull on the old black.

Lil held tight to the side of the sleigh in an agony of grief. Then he lifted the black to the leap, gave one cruel slash with the whip, there was a crash of breaking ice as the sleigh struck on the other side, a stagger from the black. A convulsive pull and they were over and 20 yards beyond the widening chasm, with the frightened cashier pulling up on its brink. When Lily recovered consciousness, she found herself in the manse parlors at Hawkesbury.

"Are you all right, Lil?" asked Jasper cheerily.

She clung to him and hid her face in his breast.

"Was it all a dream?"

Jasper took a plain gold ring from his pocket.

"I don't think so," he said. "I wired down to Mr. Watson yesterday to expect us this afternoon. Now, Mrs. Watson, she's all ready."

An hour later the funeral black crawled lazily back. Half way they met the cashier, his chestnut nearly fendered and scarce able to stand.

"Thank God!" he cried as they came in sight. "I thought you were mad."

"N-no," said Jasper, touching up the old black. "N-no. I was just giving my wife a sleigh drive down to—"

"Y-your wife?"

"Yes," said Jasper, again stimulating Baalbec. "Sorry we couldn't wait for you."

An Englishman's View of the Fair.

What I saw when I gained the northern and eastern balconies of the Administration building surpassed and surprised my highest expectations. After all that pen and pencil had done to prepare me for the sight I felt that not one-half had been told me. The great White City which rose before me, silent and awful, seemed to belong to an order of things above our common world. It was a poem entablatured in fairy palaces, only to be done into human speech by the voice of some master singer. It was a dream of beauty which blended the memory of classic greatness with the sense of Alpine snows. It was an apocalypse of the architectural imagination. The wildness of the day lent its own apocalyptic setting to the scene. A swaying, drifting curtain of cloud shut in the horizon, blurring lake and sky on the one side in an indistinguishable haze and on the other shrouding the city in a gloom of smoke and rain.

Ever and again the towers of the fair were draped with wreaths of trailing cloud, while the beating rain and chilling wind added to the elemental effect. The cluster of buildings hung together there, a sort of city in the clouds, yet severe and unmistakable in outline. It was a vision of the ideal enhaled with mystery. The dreams of Columbus, the aspirations of the pilgrim fathers, the boundless possibilities of the American continent itself—all seemed to have been crystallized in this mute world of hall and peristyle, of column and capital. It stood there one colossal temple of temples, awaiting in silence the presence of the supernal glory.—Review of Reviews.

Repressing Chattel Mortgage Sharks. Some Boston business men have recently completed a five years' experiment of interest to every large city. They united to suppress the chattel mortgage sharks. They formed a company or association to loan money to the classes who usually fall victims to the sharks. At the time the business men entered the field these lenders were charging the borrowers on chattel mortgages from 8 to 10 per cent per month. The association adopted a uniform rate of 1 per cent per month. It required that with every payment of interest the borrower must make a small payment—about 5 per cent—on the principal.

Since it has been doing business the association has loaned over $500,000 on chattel mortgages. Fourteen hundred and ninety borrowers have been accommodated. Loans have been repaid very fast, averaging about 18 months. The usual experience with the shark is that of becoming deeper and deeper in debt. Last year the association paid a 6 per cent dividend. The object is not to make money, however. It is to earn a fair pay on the investment and to take away the occupation of the shark. Robert Treat Paine is the president of the association.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

London's Underground Station. The most remarkable piece of underground London will be long be found beneath the most crowded of all spots in the city. We refer to the large space in front and about the Mansion House, including in this the wide entrance to Queen Victoria street and Mansion House place, together with the corners of Princes street, Lombard street, King William street and Cornhill, and the paved open ground with the trees in wooden boxes, and the statue of Wellington, in front of the western portico of the Royal Exchange.

Here will shortly be commenced a vast excavation of oval form to make way for a great underground electric railway station, an extensive and complex system of underground ways, lighted and open at all hours, for the use both of railway passengers and pedestrians, and a still more elaborate system of what are called "pipe subways," destined to receive our extensive and ever growing lines of gas and water mains, pneumatic tubes, electric wires and like services.—London News.

A Novel Plea For Divorce. The causes of conjugal infelicity are like the stars in number, but seldom have they been so curious in character as those enumerated by a witness in the divorce court on Saturday.

Witness considered he was the injured party, as the petitioner was continually objecting to the shape of his feet. [Laughter.]

He further said that when he had his hair cut it was never done to please the petitioner. [Laughter.]

She also used to say his upper lip did not suit her.

She was continually blaming him for leaving out his hair in speaking.

He was not so well up in theological subjects as his wife.

And there was sometimes a divergence of opinion when they were talking about the sermon they had heard.

One is not surprised after this to hear that one of the allegations against the respondent is that he had struck the petitioner with The Methodist Magazine!—Westminster Gazette.

How Lightning Discriminates. A painter named Quinichell was in one room of his house with two women when a storm came up. He took a seat on the bed, and the women sat on his right and left on the same bed. A flash of lightning killed both the women, and the man escaped unhurt. He informed me he only felt a slight shock when both of the women toppled over dead on the floor, but he was frightened almost to death. No doubt was entertained but that he gave a truthful account of the occurrence.—Chase City Cor. Richmond Dispatch.

The Horse's Hat. The horse's hat, which last year a humane horse owner in Bordeaux provided for his horses, is now becoming a great article of trade in France. It is made of straw and covers the eyes and forehead of the horse, while openings are left for the ears. A sponge is kept in the inside of the hat, and this is moistened from time to time with vinegar so as to keep the horse's head refreshingly cool.

Tryon Died as Burgoyne Died.

There was a remarkable similarity between the fate of Admiral Tryon, who perished when the Victoria went down, and that of Captain Hugh Burgoyne, the commander of the Captain when she was lost. Private dispatches received in England say that the admiral commanded his men to save themselves, but refused to save his own life. When the Captain capsized and after struggling to right herself finally turned over completely, floating with her keel uppermost, Captain Burgoyne, Mr. May, the gunner, and a seaman named Heard reached the pinnace. The ship almost immediately disappeared, but her second launch, with 10 men on board, came alongside the pinnace.

A sudden lurch separated the two boats before Captain Burgoyne and Heard had time to board the launch. The sailor took his commander by the hand and proposed to jump. "Save your own life, my man," Captain Burgoyne replied. The boats separated more and more, and Heard exclaimed, "Will you come or not, sir?" Burgoyne answered: "Jump and save yourself. I shall not forget you some day." The sailor leaped and finally reached the launch, but the captain was not again seen.

He was a descendant of Sir John Burgoyne of the Revolution and the only son of the then constable of the tower, another Sir John. Admiral Tryon was regarded as England's chief defender, and Burgoyne was a skillful and brave officer. It is a singular fact that the two officers served together as lieutenants in the trenches before Sebastopol, being at the time attached to the land service.—Buffalo Courier.

Kept His Wife in a Trunk.

The offense known in this country as sequestration, or private imprisonment, is far from uncommon. Only the other day a whole family was brought up for trial on a charge of keeping an idiot youth in an iron cage until he had lost all his physical as well as his mental faculties, and a similar case is now reported from Evreux, in Normandy. The authorities of the village of Neubourg were advised recently by anonymous letter that a peasant named Lehuby was "sequestrating" his wife.

The gendarmes presented themselves at Lehuby's house and asked to see his wife. This request being refused, they proceeded to search the place from the cellar to the granary, and having found no trace of the woman were about to withdraw when one of them discovered a large trunk and asked for the key. On the case being opened the figure of Mme. Lehuby suddenly jumped up like a jack in the box, and she explained to the gendarmes that her husband would not allow her to go out and that whenever he left the house he left her locked up in the box, where she could scarcely breathe. Lehuby was at once arrested and will be tried for "amateur imprisonment."—Paris Cor. London Telegraph.

Objects of the Peary Expedition.

The chief objects of the Peary expedition include a careful examination of the detached land masses which are known to lie to the north of Greenland, and which have been seen on previous expeditions, not only by Lieutenant Peary, but also by Lockwood and Brainard, little or nothing being at present known of their extent and general character, and the delimitation of a considerable portion of the east coast of Greenland, extending from Independence bay about 300 miles south to Cape Bismarck. This portion of the coast has never been explored, although it was seen from vessels coasting in that vicinity about 200 years ago. He also intends to ascertain the transverse profile of Greenland along or near the seventy-seventh parallel from Cape Bismarck to Ingfield gulf. Along this line Greenland is about 350 miles wide. Incidentally he will also continue the study of the arctic highlanders, a tribe of people who live in the highest latitudes known to be frequented by any people in the world.—Brooklyn Eagle.

A Welcome Ready For Bermuda.

We confess that the proposal of The Sun that Bermuda join us is a fascinating one. Why, indeed, should we not annex Bermuda? It is scarcely farther from New York than is Detroit or Halifax. The people are desirable. Less than half of them are white, to be sure, but three-fourths of the whole population are worthy Episcopalians. An annual budget of $150,000 provides government for these people now, and their debt is a mere bagatelle. Already most of Bermuda's business is with the United States, and our people make up the bulk of the winter pleasure travel. We are frank to concede that if Bermuda suggests annexation a great many of us will take off our hats and cheer.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Value Whisky Above Gold.

There is a law against selling whisky to the Indians in Alaska, yet fully 200 barrels of the stuff are sold there by the whalers and sealers every year. When the steamer Australia leaves for Honolulu, part of her cargo will consist of 55 barrels of whisky, and it is an open secret that it is sent down to be placed on the whalers bound to Behring sea.

The liquor is doctored and adulterated so that by the time it reaches Alaska it has doubled in quantity and is a first class article of "chain lightning." The Indians will give everything they possess for the whisky, and the captains find it far better than gold in trading with the natives.—San Francisco Examiner.

"For Years,"

Says CARRIE E. STOCKWELL, of Chesterfield, N. H., "I was afflicted with an extremely severe pain in the lower part of the chest. The feeling was as if a ton weight was laid on a spot the size of my hand. During the attacks, the perspiration would stand in drops on my face, and it was agony for me to make sufficient effort even to whisper. They came suddenly, at any hour of the day or night, lasting from thirty minutes to half a day, leaving as suddenly; but, for several days after, I was quite prostrated and sore. Sometimes the attacks were almost daily, then less frequent. After about four years of this suffering, I was taken down with bilious typhoid fever, and when I began to recover, I had the worst attack of my old trouble I ever experienced. At the first of the fever, my mother gave me Ayer's Pills, my doctor recommending them as being better than anything he could prepare. I continued taking these Pills, and so great was the benefit derived that during nearly thirty years I have had but one attack of my former trouble, which yielded readily to the same remedy."

The Brilliant Brat.

The original and inimitable infant is no stranger. Its birthday is from Jan. 1 to Dec. 31, inclusive. It is like no other baby, being uniquely bright and interesting. What astonishing things it does utter!

The earliness of its first ability to lisped a word is unprecedented; it has a really a remarkable command of speech at a date when its contemporaries are still expressing themselves by their puny screams and smiles alone. As for the age when this striking child first gives promise of genius, that is too "tender" to be set down, or it might be discredited.

Anybody who does not know Mrs. Prima, the baby of Mrs. Mamabdeux, Mrs. Notherstill, Mrs. Fourthly, Mrs. So on, yet a pleasure in life to look forward to. It is an unexampled child; you see it. Or, if you cannot do that, hear what its mother says of it:

"It is the quaintest little thing! Listen to this: I was teaching it the Lord's prayer, and what do you think it said? I got so far as, 'Give us this day our daily bread,' and it interrupted, 'and butter, too!' Think of it! And the dear little fellow (child) is only 8 months old!

Did you ever hear of such a child?"

"Truly, it was a remarkable speech. You might think, indeed, that its reputation was rested by maternal fondness on this alone, but you were never more mistaken. Its mother can tell you every day some fresh anecdote of its unparalleled acumen. Wherever it goes, it says or does something that distinguishes it from other infants. As an illustration of this small paragon's precocious acuteness of notice, take this:

One day its mother was taking it out of town, and they were in a railroad car. The little one was peeping out of the window, by the lady's side, and another train passed by in the reverse direction, on a track at some distance away. She (or he) seemed to be in reflection, self absorbed, for some moments; then, suddenly, "mammy, what makes the cars go?"

"You see the little soul's originality. Anecdotes of it could go on forever, but it is better to see the infantile prodigy himself, at first hand. Have you ever? Possible. One of his most individual characteristics is that his singularity is plural.

Many people, not aware of the dangers of constipation, neglect the proper remedy till the habit becomes chronic, or inflammation or stoppage results. A dose or two of Ayer's Pills in the beginning would have prevented all this.

Ely's Cream Balm is worth its weight in gold as a cure for catarrh. One bottle cured me.—S. A. Lovell, Franklin, Pa.

BOSTON AMUSEMENTS.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.—The picturesque and successful melo-drama, "The Power of the Press," is the drawing card which the Grand Opera House will present next week. The scenery is realistic and embraces such interesting places as Manhattan Athletic Clubhouse, a wharf on the North river, a ship-yard in full operation, the ship, Mary Vale, lying at anchor in the channel and several other interesting places. The cast has been carefully selected by Mr. Pitou and promises to be fully adequate to the demands made upon it. Prominent members are Louis Nabb, Davenport Bebus, W. H. Harbury, Charles Gotthold, H. Dempsey, V. T. Wall, Richard Webster, Chas. Edwin, George H. Stowell, Luke Martin, Frank Stone, Herbert Franklin, Harry Courtine, Etta E. Martin, Robert Newman, Arthur Bateman, John S. Ellickson, A. Fleetwood, Peter Sanderson, Albert Johnson, Fred Ellis, Adelaide Cushman, Mary Standish, Lavina Shagburn, Lizzie Washburn, Imogene Washburn.

PARK THEATRE.—After completing four months, 16 weeks or 114 performances, constituting one of the most successful runs of an attraction ever known in Boston, "The Golden Wedding" is withdrawn from the stage of the Park Theatre with this Saturday night's farewell performance, to make way for "Venus." The preparation for Rice's production of "Venus" at the Park Theatre next week are being energetically carried on in New York. Some idea of the magnitude of the work is suggested by the fact that it is progressing simultaneously in the shops of six different New York cities, namely, New York, Fifth Avenue, the Park, the Biltmore, and the Grand Opera house. Many days and nights of anxious thought and manual labor have been involved in this production, which promises to be the crowning artistic success of Mr. Rice's long and brilliant career as a producer of musical and spectacular entertainments. The gorgeous scenery is the work of well known artists, and electricity plays an important part in the production, and miles of electric wires will be required for the light effects. The costumes and armors promise to be the most costly, beautiful and unconventional ever employed in a comic opera in this country.

TREMONT THEATRE.—Hoyt and Thomas' company of comedians began their annual engagement at Tremont Theatre Monday, Sept. 4, presenting Hoyt's merry satire, "A Trip to Chinatown," which has broken all records in New York for long runs. New ideas, songs and amusing lines and situations have been introduced by the author, and a strong company interprets the characters. In "A Trip to Chinatown" you see Hoyt, the farcical, at his best. It is one of this prolific writer's most taking farces. For nearly 700 nights the piece delighted New York audiences, and, with the remembrance of the enormously successful engagement played at the Tremont Theatre last fall, it is safe to predict crowded houses for the visit of the executive staff at the Tremont will remain the same as during the four preceding seasons, and is as follows:—Mr. Henry E. Abbey, Mr. Jno. B. Schofield, Mr. Maurice Grau, proprietors and managers. Executive staff—Acting manager, Mr. Wm. Seymour; business manager, Mr. J. C. O'Brien; treasurer, Mr. Philip A. Shea; leader of orchestra, Mr. E. N. Catlin; scenic artist, Mr. Chas. W. Witham.

BOWDOIN SQUARE THEATRE.—H. C. DeMille's highly successful American play "The Lost Paradise," will be presented at the Bowdoin Square Theatre next week in the same manner as it was during the long run in Boston last season, and with but few changes in the cast. Mr. DeMille, who is co-author with Belasco of "Men and Women," "The Charity Ball," and "The Wife," has done his best dramatic work in "The Lost Paradise." The play is under the management of Charles Frohman, and receives the best possible stage mounting. It is announced for only a single week, and will be followed by James O'Neill.

GLOBE THEATRE.—On Monday evening, Sept. 11th, a great attraction will be presented at the Globe Theatre in Louis Aldrich, the favorite American actor, as "The Senator," a play which was made famous by the comedian W. H. Crane at the Star Theatre, New York, where it was performed for two years. Louis Aldrich made an extended tour of "The Senator" last season and made a great hit wherever he played the piece, and has also been playing to large audiences throughout his tour which commenced two weeks ago. The production at the Globe Theatre will be the first time that the piece has been done there, and will have the benefit of special scenery and a great cast of characters. Among the supporting players are Mr. Sheridan Block, Mr. David Davies, Mr. Harry Bram, Mr. Bert Andrews, Mr. Morton Stevenson, Miss Russell, Miss Emma Field, Miss D. Delaro, Miss Katherine Ostermann and Miss Millie James. Mr. Bram assumes his original character as Baron Ling Ching.

HOLIS STREET THEATRE.—Manager Rich of the Holis Street Theatre has given a review of the Smith-Dakoven "Fencing Master" as his earliest musical attraction for the season, its production being fixed for Monday evening, Sept. 11. A double interest attaches to this event because it will introduce Mme. Laura Schirmer-Mapleson in a role which should afford her the best opportunities she has ever enjoyed since her retirement to the stage of her native city. Mr. De Koven, the composer, has availed himself of Mme. Mapleson's rare vocal abilities to further embellish the score of "The Fencing Master," by the introduction of some new numbers for the prima donna, which can hardly fail to give added interest to the revival of the opera. The company supporting Mme. Mapleson in this production is that organized by Managers Colonel Henry Mapleson and Mr. Fred C. Whitney, and its membership includes many old favorites, as well as new aspirants for local approval who come well endorsed.

COLUMBIA THEATRE.—Peter F. Dailey, the John J. McNally's new farce comedy, "A Country Sport," will continue another week at the Columbia Theatre. Messrs. Charles J. Rich and William Harris, who are managers of Mr. Dailey's starting tour, have surrounded Mr. Dailey with a company that has rarely been equalled in the annals of farce comedy. Including as it does Miss May Irwin, Mr. John Sparks, Mr. Richard Carle, Mr. James Jackson and many other well-known lights in that particular line. Mr. McNally's lines are said to be witty and funny to the extreme, and the general verdict of the people for the first week was shown to be that of approbation, and intense appreciation was shown of the wit and humor of the piece. Plenty of clever music has been introduced and remarkably dainty dancing by pretty girls. The usual matinees will be given Wednesday and Saturday.

A Horse Thief Wanted.

A good looking stranger paid a visit to Nonantum Wednesday afternoon and posed as a horse trader. He had a chestnut horse and a top buggy. He swapped the chestnut horse for a bay, and later sold the buggy to Louis Brofski for $11. From Nonantum he went to Harrington's stable, Newtonville, and hired a buggy from the man in charge, claiming that he resided in Nonantum and mentioning the names of several well known residents there. He has not been seen since.

The Waltham police have taken charge of the horse which he swapped off, together with the buggy. The team was stolen in Waltham, Monday.

Now the Newton police are looking for the chap who made the crooked deals, and whose capture will, at least, be a source of satisfaction to the parties who lost quite an amount by the transaction above narrated.

"You have a lively 'set of clerks,'" he said to the proprietor of the establishment. "It must be pleasant and profitable to have employees so full of energy and enthusiasm."

"Yes," responded the proprietor, "we close early today and they are getting ready to go home."—Tit-Bits.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore, requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address, F. J. I have been a sufferer from catarrh for 20 years. I found immediate relief in the use of Ely's Cream Balm. CITY GOVERNMENT.

FIRST FALL MEETING A BUSY ONE—BOULEVARD HEARING—NEWTON ATHLETIC PROPOSITION—WHY NOT BUY THE WIRES?

The city government held their first meeting Monday evening after the summer vacation, and a large amount of business was disposed of.

The mayor was in his accustomed place but two of the aldermen, Messrs. Bothfield and Plummer were absent, leaving just a quorum in the upper branch to reduce the accumulations of the vacation period, and it kept each member busy throughout the session.

The reading of the records was waived on motion of Alderman Roffe and the mayor proceeded to re-appoint T. Stuart a private sewer layer, which was confirmed.

The resignation of W. M. Russell as foreman of Hose 8 company, Nonantum, was accepted and Richard F. Mills appointed to the place. George Turner was appointed assistant foreman, Joseph A. Havings and Chas. M. Hewitt, hosemen, the board confirming the same.

HEARINGS NUMEROUS.

Hearings were opened at 7.45 o'clock on taking land for sewer in Exeter street, Cottage court, Trowbridge avenue, Kirk-stall road, Lewis terrace, Greenwood avenue, rounding the corners of Temple and Prospect street, also of Hyde and Centre streets. No remonstrants appeared and the hearing on each was promptly closed.

A hearing on the laying out of Hyde street found a remonstrant in Wm. B. Wood. He said the proposed grade of the street and sidewalk would prevent proper drainage and the accumulation of water would seriously damage his estate. He did not wish to appear against the city for damages and hoped in some way the evil might be rectified. The hearing was closed.

Hearings were opened on the laying out of Worcester and Austin streets and no remonstrants appearing, were closed.

A PROTEST.

A petition was presented from Albert Brackett protesting against taking land in his coal yard for sewer purposes.

N. E. TEL. & TEL. CO.

A hearing was opened on a petition of the N. E. Telephone & Telegraph Company to erect poles and wires on Vista, between Woodland and Aspen avenues. S. L. Powers for the company explained that the location was requested to enable them to place a telephone in the residence of E. B. Haskell. There was no opposition and the hearing was closed.

A hearing for the same company on granting a location on portions of Walnut, Turner, Centre, Chestnut and Washington streets was opened.

Mr. Powers explained that the Walnut street location asked, was to replace the present poles with new, Turner street to relocate the poles, Centre street to transfer the present location, by the request of citizens, Chestnut street to make connection with the exchange more direct giving better service to patrons.

Alderman in Ramery presented a petition at this point signed by F. J. Wetherell, N. H. Chadwick and sixteen others, residents of Walnut street, opposing the new location on Walnut street.

Ex-Alderman N. H. Chadwick appeared and said it was understood a new location was desired, presumably to place more poles and wires on the street. He remonstrated against granting any location for such purpose as there were already too many poles on the street to suit the residents.

The mayor said the intention was to place taller poles to raise the wires safely above the street railway trolley which was now in dangerous proximity to them.

Alderman in Thompson asked Mr. Chadwick if he should object to placing the wires underground?

The latter said he should be glad to see the wires buried.

Alderman in Thompson thought this a good opportunity to make a beginning in burying wires.

WHY NOT ACT?

S. L. Powers in justice to the company thought some explanation was due at this point. The recent accident on Pearl street, Ward One, naturally sets people to thinking, and the cry comes why does not the city compel the placing of wires underground, out of the way? But there are two sides to this question. The records at the City Hall of Newton, Waltham and a number of other cities will show that petitions presented by the N. E. Telephone & Telegraph Co. to place their wires underground have been lying there for some months.

Another thing against which the telephone company has always protested, is the placing of electric light wires on the same poles with telephone and telegraph wires, and which are constantly a menace to the public as shown in the recent fatality.

But objection is made to more poles, therefore it is done.

The company has had a petition for placing wires underground in the City Hall for a year, and he knew of no action being taken. In Boston alone, 90 per cent of the wires have been buried or about 8700 miles of wire, which is larger in proportion to the city's mileage than are buried in any city as yet, and nearly all the cities in Massachusetts are about to have their wires buried, while in Salem, Holyoke, Brookline and several others, quite a large number are already underground.

The hearing was then closed.

THE CENTRAL BOULEVARD.

A hearing was opened in joint session of both branches at eight o'clock, on laying out, grading and accepting a central boulevard from Valentine to Washington street.

IMPORTANT INFORMATION.

Geo. A. Blaney appeared in behalf of a number of citizens residing on the line of the new boulevard and who strongly favored its construction. The need and desirability of the whole boulevard with its future development and terminus at the Auburndale park was apparent.

Something had been said relative to the attitude of Boston regarding the widening of South street, but no definite information had been made public.

The speaker had been at work on this line and had ascertained some facts very pertinent to the situation, which has been used to some extent as a handle for the few who are not heartily in favor of the project.

The mayor of Boston had recommended in special measure the laying out of a portion of South street. This is the only street which has been especially recommended by the mayor. Alderman Lee of the Brighton district was strongly in its favor, it is also favored by the Village Improvement Society of Brighton, and Archbishop Williams, who controls a large amount of real estate in the immediate vicinity, is also a strong supporter of the project. The street commissioners of Boston say they have prepared plans and all is ready for the passage of an order authorizing its construction.

REMONSTRATING.

A petition from Elizabeth A. L. Atkinson was received protesting against the seizure of her land for the boulevard from which no benefit, it was claimed, would be derived.

Thomas Mague placed himself on record as a remonstrant.

John Sheehan said most of his land, on which he depended for a living, would be absorbed by the boulevard which took off 120 feet on each end. He depended for the support of his family on market gardening and fruit trees.

Mr. Cotter, a vigorous and energetic young man, remonstrated against the boulevard construction. He had already agreed to give 40 feet, but now, he said, they want more and on this he based his protest.

Mr. Corcoran had lived for twenty-five years on his place as a taxpayer of Newton and the grasping hand of the boulevard projectors would seriously cripple his little estate. He was a poor man well along in years and had just enough land to make a living. He had none to sell.

J. J. Bowman had agreed to give 40 feet and was still willing to do so, but the engineers had staked off 85 feet and it would prove a serious detriment to his small place.

Mr. Blaney resuming, said he believed the engineers had been very fair in drawing the lines when one considered the crooked nature of Homer street. The line laid out took about 70,000 feet from one and about 60,000 feet from the other side. These gentlemen have a proper redress in damages against the city of Newton for which he believed ample provision was made.

The hearing was then closed.

PETITIONS.

The following petitions were presented: from F. W. Perry et al for street light on Court street; from A. I. Paine for license to run three pool tables at $20 Washington street; from Herman E. Hibbard for sewer in Hunnewell terrace; from residents of Prospect street for extension of time until the land is built upon for paying sewer assessments; from Mrs. Annie D. Bacon et al for street light on Hyde avenue; from Patrick Donahoe for license to move building 16x25 feet from Hunnewell avenue to West street.

Petitions were granted as follows: from Wm. Kendall, permit to erect stable 26x32 feet, on Prospect avenue; from Ella J. Ellis, license to move building 40x40 feet, across Norwood avenue; from Ellen Burns, intelligence office; from Ella J. Ellis, permit to erect ice house 70x85 feet, on Centre street and Norwood avenue; from P. C. Baker to move stable 25x35 feet on Cornell street; from George Fite license for s and for two wagons on Paul street.

LIGHT AT LASELL.

Alderman Hunt presented a petition from C. C. Bragdon, principal of Laseall Seminary, for license to put in one fifteen horse power engine and one twenty-five horse power boiler for the purpose of lighting the seminary by electricity. The petition was received and a hearing appointed for Monday, Sept. 25, at eight o'clock, also a hearing on the same date at 8.15 o'clock on petition of M. A. Robinson for five horse power engine and boiler on Crescent street.

A MUNIFICENT OFFER.

A communication was received from a committee appointed by the Newton Atheneum Association, consisting of Messrs. Lucius G. Pratt, S. E. Howard and Lawrence Bond. They offer as a gift to the city of Newton the books, comprising nearly 6000 volumes, furniture and fixtures owned by the Atheneum valued at about $1250, providing the property remains at W. St. Newton and is maintained as a branch of the Newton Free Library. The communication was referred to the trustees of the library.

SOLD LOW.

Alderman Hunt presented a communication from members of the fire department also members of the Newton Veterans Firemen's association, requesting the city to give to the Association the old Truck 0 building on Austin street, to be placed on a lot of land purchased by the association.

Alderman Hunt said the committee could get but $150 for the building and under the circumstances he would move that the building be sold to the Veterans Firemen's Association for the sum of $1, and that license be granted them to move the same. The motion prevailed and an order was passed later for its sale.

NEGLECTED STREET.

A communication was received from C. W. Carter of Woodbine street complaining of the neglected condition in which the street remains, to the annoyance of the residents a d constituting a nuisance in its unkempt state. An ironical reference was made to a department that did not clean up a street but once in a year, and had not heeded various petitions, and in view of the prevalence of malaria there, probably from this cause, some action by the authorities was earnestly requested. Referred to the highway department.

A PROPER CLAIM.

Alderman in Roffe called the attention of the board to a communication from Capt.

J. E. Cousens of Sumner street, claiming damages in the sum of $200. His house had been entirely cut off from proper access to the street for five weeks because of the sewer work which was commenced last fall. The earth was piled on the sidewalk, and his lawn, preventing teams from reaching the house and necessitating the erection of a bridge to get from his door to the street, over the large pile of earth. An open lot side of the house was used as a dump. Referred.

Alderman Thompson moved to allow the Prospect Lodge of Good Templars, the free use of City Hall, Sunday, Sept. 17, but after an explanation from City Messenger Wellington of the work and expense entailed in getting the hall ready in consequence of the children engineers now at work there, the motion was withdrawn.

FROM THE LOWER BRANCH.

The mayor submitted the following business from the common council which was passed: an order for the adoption Sec. 4 to 12 of the public statutes relating to inspection of buildings; a petition from A. C. Walworth to re-surface Mill street, referred; a petition from R. S. Gorham for laying out Berkeley street to Temple street, referred; a petition from G. A. Blaney, Prince street, to lay out Sewall and Sterling streets, referred; also petitions for three incandescent lights on Dalton and two incandescent lights on Cook street, referred.

ORDERS.

Alderman Thompson presented an order which was passed, to round the corners of Temple and Prospect streets.

An order was passed assessing betterments on account of the laying out of Churchill street, amounting in total to $794.

An order was passed authorizing the laying out of Edinboro street, from Watertown to Lowell street, and assessing betterments.

The sum of $53 was appropriated for the purchase of a lot containing 290 square feet of land on Watertown near Adams street.

An order authorizing the laying out of sidewalks on Hunnewell avenue and terrace, and Woodland avenue, was passed.

Orders authorizing the laying out of the central boulevard from the Boston line to Valentine street; laying out Lake terrace; laying out Newbury street from Beacon to Crescent street, and laying out Exeter street, were passed, and hearings on the same ordered for Sept. 22 at 7.30 o'clock before the aldermen, and Oct. 9 at 7.45, before the common council.

Alderman Hunt submitted a report assessing the estates on various streets as provided by Schedule 13, which was accepted.

Orders were passed to take land and lay sewers in Trowbridge avenue, Kirk-stall road, Cottage court, Exeter street, Greenwood avenue, Lewis terrace and private land between Paul and Centre streets.

An order appropriating $1445 for laying water mains in Boylston, Cottage, off Oak, Regent and Orchard streets, was passed.

Alderman Roffe reported, recommending the granting of the petition of P. Donahoe for moving building to West street. Accepted and granted.

The mayor was authorized to quick claim 3078 square feet of land near the Prospect school house to the Pettie Machine Works, at 15 cents per square foot, providing no building shall be built there as long as the Prospect school house is used for school purposes.

Alderman Roffe presented an order that the building ordinance be passed to be ordained.

Alderman Thompson asked if the water board buildings were included. It was found they were not and after a short discussion the motion of Alderman Roffe was tabled.

The board then adjourned.

Common Council.

The lower branch met in regular session Monday evening, with President Weed in the chair.

The session was a very quiet one, the business which came down being passed in concurrence, without a single exception.

The order authorizing the city treasurer to sell and dispose of 100 bonds of the denomination of $1000 each of the Newton Boulevard loan, tabled July 31st, was taken from the table and passed.

Also the order for a loan of $50,000 for the new school house at Newton Highlands, was taken from the table and passed.

The council adjourned early.

Value of Gold and Silver.

To the Editor of the GRAPHIC:

It seems to be the general impression, that the value of gold and silver depend chiefly on their demand to coin for money, that is not so. Their demand for other uses, utensils, gifts, ornaments, etc., etc., is ten times greater than for money, and it is that other demand, combined with the fact that they are the only material that nature produces susceptible of endless division and subdivision from pennies to hundreds of pounds, that creates and maintains their value, thus fitting them for money, for all time, with no legislation whatever, except certification of weight and fineness, which is coinage. As to their use as the international medium of exchange, it is theirs in their own right, subject of course to the laws of demand and supply, which take care of itself in the best possible way if let alone. Which as regards our National coin should be fixed and without change from one century to another, practically, it would be the best of all its own level.

The greatest of all the causes of the depreciation of silver to-day, is the hard times produced by a deficiency of circulating medium, which comes of the want of any principle of adaptation of the volume of currency, to population and business.

When the greenback system was once tried, it worked perfectly, wanting only the proper adaptation to population.

Legal tender of course, it was just as good from one generation to another, with nothing to bind it, as if every dollar was covered by a gold dollar in vault, and the benefit to the whole people of the country, would be absolutely beyond estimate.

OUR OLDEST CHURCH.

A BRIEF HISTORY OF ST. MARY'S AT LOWER FALLS.

Probably but few of our people are aware that one of the oldest church edifices in Massachusetts is located at Newton Lower Falls. In 1812 the corner stone of St. Mary's Episcopal church was laid with impressive ceremony, and in 1813 or 1814 it was opened for services.

The corner stone was laid by Bishop Griswold, assisted by a number of the clergy and the Grand Master of the Free Masons of Massachusetts.

The building is a typical old English church, minus the ivy, and in the close, is the burying ground, where repose many of the saints "who from their labors rest," among whom is Dr. Beary, one of the early rectors of the church.

While normally a Newton parish, St. Mary's may be claimed by Wellesley as almost her own, for quite a large number of the parishioners are old Wellesley residents, located all the way from Judge Abbott's residence down to Charles River, at Wellesley Falls, and a majority of the "Wardens and Vestry" reside in Wellesley. Wellesley Farms also has quite a number of parishioners, and that part of Weston joining Wellesley also contributes some most helpful workers in the Hubbard, Blake and Young families. The senior warden, Samuel Warren, Esq., also lives on the edge of Weston, as does also Mr. Jennings, one of the vestry.

But Wellesley and Weston do not alone make this parish, for on the Newton side of the river are many of the old families who, for generation after generation have been earnest workers for St. Mary's. Ex-Governor Rice was a boy in St. Mary's Sunday school, and the various branches of that family are still communicants there.

It is a notable fact that when people are called away to live, no matter how long they stay away, they seem to carry old St. Mary's with them "in memory dear." This has had practical illustration during the past year. As is well known, it was voted something more than a year ago to organize a boy choir. This necessitated some changes. The organ had to be moved down stairs, choir stalls built, and choir rooms prepared. It was expected that by strict economy this might be done for about $700. When it was known abroad, however, checks came in for sums both large and small, some of them from quite a distance, so that instead of the meagre accommodations at first planned the parish was able to build a new recessed chancel, and, besides the new choir room and rector's room, a passage was built connecting the church with the parish house. An elegant set of massive oak choir stalls were given, and were built to match the beautiful oaken pulpit placed there some time ago in memory of Mrs. Judge Abbott. A beautiful stone altar has already been placed in the church, and a series of stained glass windows, one of the Stock family, former residents here. A handsome gilt reredos and hangings were placed over the altar in memory of the lamented Judge Abbott, who with his wife repose in the church yard. A well known Wellesley Hills artist did the decorating of the church and chancel. In all about $2,000 was contributed, and the improvement all paid for, which is a most gratifying evidence of the fond interest of both resident and absent parishioners.

The choir of twenty-five boys and men under the instruction of Mr. John Batchelder, is now fully organized, and each week shows some improvement not only in the quality of tone, but in their expression. Mr. Batchelder is a thorough musician. He is a pupil of Baermann on the piano and of S. B. Whitney on the organ, besides which he spent two or three years in England studying the boy choir of the English cathedral.

The boys of this choir are paid according to their worth and the regularity of attendance at rehearsals, and, besides the money they earn, they acquire valuable musical experience. Alto voices are much needed and three or four good alto boys would be paid a good salary. It is planned to have some very interesting choral services the coming fall and winter to which the community will be heartily welcomed.

The present rector, Rev. H. U. Monro, is a young man barely forty, most genial in his bearing toward all, whether rich or poor. He organized and built the Mission church for sailors at East Boston, before he came to St. Mary's, previous to which he was for some years assistant rector of St. John's, Boston Highlands, under Rev. Dr. Converse. He is a man of broad tolerance, not only towards those outside the Episcopal fold, but also towards those of differing theological views in his own communion. There is probably no parish in the diocese where this beautiful spirit of tolerance is more clearly exemplified than in Old St. Mary's, High church, Broad church and Low church all appear by common consent to respect each other's views, and "dwell together in harmony and in the bond of love," unitedly trying to do what each can for our Lord's church.

Services are held at 10:45 a. m. until October 1st, after which date evening services will be resumed. There are also week day celebration of the Holy Communion on all saints days and feasts of the church, and a most cordial welcome is extended to visitors.

Business Improving.

Business in the factories in this vicinity is improving.

The employees of Lewando's dye house are now working five full days each week, against 32 hours, as has been the rule for several weeks past. The Stanley Dry Plate Company on Maple Street is to start up at once with all hands, and has orders to keep the plant booming for fully two months. Thomas Dalby & Co., on Morse street are running, and the plant has been enlarged so that nearly double the present number of hands will be employed in the near future. In Watertown the Harvard mills are in a running five days a week, against four a few weeks ago. The Hollingsworth & Whitney paper mill and Union Bag Co. are running full time and taking on additional hands. Many of the men who were laid off when the Walker & Pratt foundry shut down are working there, and many of the girls formerly employed at the Waltham Watch Factory have been given work.

A new concern which will manufacture pencil sharpeners has leased the old Barker shirt works on Spring street and will commence operations shortly. The Hickory Cycle Company is working more hours and employing more men. A New York piano concern is looking over the old pulp factory on Howard street with a view of settling in Watertown.

Every concern with the exception of the foundry and one of the shirt factories is running, and these places are expected to start up before the end of the month.

BIDDING GOODBYE TO HIS OWN BODY.

Farewell, dear body! I have thrilled you through With all the love that angels ever knew!
Sometimes with towering rage and mischief spice

That would drive Lucifer out of paradise!
Sometimes with kindred spirits we have met
In high symposium that I can't forget!
How can we part? Alas I cannot stay.
Here ends the long, sweet, sad, delightful way.

I mourn for you. I feel sensation creep
That would be tears, but spirits do not weep.
How have I bathed, protected, petted you,
With constant care your lightest wish to do!
What heavenly beauty I have known in you,
Those shapely limbs, with bright blood mantling through.

The supreme air of heavenly forms above,
Bright image of our God, whose name is love!
The Master calleth me! I must fulfill My destined course and meet his holy will.

All aching, full of love, dear form, I tell
The parting hour is come. Sweet clay, farewell!
Now I arise above the days and hours,
But thou must rest among the birds and flowers.

MY FRIEND'S WIFE.

After all I am going to marry Lucile. It is more than a year since poor Robethon died, and—perhaps I am a donkey to do it at my time of life, but she is unquestionably a charming woman. She made him happy, and—I am afraid I am a fool. I feel, however, as though I owed it almost to his memory, and something to her too. Yes, there is no doubt I owe her something in that line—and yet, good heavens, I am not doing it on that account. I love her desperately, down to the ground.

"Dick," she said to me yesterday, looking straight at me with her wonderful blue eyes—"Dick, why do you ask me—how?"

"Better late than never," I answered. She began, "Five, six years ago you"—and stopped.

"I know. I was a fool, Lucille. I never once thought of it though. You see, the idea was foreign to me. I never intended to marry."

"And now?"

"With your kind assistance I do intend to."

"Why?"

Her question almost bowled me over. I gazed at the carpet, wondering how I could best put it to her. Presently I looked up, and as our eyes met I blurted out, "Because I love you, of course."

I did not mean to say that just then. The truth is that the idea of "reparation" had got sole possession of my brain, and how to express it grieved me.

Lucille laughed lightly. "That, Dick, is a second thought, and not a bad one for a man who is offering himself as a husband. Still, I want your first."

"I was thinking that, love apart, you have a moral claim upon me."

A great wave of color rose and fell, leaving her beautiful face pale as marble. "A claim—really? A moral claim? Why moral? Why not material? When I turn huckster, Dick, I will traffic only for gold."

I saw what she meant. Love's gifts, being no impoverishment of love, entail no indebtedness upon the recipient. Love is paid for its gift in the giving. This, I thought, was a counsel of perfection and better suited to angels and angels loves than to men and women in an earthly, highly conventional and British society.

"And that is why you wish to marry me?" she asked.

I felt that I was on thin ice. "No, darling, it is not. I love you. There's no harm in that, I hope?"

"No, not a bit. It is a very good reason. Genuine, Dick?"

"Quite, on my honor."

"The honor of an English gentleman—more, of an English gentleman—that is good still, of a well tried friend—that is good enough for me. Here's my hand on it, Dick."

That was only yesterday. It seems 20 years ago. Poor Robethon—he knew little. I do not think I was to blame. I acted loyally enough by him. It was like this, you see. Robethon and I were pretty close friends. I spent much of my time at his clubs, and at one or other of them I was always coming across Robethon. The taste for chess was mutual and was the ground of our first acquaintance. We were about the same age—heading fast for 50. He was short and stout; I was long and lean.

I had been all over the world, while he had never been outside of England. Sometimes I fancied he had never been outside of London. If he had, he was careful to conceal the fact. We were both bachelors. His chambers were close to St. James street, mine to Piccadilly. We never visited each other though. He was partner in a well known firm of bankers, but had not entered their place of business for 20 years. He had read a world beyond me and was a gentle, sympathetic, clean souled gentleman.

I wish I could say as much truthfully of myself; no false modesty should keep me from writing it down. Still Robethon cared for me, and I am drenched sure I cared for him. His reticence was characteristic of the man; it was like a suit of steel armor covering him from head to foot. Sometimes I think it was, fundamentally, shyness—not of the ordinary kind, of which there was not a trace about him, but deep spiritual shyness. On the other hand, it might have been due to an austere selectness of spirit, a sensitive, delicate pride of soul. The clubmen held him in great esteem, in a manner he was proud of, and he considered him an authority on disputed points of honor and the like and accepted his judgment with docility and reverence.

One day I met a lady on Pall Mall—tall, fair, straight as a dart and with a face that fell on me like a vision. I turned and watched her, and while so doing she suddenly halted, turned around and came toward me. I stood still. In passing she gave me a momentary glance. Ha, she was very lovely!

A month or six weeks later there was a reception at a certain foreign embassy, and I happened to be present. It was not my kind of thing at all, but I chanced to be an old acquaintance of the ambassador in question. There was a big crowd, and dancing was in full swing. Tossing by the ballroom, I stood for a moment to watch the dancers. The first thing I saw was the lady of Pall Mall, gloriously arrayed, waltzing with a German.

"Who is she?" I asked a man I knew. "Which one? Oh, that divine symphony of color there, eh? That is Mrs. Trenchard."

"And who is Mrs. Trenchard?" "He shook his head. 'She's a widow; that's all I know. She is in the swim; wonder you haven't met her before. I have, half a dozen times; but I live up to my principles, of which the first is, Thou shalt not do—anything in this widow line.'"

I left him grinning. I could have kicked him without any remorse. From another man I gleaned that Trenchard had been in the Indian political service and had died suddenly. In certain lines men are dolts and women creatures of genius. A woman there, a dear old dowager, told me in five minutes all I wanted to know. Her people were all dead, she was a lady of birth and breeding, she had none too much money, she was very popular and very correct, and—would I like an introduction? Five minutes later I made my first bow to the divine symphony. She was gloriously generous, gave herself to me for 10 whole minutes, and when I withdrew she murmured, with a graciousness that seemed regal, "Perhaps we shall meet again."

We did meet, again and again. Our acquaintance ripened into friendship and finally into very close intimacy. I saw her at least once every week. This went on for three or four years. Between me and Robethon she was a forbidden subject. I knew it would only pain him. For the same reason I never once mentioned Robethon's name to her.

It was December. Robethon and I, as usual, were lunching at the same table. All at once he said, "I am married."

"Married! God forbid!"

"I have been married a month."

"In that case it would be brutal not to wish you joy."

"With all the pleasure in the world. But it is like a dream."

He laughed like a man on the right side of the hedge as he said: "Yes, it's like a dream—a beautiful dream. Come as early as you can."

I think I felt a trifle hurt that such a revolution in his domestic economy should have occurred without his informing me of it, but I was none the less curious to see the woman who made so notable a capture. In these days it is the men and not the women who are captured. I was very punctual. The rest of the folks were of course late. Robethon met me in the courtroom.

"Bagot," he said, "this is very good of you. I've been thinking I ought to have told you sooner, but—I'll tell you how it happened and all about it at the club."

"Meanwhile, Robethon, one word. Are you happy?"

"As a king."

"No secret regrets, eh?"

"Not the ghost of one. She is perfect. Come, you must see her."

Arm in arm we entered the drawing room. She was alone. I saw a vision of amber colored silk and fluttering lace and heard him say, "Lucile, this is my dear friend, General Bagot."

Then for the first time I saw her face. It was my own fair lady of Pall Mall! What she felt I do not know. "Good God!" broke involuntarily from my lips, and I had just sense enough to turn to Robethon and tell him in an aside that a sudden and awful twinge of gout had seized me. Women, being born intriguers, are nimble witted by nature and acquirement. When our eyes met a second time, the lady was perfectly self possessed and instinct with sympathy over my dreadful gout.

The attack was soon over. The dinner, I believe, was good and the company smart and lively people. My anecdotes went off like champagne corks, and I fancy I created for myself a reputation for brilliancy which, happily, I do not feel it my duty to live up to. For myself, I do not know what I said, did, ate, drank or thought. I was in a maze. Later in the evening I saw her alone for five minutes.

"By all that's wonderful, Lucile, what does it mean?" I asked.

"Just what you see. I am Mrs. Robethon," she answered, fluttering her fan. "But—he is my friend. Not for world's would I."

"No, it would be awkward."

"Awkward! Listen, Lucile. The curtain being down, there are some plays may never be revived."

She looked at me for some moments. Then she said: "That is true. If I had thought only of myself, Dick, it would have been I and not you who would have been the first to say, 'There are some plays may never be revived.'"

"Forgive me! I know it. But"— "Not another word. We are alike in our thoughts of him. We will be loyal to him to the end. Still, we are friends, Dick, all the same."

And now my turn has come. Poor Robethon has gone, and, after all, I am going to marry Lucile. What an odd world it is!—Chicago Post.

Egyptian Cats Fond of the Water.

By some persons the popularity of the cat in Egypt has been attributed to the fact that the animal was valuable in ridding the palaces of rats and mice and also in hunting fowl. There are several paintings in the British museum, executed by ancient Egyptian artists, representing Egyptian sportsmen in boats on the river Nile, accompanied by large cats, sitting on their haunches in the stern. Other pictures show the cats swimming with birds in their mouths after the manner of retriever dogs. These pictures have greatly perplexed modern naturalists because the cat of today has a strong aversion to water, and it is difficult to reconcile such different traits even after the lapse of thousands of years.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

A VILANELLE.

Love in the dawn is honey sweet—
Sweet to the taste and fair to the sight;
Kisses are balm when young lips meet.

The heart in the throes of its first white heat
Burns, a meteor shining bright;
Love in the dawn is honey sweet.

Enjoy while you can such moments fleet—
Those transient joys of a fond delight;
Kisses are balm when young lips meet.

Glad as the morrow, Marguerite,
Are your girlish face and your bosom white;
Love in the dawn is honey sweet.

The lilies smile at our very feet,
The roses blush to our left and right;
Kisses are balm when young lips meet.

Wedded today in this lower discreet
Our lives shall fall upon lives of light;
Love in the dawn is honey sweet—
Kisses are balm when young lips meet!

Met With a Serious Fall.

"You are very late this morning, Mr. Baldwin," said a dry goods merchant recently to one of his clerks. "Do not let it happen again."

"Very sorry," said the clerk humbly. "I met with a serious fall."

"Indeed," replied the merchant, relenting. "Are you hurt much?"

"Principally, sir, in your estimation," answered the clerk respectfully.

"Oh, never mind that," said the merchant kindly. "I am very sorry and had no intention to be severe. We are all liable to accidents. How did you get the fall?"

"Well, you see, sir," said the clerk confidently, "I was called quite early this morning—earlier, in fact, than usual."

"Ah!"

"Yes, sir; but somehow or other I fell asleep again."

"Go to your desk, sir, and don't try that on again," exclaimed the merchant with an air of severity which was belied by the twinkle in his eye, which denoted that he enjoyed the joke.—New York Herald.

Lightning's Strange Selection.

Probably one of the most remarkable lightning accidents of the period was that which took place in one of the eastern counties lately. A man was shearing a sheep. Another man, passing on a pony, stopped to exchange a few words with the shearer and watch the clipping operation for a minute or two. He had been standing there but a very short time when a sharp crack of thunder was preceded by a blinding flash of lightning. The shearer was startled almost out of his senses by seeing the pony and its rider suddenly collapse in a heap, but in a second the man was up, quite unhurt. Then the shepherd, happening to glance at the animal beneath him, found that the lightning had served it as it had served the pony. The sheep was stone dead! This, it may be as well to state, is a perfectly true story.—London Tit-Bits.

French Politeness.

Suppose French politeness is a myth, it is one to be cultivated the world over. Even the humblest peasant in the smallest province is endowed with an all conquering courtesy that is brought into play in the most commonplace matters. If our men could only be taught some of it, how much more easily would run the wheels of life's machinery! Business is business, of course. The rush and worry of money getting dwarf the real nature, yet at the same time stocks would not so irregularly, bills would not be so less ready to be paid, panics would occur no more frequently if the arbitrators of great affairs would but remember to bring into their business life a little more of the softening influence or refined courtesies that are the flowers in a meadow of rank weeds.—New York World.

The Best Language for Telephoning.

The French language, it appears, is better adapted to the purpose of the telephone than the English. It is stated that the large number of syllable or his syllables in English renders it a less easy and accurate means of communication. Some English words are especially difficult of transmission by telephone. The word "soldier" is cited as one of these. Proper names frequently occur in the midst of an otherwise perfectly audible and intelligent conversation which the ear cannot possibly catch. These must be spelled out, involving delay.—Electricity.

Considerable Mutuality.

Mrs. Lakeside—You are Mr. Porkchop's second wife, are you not?

Mrs. Porkchop—Yes, he was married once before.

"That's unpleasant. Whenever you have a little row, he can bring up his first wife and brag about her goodness."

"He never tried that but once, and then I told him about what nice men my three other husbands were."—Texas Siftings.

An Illustration.

"There," said Miss Frances E. Willard, closing her list and presenting it as an object lesson to her interested audience, "is union—and that"—suddenly letting every separate finger fly limply apart, "is diversity. Which is the stronger?"

The Lydians had gold coins at the close of the ninth century, B. C., and Greece proper at about the close of the eighth century. The Romans coined their first silver in the year 281, B. C., and gold 73 years later.

THE BOULEVARD LOAN.

The Common Council passed the famous Boulevard loan order, Monday night, which was tabled at their last meeting in July, so that now the bonds can be issued as soon as may be desired. With the present improved condition of the money market, there would probably be little trouble in finding a market for them, so that the work of building that portion of the boulevard from the Boston line to Centre street could be begun in a short time, if it was thought desirable.

It is true that the time limit has been removed, but in the present state of the labor market it would seem to be the duty of the city to undertake such a work as this, which would furnish employment to a great number of men, and aid them to lay up something for the coming winter, when they will not be able to work. This might be called the humanitarian view, but it is one that should have its influence.

Another argument of a more selfish character is, that if the boulevard is to be of such great benefit to the city as all predict, why should this benefit be deferred any longer than is absolutely necessary. The land is there, all ready to be developed, and the real estate records of Brookline, for an example, show that wealthy men are all the time buying desirably situated land on which to build handsome houses, either for themselves or for others. There is no doubt but that if the boulevard were ready to be opened to the public by next spring, before the following winter much of the land would be sold, and many new houses started. To keep taxes low we must have more people in Newton, and the boulevard is confidently expected to attract those people who will make a good showing on the Assessors' books.

No one seems to doubt of the wisdom of putting the boulevard scheme through, except perhaps some who wanted it to run in another direction, so as to benefit their land, and if a thing is worth doing, the sooner it is done the better, both for the parties directly interested and for the city, and considerable pressure will probably be directed towards the members of the city government to induce them to begin work at once. They should not imitate the example of the National Senate over the repeal of the Sherman bill, and we have no doubt prompt action would be taken if the city fathers felt that public opinion demanded it.

The Boston Transcript gives this very sensible comment on the present contest for the governorship:

When a contest becomes animated for any elective nomination, shrewd politicians immediately cry out for some "dark horse," meaning a candidate who has not made enemies in the ranks of the principal contending parties, who are declared unavailable simply because antagonisms have been aroused by the energetic canvass they may have conducted. But there are "dark horses" with negative qualities, and "dark horses" with positive qualities, men who are averse to an undignified scramble for official position, but who would honor any position they would accept. If the Republican State Convention should be compelled to nominate for governor a dark horse of this description, it might prove a fortunate solution of the trouble into which the Republican party of Massachusetts has been plunged by the competition for the gubernatorial prize.

There was an interesting hearing on the question of the extension of the boulevard from Centre street to Auburndale, before the board of aldermen, Monday night, and Mr. Blaney showed the earnest way in which Boston is taking hold of the extension of the boulevard, and the probability that it will be built at least as soon as the Newton part. There were some remonstrances, of course, from people who object to losing part of their land, but they will none of them object very strenuously to receiving proper damages, and the hearing gave emphasis to the fact that all the large land owners are heartily in favor of the extension.

NEWTON HIGHLANDS will feel quite puffed up now that the order for its new $50,000 school house has passed both branches of the city council. The old Hyde school building is certainly unworthy of such an enterprising portion of the city, and has been an eyesore to the residents for years, besides being very uncomfortable for the occupants. It is a large sum to pay for a school building, but then it is to be so thoroughly constructed, that it will last for generations, so it is said.

CAMBRIDGE has passed a bicycle ordinance, regulating the speed to 8 miles an hour, and calling for a bell to warn travellers of its approach, which must be sounded when the bicycle is within 20 feet of any vehicle, horse or foot passenger. No bicycle is to be allowed on sidewalks, but there is nothing said about carrying lighted lanterns at night.

NEWTON MAN FOR CONSUL.

MR. CHARLES W. SHEPARD FOR THE PLACE AT SWANSEA, WALES.
(Boston Herald.)

Some of the Herald's esteemed contemporaries have busied themselves for the past two days in trying to locate one Edward Shepard of this city, mentioned in a Herald dispatch from Washington, Sept. 6, as one whose application for consul to Swansea, Wales, is before the President.

Most of the Shepards living in Boston have been interviewed by reporters of these papers, with the result that no aspiring consul has been found.

The man is Charles W. Shepard of the firm of Shepard & Co., in the iron business at No. 147 High street, Boston. His home is in West Newton.

Mr. Shepard is 46 years old, is married and has two children. He is a good looking man with black hair and mustache tinged with gray. He has been a resident of Newton 23 years, and has been connected with the iron trade of Boston 28 years.

Although holding no office, he has been identified with local and state politics. He is a tariff reform Democrat, and as such was first prominent in the Theodore Lyman campaign of 1882. Mr. Shepard is one of the Democratic ward and city committee of Newton. He also belongs to the Newton Tariff Reform League and the Young Men's Democratic Club of Massachusetts.

Swansea's prominence as the principal seaport of South Wales is well known, also its connection with the far-famed tin plate industry.

The present incumbent of the office is Charles N. Holton of the state of Washington.

Mr. Shepard first made application for the position, the holder of which is styled "commercial agent and consul," on March 4 last. He is endorsed by a long list of Democrats and tariff reformers irrespective of party, by the mayor, board of aldermen, ex-mayors, bank officers and various other officials of Newton, and by every firm of any prominence in the iron trade of this city, including in the latter list being Bellows & Manson, Fitz, Dana & Co., Austin & Dote, Weeds, Robinson & Co., William H. Horne & Co., Bullard & Post, Dodge, Haley & Co., Harrington, Robinson & Co., E. P. Cutter & Co., Henry W. Lamb, Holder & Herrick, Horace P. Tobey, Chase, Parker & Co., Francis, State & Co., Studley & Simpson, Wetherell Bros., Bacon & Co., Brown, McClure & Wailes, Houghton & Richards, A. Milne & Co., George B. Topf, George O. Wales & Co., N. S. Bartlett & Co., Page, Newell & Co., The Foundry Supply Company, Sylvester & Co., Charles E. Brigham, Park Brothers & Co. (limited), Charles T. Richardson, Howe, Brown & Co. (limited) and B. M. Jones & Co.

The position sought is a business one and is in no sense political or diplomatic. The business of the firm of Shepard & Co. is confined mostly to cotton ties and structural iron. Mr. Shepard has given considerable time to the study of subjects in the line of work for which he has applied, and is well fitted for the position.

Mr. Quincy is expected to fill the place in these, the last, days of his secretaryship.

THE SEA ISLANDS QUESTION.

AN APPEAL FOR HELP FROM NEWTON PEOPLE.

The storm which has devastated the Sea Islands off the coast of South Carolina has been one of the most severe ever known. The details of the ruin and destruction in its path are heart rending, over 300 dead bodies have been found about Beaufort and Port Royal. On every door knob is a bunch of crape. On every hill side are freshly made graves, while others are being made to be filled by the bodies hourly discovered in the underground of trees, the beaches, the marshes and inlets. Although this section of the Atlantic coast is prolific of storms, none has ever been known of such fury, and that has scattered such destruction and death. The wind took on a great velocity. As night advanced it increased until it attained a speed of 130 miles an hour. Houses were blown away, trees uprooted, the wind alone was enough to terrorize any community, and added to it was blinding rain, vivid lightning and deafening peals of thunder; a woman died of sheer fright. All through the night men guarded their women and children as if protecting them from some deadly fire. In farm houses and out in boats men were each minute expecting death or praying for deliverance. In the morning the rain ceased, the sky was clear, the sun came out, and everywhere were the evidences of the great convulsion of nature. Ships rising on dry land, houses sometimes whole miles away from their foundations, trees twisted and scattered about, lifeless forms thrown up by the rains, or left by them, swollen, distorted and bruised. There are 7000 people left on the Islands without food or shelter.

Governor Tillman has issued a proclamation to the people of South Carolina, "both white and colored," to come hastily to the relief of these unfortunate people. The following is from a private letter sent a West Newton lady, which records the personal experience of the wife of an officer stationed at Port Royal. The simple narrative shows more than any superlative, the terrible experience of the storm and its consequences.

U. S. STATION,
Port Royal, Sept. 3, '93.
My dear J.—We are still alive, but may we never pass through such a night again! It was fearful. Our house was in the midst of a raging sea, the waves dashing up against it, and the spray coming in. It was a night of horror, the wind blowing a fearful gale. The tide commenced to go down, but a tidal wave brought back the water with greater fury.

The dead were lying all over the Islands. The people are homeless, hungry and without clothes, their houses blown down. Beaufort suffered badly, Port Royal also. We were cut off from all communication. Mrs. R. had thirty in her house the night of the storm, who came in from their falling houses. Dear old Dr. Hopel lost his life in trying to save two little colored children.

Dear old man, he was so kind and good! We kept our door open to have a place to get out if the house should give way. It was not so far from the help, the people will die of starvation. God help them!

Mrs. R. and ourselves feed over 100 families, but our provisions are getting low, but we do something for all who come. Perhaps you can collect some old clothes and things for these poor people. It is all so horrible! Some day I will tell you of the many sad sights we have seen and heard of.

Any money for food or cast off clothing or anything to relieve this suffering may be sent directly to Geo. Mackay, C. E. U. S. Naval Station, Port Royal, or to Mrs. Charles Hastings, Temple street, West Newton, who is preparing barrels to be sent at once.

Newton High School Foot Ball Team.

Newton High will enter the Senior League this year with a team very similar to that which won the championship of the Junior League. Several of the old men are back and there seems at present to be quite an amount of good material. The team will probably be about as heavy as last year's team.

Back of the line Brown and Redpath are last year's men and make two excellent backs. Either one or the other will play full back.

Cobb on left end also played last year and is a hard, sure-tackler. He also blocks well. Paul at guard was equal to any man whom he lined up against last year, and may always be depended upon in a game. Knox who played quarter back will probably play on the line as he has increased considerably in weight and is now one of the heaviest men in the team. He is a strong, aggressive player and blocks his opponent well.

Among the new men Barnum, a last year's substitute, is a promising candidate or half. He follows his blockers and very seldom fails to make a gain.

Blanchard and Gilbert are candidates for the position of quarter. Both have had some experience but have not played on the school team. Knox may play here if he does not go on the line.

Sawyer and Springer, with practice should develop into good center-men. They have considerable weight, but lack experience.

Other candidates for positions on the line are Lee, Cotting, Van Voorhees, Dinmore and Fussen. At present it is too early to predict where they will play as practice so far has been only preliminary. After the tennis tournament more men will probably come out.

Brown will captain the team. This is his third year on the team. He uses his head at all times in a game and under his leadership the men should give a good account of themselves. The first game will be played with Needham on Saturday, Sept. 23.

Mr. Hale not a Candidate.

To the Editor of the GRAPHIC:—

The report has been circulated that I desire the nomination for Representative in my behalf. I take this opportunity of stating that I am not a candidate for the nomination, and could not accept it under any circumstances. Thanking my friends for their kind intentions, I am

Foot Ball.

At a meeting held last winter at the B. A. A., steps were taken to form a Suburban Foot Ball League. Representatives were present from Newton, West Roxbury, Dedham, Lynn, Needham and Natick. A constitution was drawn up and the organization placed on a firm footing.

A meeting was held September first and Dedham and Natick having withdrawn, it was decided to have the League consist of only five teams, and Brookline was admitted to fill the vacancy.

The eleven representing Newton will be under the auspices of the recently formed Newton Athletic Association. Each team plays every other and the prize offered is a one hundred dollar cup to be presented to the team winning the championship three years. All home games will be played on the new playground at Newton Centre.

Following is a list of the practice games already arranged, and also the league schedule:

THE SECTARY.

A heavy hand the bruised head to break,
A foot to quench the smoking flask well shed,
A bitter zeal, alert and keen to make
The breach more wide between mankind and God.
A visage stern that bids all stand apart
Who dare to worship at a different shrine,
A sullen mood, a cold and sluggish heart,
Unwarmed by any pulse of love divine.
A tongue in chiding swift, in praising slow,
A practiced eye his fellows' faults to scan—
These are the attributes by which men know
The sectary, unloved by God or man.
—London Spectator.

THE QUIET MAN.

When I was quite a young fellow and hadn't long joined the army, I used to belong to a fashionable club in London, the members of which were just the sort of men you read about in Lever's novels—as wild as wild could be, always in some scrape or other, and spending their whole time in riding, shooting, gambling or fighting—all except one.

That one was a small, quiet, pale faced, gray haired man, with a very sad, weary look, as if he had once been crushed by some great sorrow and had never been able to shake it off. He hardly ever spoke to any one, and when he did it was in a voice as meek as his face. So of course we made great fun of him among ourselves, finding these quiet ways of his a very queer contrast to our own rascally, harum scarum style, and we nicknamed him the "Quietest Man in the Club," though, indeed, we might just as well have called him the only quiet man in it.

Well, one evening when the room was pretty full, and our friend the quiet man was sitting as usual in the far corner away from everybody else, we began to talk about dueling, a subject with which we were all tolerably familiar, for there was hardly a man among us who hadn't been "out" once.

"They did some time dueling in the old times," said Lord H., who was killed afterward in action. "You remember how those six chums of Henry III of France fought three to three till there was only one left alive out of the six."

"That was pretty fair certainly," cried Charlie Thornton of the Guards, "but after all it doesn't beat the great duel 30 years ago between Sir Harry Martingale and Colonel Fortescue."

He had hardly spoken when up jumped the quiet man as if somebody had stuck a pin into him.

"What on earth's the matter with him?" whispered Thornton. "I never saw him like that before."

"But what was the story, then, Charlie?" asked another man, "I've heard of Fortescue, of course, for he was the most famous duelist of his time in all England, and I've heard of his fight with Martingale, too, but I don't think I've ever had any particulars, or at least none worth speaking of."

"I can give them to you, then," answered Thornton: "for my uncle was Martingale's second. I've heard him tell the story many a time, and he always said that although he had been in plenty of duels he had never seen one like that and never wanted to see it again. What they quarreled about I don't know, and I dare say they didn't know themselves, but my uncle used to say he knew by the look in their eyes when they took their places to fight that it could not end without blood, and it didn't."

"They fired twice, and every shot told, and then their seconds, seeing that both men were hard hit and bleeding fast, wanted to put an end to it. But Fortescue—who was one of those grim fellows who are always most dangerous toward the end of the fight—insisted upon a third shot. The third time, by some accident, Martingale fired a moment too soon and gave a him bad wound in the side, but Fortescue pressed his hand to the wound to stop the bleeding, and then, almost bent double with pain though he was, he fired and brought down his man."

"Killed him?"

"Rather. Shot him slap through the heart. But it was his last duel, for from that day he was never heard of again, and people said he had either committed suicide or died of a broken heart."

"Well, I don't see why he need have done that, for, after all, it was a fair fight," struck in Lord H., who had been looking over the newspapers on the table. "But, if you talk of dueling, what do you say to this?"

"Another duelling tragedy in Paris. The notorious Parisian bully and duelist, Armand de Villeneuve, has just added another wreath to his blood stained laurels, the only son of a widowed mother. Some strong expressions of disgust used by the chevalier with reference to one of De Villeneuve's former duels having come to the latter's ears, he sought out De Polignac and insulted him so grossly as to render a meeting inevitable."

"The chevalier having fired first and missed, De Villeneuve called out to him, 'Look to the second buttonhole of your coat!' and sent a bullet through the spot indicated into the breast of his opponent, who expired half an hour later in great agony. His mother is said to be broken hearted at his death. How much longer, we wonder, will this savage be allowed to offer these human sacrifices to his own inordinate vanity?"

Just then I happened to look up and saw the quiet man rise slowly from his chair, with a face so changed that it startled me almost as much as if I had seen him disappear bodily and another man rise up in his stead. I had once seen an oil painting abroad in which an avenging angel was hurling lightning upon Sodom and Gomorrah, and that was just how this man looked at that moment. He glanced at his watch and then came across the room and went quickly out.

The next night, and the next, and the next after that, the quiet man didn't appear at the club and we all began to wonder what could have become of him. But when I came in on the fourth evening, there he was, though he looked—as it seemed to me—rather paler and feebler than usual.

"Here's news for you, Fred," called out Charlie Thornton. "That rascally French duelist, De Villeneuve, has met his match at last, and Dr. Lansett of the—th Bengal Native infantry, who saw the whole affair, is just going to tell us all about it."

"Well, this was how it happened," began the doctor. "In passing through Paris I stopped to visit my old friend, Colonel de Malet, and he and I were strolling through the Tuileries gardens when suddenly a murmur ran through the crowd. 'Here comes De Villeneuve,' then the throng parted, and I had just time to catch a glimpse of the bully's tall figure and long black mustache when a man stepped forth from the crowd and said something to him, and then suddenly dealt him a blow."

"Then there was a rush and clamor of voices, and everybody came crowding round so that I couldn't see anything. But presently Dr. Malet came up to me and said, 'Lansett, we shall want you in this affair, although I'm afraid that you won't have a chance of showing your surgery, for De Villeneuve never wounds without killing.' Just then the crowd opened, and I saw to my amazement that this man who had insulted and defied the most terrible fighter in all France was a slim little fellow, with a pale, meager face."

"As the challenged party, I have the choice of weapons," we heard him say quite coolly, "and I choose swords."

"Are you mad?" cried Dr. Malet, seizing his arm. "Don't you know De Villeneuve's the deadliest swordsman in Europe. Choose pistols—give yourself a chance!"

"Pistols may miss—swords can't," answered the stranger in a tone of such savage determination that every one who heard him, even De Villeneuve himself, shuddered. "I had vowed never to fight again, save with a man who deserved to die. But you have deserved it well by your cold blooded murders, and die you shall!"

"Where both sides were so eager to fight there was no need of much preparation. They met that evening, Colonel de Malet being the stranger's second and another French officer acting for De Villeneuve."

"They fought for some time without a scratch on either side, and then suddenly the Englishman stumbled forward, exposing his left side. Quick as lightning the Frenchman's point darted in, and instantly the other's shirt was all crimson with blood, but the moment he felt the steel pierce him he made a thrust with all his strength and buried his sword up to the hilt in De Villeneuve's body. Then I understood that he had deliberately laid himself open to his opponent's weapon in order to make sure of killing him. So he had, for De Villeneuve never spoke again."

Just as the doctor said this, down fell a chair with a great crash, and looking up we saw the quiet man trying to slip past us to the door. Dr. Lansett sprang up and caught him by both hands.

"You here?" he cried. "Let me congratulate you upon having punished, as he deserved, the most cold hearted duelist in existence. I trust your wound does not pain you much?"

"What?" we all shouted, "was it he who killed De Villeneuve?"

"Indeed it was," answered the doctor, "and it was the pluckiest thing I ever saw."

We all jumped up from our chairs and came crowding round the hero, setting up a cheer that made the air ring, but he looked at us so sadly and darkly that it made the shout die upon our lips.

"Ah, lads! lads!" said he in a tone of deep dejection, "for heaven's sake don't praise a man for having shed blood and destroyed life. I killed that ruffian as I would have killed a wild beast to save those whom he would have slaughtered. But God help the man who shall take a human life merely to gratify his own pride and anger! If you wish to know what happiness a successful duelist enjoys, look me. Do you remember that story which Captain Thornton told here the other night about the duel in which Colonel Fortescue—the famous duelist, as you call him—killed Sir Henry Martingale?"

"To be sure," answered Charlie Thornton, looking rather scared. "But what of it?"

"I was once Colonel Fortescue," was the answer.—Exchange.

Queer Directions About a Funeral.

John Underwood of Whittlesea, Cambridgeshire, who died in 1778, gave directions for a curious funeral. None of his relations was to follow his corpse, which was to be conveyed to the grave by six gentlemen, who were specially desired not to come in black clothes, and during the ceremony were instructed to sing the last stanza of the second book of Horace. The coffin was green, and the deceased was placed in it with all his clothes on. Under his head was placed a copy of Horace, under his feet Bentley's Milton, on his right hand a small Greek Testament and on his left a miniature Horace, while Bentley's Horace was put under his back.

A cold supper at his house followed the ceremony, and after the cloth was taken away the guests repeated the thirty-first ode of the first book of Horace. Each was to receive 10 guineas out of the sum of £6,000 left to the testator's sister on condition of carrying out the will. The will ended with the words, "Which done, I would have them drink a cheerful glass and think no more of John Underwood."—London Tit-Bits.

Mean People in Maine.

You can't poison a bicycle as some cheap people do the dogs which they dislike, but over in Richmond they have strewn tacks in one locality on the principal street so that bicyclists cannot safely ride there, the tires of several fine wheels having been punctured and ruined. What champion mean people we do run across in this country!—Bangor Commercial.

Collecting Canceled Stamps.

What is apparently more useless than canceled postage stamps? And yet there is a store on Michigan avenue where they seem to be in demand. One of the windows is entirely heaped up with present day United States stamps, mostly of the 2 cent denomination. There must be thousands of them, and the observer can only wonder what in the world can be their value. They cannot possess any particular interest to the stamp collector, for they are neither rare nor valuable. To the ordinary person the canceled 2 cent postage stamp seems a worthless thing indeed. Prices paid for such stamps, however, are 10 cents per 1,000, $1 per 10,000, and $15 per 100,000. Many an industrious lad will probably be moved by this offer (as the appearance of the window indeed testifies), and yet the immense labor of collecting 100,000 stamps can be appreciated.

Yet during the Centennial stamps were bought in the same manner, and those who purchased them are today reaping a handsome profit, for the Centennial postage stamp has increased wonderfully in value in a canceled condition during the last few years. As time goes on stamps increase greatly in value, especially stamps issued for one year only on a special occasion like the Centennial or fair. To show how valuable a stamp may become, the writer of this may mention the fact that eight years ago he purchased a first issue English envelope stamp in London for $7.50, and it was at that time worth a great deal more in this country. Now it has probably increased still more.—Detroit Free Press.

A New Theory of Sleep.

Some discussion has been going on concerning Herr Rosenbaum's recently proposed theory of sleep—namely, that the anemic condition of the brain is due to an excess of water in the brain cells of that body. The supposition, as stated, is that sleep is essentially a matter of nervous action, and the direct cause is thought to be fatigue of the nerve cells which communicate with the heart and bring about some change in the circulation. The nerve cells are thus supposed to be full of water when sleep comes on, and this water during sleep passes into the venous blood as waste, and the nerve cells then receive nourishment from fresh arterial blood. Then when the process is entirely over the sleeper awakes.

According to this theory, sleep is not solely healthy because it rests the body and brain, but also because it invigorates them. It is also to be inferred from Rosenbaum's theory that the nerve cells and brains of infants who sleep so much must contain more water than is to be found in those of adults, and that the effectiveness of brain cells is in inverse ratio to the water contents.—New York Tribune.

Old Insurance.

There is in existence a legitimate "graveyard" company. It is a company operating entirely among the very poor and insures a man against pauper burial. The agents of the company put it in less disagreeable terms and offer simply to guarantee decent burial.

The company engages to furnish a grave in a cemetery and see that the insured is respectfully interred therein. If any member of his family dies before him, he is given a deed to a lot in which he may bury his dead.

Some of the large companies issue a policy covering losses from defective title, defalcations by partner, agent or other employee for which a firm may be liable, damage by storm, losses caused by accident to or by steam boilers, engines, lifts, steam pipes, automatic sprinklers or other specified machinery, including all kinds of machinery in use.—Boston Globe.

To Stop a Trolley Car Instantly.

A Rochester man has devised a plan by which a trolley street car can be stopped almost instantaneously, or within a space of three feet, while the car is going at full speed. His device is operated by a lever in the motorman's cab. It is, generally speaking, a steel shoe, upon which the rear wheels of the car ride, the under side of which is corrugated so as to produce great friction upon the rails of the track. On the top of the shoe is an arrangement which, as soon as the wheel rises upon the shoe, clamps the outer rim of the wheel and at the same time grasps the inner edge of the rail. The simple weight of the car crowds down the shoe upon the rail and at the same time clamps together, as in a vise, the wheel and the rail, and all this by a single movement on the part of the motorman.—New York Telegram.

Simple Words the Best.

The following little story is told of a citizen of Port Chester, N. Y., whose education was somewhat superior to his wife's, a fact regarding which she was very sensitive.

On one occasion the man drove over to White Plains to inquire regarding the health of his sister-in-law, who was dangerously ill. Upon returning he was met by his wife, who asked of her sister's condition.

"She is convalescent," replied the man. Immediately and in the most emphatic manner the woman cried out: "I want none of your soothing words. I want facts. You tell me this minute, is my sister dead or alive?"—New York Herald.

The Farmer Was Forgetful.

The Berwick man who took several thousand dollars from the bank, put it in his vest pocket, and then lost the garment was convinced that the banks are yet the best places to keep money. He thought some tramp had stolen the vest, but when later he found vest and money in a grain box where he had foolishly laid it he became more than ever convinced of the security which the Maine banks afford.—Augusta (Me.) DANGER IN WRITING.

EXPERTS SAY THAT SLANTING SCRIPT CAUSES DISEASE.

A Movement In Favor of Vertical Script Backed by the Highest Medical Authorities—Results of Extensive Experiments With School Children.

The method of writing taught in modern schools and practiced by 99 people out of every 100 has been declared dangerous and unhealthful by experts. By the time the next generation matures it will probably have been wiped out. The script then will be vertical instead of slanting, and writers will sit square and upright before their work instead of sideways and stooped, as at present.

The idea of this prospective reform originated in Germany and overreached England while reaching this country. The following resolution was adopted not long ago by the international congress of school hygiene in London by a vote of 229 against 1:

Whereas, The hygienic advantages of vertical writing have been clearly shown and established both by medical investigation and practical experience, and
Whereas, Its introduction obviates those pernicious positions of the body which entail rhabdomyositis and myopia, Resolved, That we recommend the introduction of vertical writing in the schools of the people.

The effect of so serious an action in a country esteeming proper physical conditions as England esteems them is readily to be imagined.

The corresponding movement in the United States is led by Dr. Burnham of Clark university. His investigations have brought the conviction that the ordinary position in writing is among the foremost conditions of school life and methods of training which must be changed in the interest of health. The vertical script, therefore, is strongly recommended. From 80 to 90 per cent of lateral curvature of the spine is found to be caused in school life, the curvature in a large per cent of these cases being toward the right side, as a result of a defective position in writing, and the eyes at the same time are seriously injured by this slanted writing.

The practical advance of the newly approved system in this country is illustrated in the Worcester normal school and the Workmen's school at Fifty-fourth street in this city, directed by Professor Adler, where the vertical writing is used in the lower grades and now carried on to the fourth and fifth grades.

The observations of foreign physicians showing that the prevalence of myopia and spinal curvature is regularly increased in the advance through the school grades are supplemented in this country by work on novel lines. An energetic course followed by Dr. Shaw of the University of the City of New York has given additional proof that the cause of the difficulty is to be attributed to the desks which are generally in use, and more especially to the bad position in writing, the opinion being held with apparent unanimity by investigators in this country as well as abroad that all but two positions to be taken in the school practice of writing are improper. One judged to be correct is the oblique central position and the other the straight central position, between which in reference to final choice the controversy in Germany is said to be fierce.

The advocates of reform observe that the child writes vertically when he first goes to school, and that the teacher has to work for the slant. The vertical writing and the central position at the desk are alike naturally indicated. At this stage the controversy has led to the conclusion that the height of the desk and that of the seat must be equally adapted to the growth of the pupil. In some of the progressive schools, as Felix Adler's and at South Orange, N. J., adjustable seats are being used.

The point in Dr. Shaw's recent experiments, made with the aid of several assistants on more than 1,300 pupils in the New York and suburban schools, has been to see whether, with the paper directly in front of the pupil and with the eyes closed, there could be any tendency toward vertical writing. The pupils were first requested to take the customary position in writing, and to write in the ordinary manner the sentence, "John is flying his paper kite." This form of exercise was selected on account of the number of long letters which it contains, and as being one also that is easy for the child to remember. After having thus written the sentence, the pupil was directed to take the straight central position, dip his pen in the ink and with his eyes closed to write the same again.

The closing of the eyes was to eliminate from the child's mind the consciousness of the slant. The angle of slant in all the long letters in the test papers was carefully measured, the angle of slant in the usual writing in each case being also found with the same precision. The measurements and the calculations ran up to 3,600 items, and among other issues of the work was the invention by a lady of a machine for making the measurements.—New York Press.

Club Rule In New York.

I was somewhat shocked last week while sitting in the Knickerbocker club, where I was busily engaged in alternately gazing on those tiresome wall paper bouquets and garlands and in keeping up a desultory conversation with the only two men of my acquaintance left in town, to see a man whom we all knew nod to us as he passed the club window, although accompanied by his wife. This is certainly very bad form. A man should show more deference to his wife than to any other woman. Of course he knew better than to bow. One is supposed never to recognize a woman acquaintance from a club window. Otherwise we approved of him.—Vogue.

BOSTON AMUSEMENTS.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.—The bright particular star, Mr. Chauncey Olcott, who has succeeded to the conspicuous place attained by the departed Seaside, comes to the Grand Opera House next week and will present his eminently successful comedy drama, "Mavourneen." The play was originally produced at the Fourteenth Street Theatre, New York, under the management of Augustus P. Fox, Sept. 28, 1891, and has been a successful run of over one hundred nights. The action of the play transpires in Ireland between 1774 and 1784, one act being laid at "Inishannon" and the rest of the play in the City of Dublin, at a time when the City of Dublin was one of the European centers of fashion and learning and was pronounced by many travellers to have access to its brilliant society to be a worthy rival of Paris. In the first act a number of pasants, at a merry-making dance the Irish country dance of the age, while in the second act, in a grand saloon of a Dublin mansion, the stately minuets danced by ladies and gentlemen in silks and satins and powdered wigs. No Irish play ever produced in this country has presented such an exact picture of the times in which its scenes are laid. Mr. Olcott is supported by an excellent company, the membership includes Fred J. Butler, Palmer Collins, W. H. Burton, O'Kane Hillis, George M. Brennan, Geo. A. Wilson, J. O. LeBrasse, George Addison, Rene Perselle, Blanche Ring, Emma Stevens, Ella Atkinson, Little Kenneth Barnes, Gertie Boswell, Little Dot Clarendon.

PARK THEATRE.—"Venus" is a great success. An audience which filled the Park Theatre from pit to dome testified to this Monday evening in a manner from which the slightest vestige of a doubt had been swept. The Boston papers all say so and theatre-goers are enthusiastic over it. The Park has never seen a more brilliant night than the opening Monday. The applause began when the composer, Mr. Gustave Kerker stepped out to lead the orchestra, and continued, almost without interruption, until the curtain fell at the end of the last act. "Venus" is fairly entitled to the name of comic opera, and its plot is decidedly original. Mr. Kerker's music is bright and catchy. The choruses are excellent and the incidental music is always tuneful and pleasing. Mr. Louis Harrison's knack for saying old things in a new way is apparent in the lines, and Mr. Byrnes' work, though in a sober vein, is such as would be expected from a writer of his acknowledged ability. Of course the principal interest of the evening centered around Miss Camille D'Arville. Her singing was splendid and her rendering of the song "When the Girl That You Love Loves

You," in the second act, deserved every encore that it received. She looked the part of Prince Kam to perfection, and her acting was intelligent and consistent. Miss Belle Thorne as Venus and Mr. W. H. Hamilton as Mars fully met the requirements of their respective roles, and La Regalontia as Cupid made a veritable hit. Miss Fannie Johnson as Isis also captivated the audience with her graceful posing and sweet voice.

BOSTON THEATRE.—The big Boston Theatre has been crowded at every performance of "The Black Crook," and it is generally admitted that this production is the finest and most expensive that Manager Tompkins has yet made. It is pleasant to note that this production is free from French "sensations." There is a wealth of material in the piece to delight the eye, please the ear, pleasantly excite the risibilities and amuse, entertain and interest, and not a feature which can be called vulgar or indecently suggestive. The ballets and marches are the best that have been seen here, and the use of trained corymbes in the Amazonian march, instead of the customary "supers," is to be highly commended. Fielding, the great juggler, and the wonderful Heras are a whole show in themselves. The dramatic company is very good; the ballets are fine; the arrangement of the old play is excellent; the scenery is magnificent; the costumes are gorgeous; the electric light effects dazzling and novel, and the stage is at all times full of life and activity.

COLUMBIA THEATRE.—The success of Peter F. Daley in John McNally's new farce comedy, "A County Sport," at the Columbia has been something remarkable. It is one of the rarest things in the world to see a farce comedy that has only been produced for a week that is in the magnificent condition that this one is, and a proof of this statement is in the fact that the Columbia Theatre has held large and enthusiastic audiences during the past week, and judging from the advanced sales, the demand for seats will undoubtedly continue during the coming week, which will be the last of Mr. Daley's engagement in this city. "A County Sport" is a play of successful comedy, with a plot, incidents and witty lines, to which is added the charms of catchy music and the graceful figures of pretty girls. There is not a dull moment in the play, and no better way can be imagined to laugh away a fit of the blues or to pass a most merry evening than to visit the Columbia. The usual Wednesday matinees will be given.

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE.—Two weeks remain in which "The Fencing Master" can be seen at the Hollis Street Theatre. During the past week the Hollis has been filled at every performance, and enthusiastic applause has been given Laura Schirmer Mapleson and her clever assistants. The prima donna has proved herself to be an artist in every sense of the word, and the management has surrounded her with the most competent cast that could be obtained. Mr. Hubert Wilke, Miss Lily Post, Mr. Gerald Gerome and Mr. Chas. A. Bigelow have all firmly established themselves as favorites, and their clever work adds much to the enjoyment of the evening. Messrs. Mapleson & Whitney have staged the opera in the most gorgeous way, and as a production it cannot be excelled. The costumes are simply magnificent, while DeKoven's music and Smith's witty lyrics make "The Fencing Master" one of the most enjoyable entertainments of the season.

A HUMMING PROFESSOR.

VISIT TO JOHN STUART BLACKIE, THE SCOTCH LITERARY LIGHT.

In writing of a visit to the home of Prof. John Stuart Blackie, in Perthshire, a special correspondent of the Boston Sunday Herald says:

It is impossible to get to the house by carriage in any way save a round about fashion. The direct route is straight up the hill, where a good one mile walk brought us to this little mountain nest. Miss Blackie came forward to meet us, a gentle welcome, making me directly at home. She is one of the most charming dames I ever met, not looking within 20 years of her acknowledged 74. A well-bred, restful, cultivated, gentlewoman, with a sweet musical voice and an engaging smile, and a marvellous magnetism of manner.

Before I had unfasted my wrap, a burst of melody, a bit of Scotch song came to my ear, and Prof. Blackie all most instantly appeared on the scene with both hands extended in hospitable greeting. Let me try to describe him. An erect figure, not tall, but above the medium height. White hair falling about his neck. The bluest blue eyes I ever saw, with a keen, merry expression in their searching depths. Eyes that have never used glasses despite their own 84 years. A face alternating between ruddy and pale tints, like a mixture of heather red and white. A pleasant speech, with a quaint twist of Glasgow in the accent. A Panama hat worn indoors to shade the eyes from glare. A dark suit of clothes with a scarlet thread running through their warp and woof. Around the waist a bright red silk scarf such as a Greek might wear. Quaint, unconventional, honest manners all the more elegant by reason of their very simplicity. The wisest, merriest child of nature conceivable, with the added gravity of a sage of all the nations. The brain of a scholar, the heart of a little lad, and here you have Blackie.

One moment he quotes Greek, the next he bursts into song. "I have melody in my soul," he says, "so you see it must come out."

"No, I don't like opera," he said, "it tires me. I sing for the same reason a meadow bird sings, because I can't help it, because I am happy and I must be natural."

Yet, all the same I have heard that the professor can sing a good old Scotch ballad in a way to make one's pulses thrill, and his book on "Scottish Song," "its wealth, wisdom and social significance," shows an amount of musical research unknown to meadow birds. While I am being fain and hands in an upper room, the warbling comes up to me, and it is magnetic in its optimistic gaiety. And such is the spirit of the professor's influence on all with whom he comes in contact, and I cease to marvel that he was equal to a trip to Constantinople at the age of 82.

When I descend the stairs, I am not only physically hungry, prepared to do full justice to a delicious luncheon, and some most exquisite hock, but equally hungry mentally to hear my host converse. "This he does between snatches of melody or 'humming' as he calls it, for he always 'humms' day and night, save when he sleeps, or speaks some stirring aphorism, some sentence one might well remember, and make the rule of one's life conduct."

He is seated at his desk soon after 8 a. m., writing or reading. Then he takes a light luncheon, a glass or two of sherry and a biscuit, or sometimes a cup of hot milk. Every day he walks between three and four miles, which he calls "just nothing at all," since he used to walk 20 to 30 miles a day. He does no hard work after 9 p. m., and retires at midnight. He lives by rigid rule, yet fails not to make the most of his high happiness. His motto is from St. Paul, Ephesians iv 15: "Speaking and acting the truth in love." His second is: "All noble things are difficult to do."

As he has climbed to the top of every Scotch mountain, it will be seen that he reduces his motto often to most practical uses. He is, and has always been, in perfect health. This he largely attributes to his daily habit of pedestrian exercise. "If your brain is unduly worked," he declared to me, "keep up the balance by using your legs. If you have too little worry or too much worry, you must keep a balance for the physical and moral fulcrum of the human machine."

In two months the professor expects to have a book in the press, entitled "Christianity and the Ideal of Humanity," in Old Times and New his highest ideals began with David and ended with St. Paul, in the old days," he remarks. Mistress Blackie says "this positively must be the professor's last book, for she does not want him to write himself out."

"How many books have you written, professor?" I inquire.

He bangs down his cane on the floor, and after a bar of melody exclaims, with a merry twinkle in his eye, "The devil knows, ask my wife."

The remains were entombed at the Newton cemetery.

—The principal use of a village clock is that all may hear it strike, very few can see it. At present ours does not strike. The person who has the care of it, would do the citizens a great favor if he would have it put in order. He is hired to keep the school house and clock in proper order.

—Beacon street, near the old Wardwell estate, is receiving excellent treatment at the hands of the highway department. The street was widened in accordance with a petition to the city government not long since, and now the bed of this portion of the street has been taken up and is being rebuilt, and macadamized in a thorough manner. The sewer department are at work near the junction of Grant avenue and running the sewer under the brook are employing gangs for both day and night.

—The man who was run over and killed on the Boston & Albany railroad, near the Brookline depot, last Friday night, was Edward Hogan of Brookline, a former employee of the railroad company, at one time a conductor on a gravel train. It is supposed that he was riding out on a late train, and dropping asleep, was carried by the station where he intended to leave the train, and, discovering his mistake, jumped off, falling under the wheels. Hogan formerly resided in Newton Upper Falls. His body was taken from the train here and removed to the Cottage Hospital morgue and was taken charge of by relatives of deceased the next day.

—The Mason and Rice schools commenced work Monday morning with unusually full classes, the cold weather of the past few weeks evidently bringing back earlier from their vacations. It was thought that the schools would have been closed for some time, but the weather has been so mild that the children have been able to attend.

—The large increase in attendance at our public schools this year shows to some extent how rapid has been the growth of Newton Centre during the past year or more. The total increase of membership over last year is about forty pupils, and although a new room has been fitted up and opened at the Thompsonville schoolhouse with the idea of relieving the Mason school which was overcrowded last year, the latter is already filled to its full capacity after placing thirty-three of its pupils in the new room at Thompsonville. Of these, fifteen are scholars that graduated from the Thompsonville, and the remaining eighteen were sent there from the Mason building. The study of Latin in the three higher grammar grades, seventh, eighth and ninth proves very pleasing to both pupils and teachers, and out of a membership of nearly 150 in these grades, all but ten have taken up the study of Latin. This study, it is expected, will prove of great assistance in connection with the study of English grammar and language.

—An Epworth League was organized last Wednesday evening in connection with the M. E. Society. The League boasts seventeen charter members, and cordially invites any young people having no connection with any such society, to join. A meeting will be held Sunday evening at 6 o'clock in Stevens Hall.

—Everyone this week has been watching with interest the results of the trial races of the cup defenders. The hull of the Vigilant, the successful boat, is built of Tobin bronze, but ten tons of steel plates were used in her construction in addition. This steel, and all the plates used in building the Colonia, Navahoe and Jubilee, were made and furnished by the Boston Iron Works, Boston, Pa.

—B. F. Butler, Jr., of this place, whose office is in the Mason building, Boston, is the New England agent of this company. The Jubilee was built by the Lawleys at South Boston, and the other yachts at Bristol, R. I., by the Herreshoffs.

—The alarm ring, in from the box at the engine house on Wednesday, was on account of a smoke occasioned by an oil stove having the wicks turned up too much. The stove and oil tank were placed in the room in the morning to warm the engine and the door closed, and when opened again was filled with smoke so dense that it was difficult to enter. The damage was not for long, but the injured boys and other articles. The wires for a fire alarm box have been connected to a post at Eliot, but as yet no box has been attached. The damage was not for long, but the injured boys and other articles. The wires for a fire alarm box have been connected to a post at Eliot, but as yet no box has been attached. feel that he never should do them any good, that some one else must bring them more effectively than the instigators of the Gospel. It was this feeling, in connection with my need of rest, which decided me a year ago that it would be best this fall to close my pastorate. And I shall go away with the confident expectation that speedily you will secure for this very attractive parish just the minister you need: one who will prove competent for every service required here. As I go away you will not forget your promise to pray that I may be useful somewhere else. And with such mutual regard and good will, our parting may be an occasion not only of sadness but of heartiest and most hopeful cheer.

CITY GOVERNMENT.

GETTING AWAKE ON CITY LIGHTING
—A DECISIVE PETITION—$50,300 FOR OCTOBER EXPENSES.

A special meeting of the board of aldermen was held Monday evening with the mayor absent.

Alderman Bothfield, president of the board, presided, and all the members were present except Alderman Emerson.

A communication was received from the city of Springfield on petition of H. T. Gallup of the Boston & Albany railroad, appointing Charles M. Streeter, Charles E. Temple and Albert H. Kinsley special railroad officers.

PETITIONS.

Petitions were received and referred to the proper committees as follows: Bertrand E. Taylor for gravel sidewalk on Parker street; George Bullens for sewer through the Ripley estate, Centre street; Rev. D. J. Wholey et al for one acre light on Centre, near Crescent street, Newton Centre; Alexander Tyler et al to change name of Tapley place to Montford road; Chas. B. Lintell et al for acre light on Boylston street, corner of Floral avenue; Soden & Carter for acceptance of Tudor terrace as public highway.

Notifications of intention to build were received from V. A. Pluta for dwelling house 28x32 feet on Rowe street, for dye house 15x30 feet on Boylston street.

THEY PROTEST.

A communication was received signed by D. C. Heath and 140 others protesting against granting pool licenses in Newtonville. The protest was simply received as the committee had already taken action in the matter.

ORDERS.

An order was passed accepting the terms of the offer made by Albert Gay relative to the laying out of Worcester and extension of Austin street.

An order was passed authorizing the expenditure of $500 for widening, deepening and straightening Derby brook.

CHEESECAKE BOULEVARD.

An appropriation amounting to $9000, to be expended under the direction of the highway committee, was made to continue the Cheesecake brook improvements and the boulevard from Watertown street to the Charles river.

An order was presented by Alderman Hunt and passed, granting the petition of C. H. Hardwick et al that they be exempt from sewer assessments on Prospect street until such time as the land was built upon.

$50,300 FOR OCTOBER.

The sum of $50,300 was appropriated on presentation by Alderman Hunt to defray the expenses of the city during the month of October.

A short recess was taken. After resuming Alderman Roffe reported, recommending that the petition of the Newton Street Railway for iron pole on Lexington near River street be granted. Accepted.

Recommending the granting of P. C. Baker's petition for permission to erect stable 25x35 feet at Lower Falls. Accepted.

Recommending that A. I. Paine, petitioner for pool licenses at Newtonville, be given leave to withdraw. Accepted.

Recommending that street lights be placed in various streets.

STREET LIGHT SERVICE CONDEMNED.

The last report called Alderman Plummer of Ward Four to his feet to protest emphatically against making any further arrangements or contracts with the Newton & Watertown Gas Co. He claimed no other city in the Commonwealth had such poor service and was so inadequately served in this respect as Newton. The dark and ill lighted streets were a constant source of danger to citizens and of menace to the city in the way of damages which might be brought from this cause.

He had been informed from an authoritative source that the company had even gone so far as to send around men to reduce the four foot gas business.

In Newtonville alone, in one night forty-four lights were not in operation.

He strenuously protested against the city accepting such service or making any additional arrangements with the company for street lighting.

Alderman Roffe agreed with the gentleman from Ward Four in the poor service accorded, but did not believe in the propriety of stopping the addition of street lights petitioned for at the present time.

The contract between the company and city expires next year, and he believes in letting the matter rest until that time for decisive action in the matter.

Alderman Thompson said fifty new incandescents were ordered from the company in August and were not in yet. The light was extremely poor and was far inferior to that furnished to Wellesley. The committee had been reducing the company's bills each month because of their failure to live up to the contract.

Alderman Plummer said the arc light globe over the Auburn street bridge has had a large hole in it for upwards of three months. He telephoned to the company and they replied that was the first intimation they had of the fact. And yet, he continued, the city expects them to employ competent men to keep these lights in order.

The report of the committee was then accepted, Alderman Plummer voting nay.

Alderman Roffe then presented an order authorizing the committee on fuel and street lights to locate lights in the following streets: Cook, Dabry, Court, Hale, California streets, Mountvale road, Hyde avenue.

The order passed, Alderman Plummer voting nay.

The board adjourned.

He was "no Dood"

(From the Detroit Free Press.)

The tramp had essayed the kitchen door of a house on Beaubien street and was received politely.

"I guess they ain't been livin' here long," he said to himself as the cook disappeared for the refreshment.

"Here," she said, returning, "there is some bread and meat, and I'm sorry I can't give you a piece of pie."

"Don't worry about that, lady," he replied with a bow, "bread and meat's good enough for me. I ain't et nothin' since yesterday, and I ain't no dood to-day."

The High School New Hours.

To the Editor of the Graphic:

The wholesome regulation of a large body of precious young life is my topic under the above title. The suggestions here offered are, however, not written on the supposition that no one but the writer thinks or cares for the regulation here mentioned. Parents and teachers, generally, care much for it; but, in the multitude of interests, excitements, labors and pleasures, some things which are very important are, nevertheless, liable to be sometimes overlooked.

The school now begins at 8.10 a. m. That one fact governs the movements of the day. "Standard time" is sixteen minutes slow in this locality. This other fact is the key note to a true understanding of the whole matter. It is a fact which is intensely real to those who have lived to grow up under true natural time, as nearly as clocks can be made to keep it; but is naturally very difficult for those to realize, who have never known any but the present artificial, unreal time.

It would be very interesting if the High school boys, in every Newton village sending pupils to the school, would associate themselves together as a measuring club, long enough to measure the distance from every home containing a pupil to the nearest railroad or street car station. The Newtonville boys could measure from the station and pupil's homes there to the school. The distances travelled on cars being known, the distance of every pupil from the school would be known; also the average distance to be walked by all the pupils. Besides the value, in relation to the important question of a "South side school," of the statistics thus gained, they would afford interesting information about Newton distances generally. I have now in mind a case where the distance from home to school differs but little, if any, from two miles, one of which is by cars. Some have to go shorter and some longer distances. This is probably a fair average case.

Now then, we are ready for the application of our two primary facts above mentioned. Reckoning backward from the opening of school, and expressing in the real time, which, please remember, all the time, is sixteen minutes later, in parenthesis after the hours of "standard time," we have something like the following as a healthy morning time-table for many cases.

School opens at 8.10 (8.26). Reach Newtonville station at 8.00 (8.16). Take a car for school at 7.50 (8.06). Leave home for the car at 7.40 (7.56). Leave the breakfast table at 7.25 (7.41) to make all necessary final preparations without injurious haste, including three minutes first, that in the short days the sun does not rise till 7.14 (7.30) and, second, that when after New Years, the days begin to lengthen perceptibly, they do not for astronomical reasons not necessary to go into here show it much, except in the afternoon, until about the middle of February, which is the coldest month. It will therefore be a matter of surprise, if, from about December first to March first, there will not be a loud and general call for beginning at 8.30 (8.46) a. m., and closing at 1.25 p. m.

Having shown the above scheme of hours and movements, not injurious to health, nor, with the exception just stated, particularly inconvenient, it must be said that certain unavoidable consequences follow, which merit careful attention on the part of parents and teachers; and, indeed, of the pupils themselves, if they begin to have any intelligent regard for their own good, rather than only a desire for their heedless self-gratification during the passing hours.

First, any material variation from these hours, except for those living near the school, must be disastrous to health, which gives value to all else, in proportion to the amount of the variation. To see this vividly, look at an extreme case, which, indeed, is sometimes real. Suppose one to rise at 7.30, fly from bed to breakfast, snatch a hot biscuit at 7.40, eating it on a wild tear to the station; the dentist, the doctor, and, finally, the undertaker might all profit by such a case of suicide, for that is just what it would be, while the wise would laugh, sneer, frown, or lament, according to their various natural temperaments.

"But, beloved, we are persuaded better things of you."

Then, second, nothing can be more obvious than that, if one values health and learning as they deserve, all late evening social dissipation must and will be rigorously given up, in order to carry out the healthful morning program of hours here presented. Recreations as much out of doors as possible, so as to get the benefit of life giving light, will otherwise gladly be limited to simple afternoon and early evening play, with occasionally being at simple teas at the latest time at one another's houses. Indeed no pupils should mingle in general society, or ape its more elaborate social doings, until their school days are all over, not to mention that many such occasions are of doubtful benefit to any one.

With these suggestions, or warnings, if any please to call them so, we bespeak for our excellent High school a grand year's work through the joint efforts of a band of able and devoted teachers, and a company of select pupils, who know what they go to school for, and go to do it.

Conference of Charities and Correction.

It is hoped that there will be a large attendance of the citizens of Newton and Watertown at the meetings of this conference.

The subjects of "Destitute and neglected Children" and of "Public Relief and Alms-houses" appeal especially to all American communities at the present time. If but a little light can be thrown upon these perplexing subjects, by the experts who will be gathered at the conference to discuss them, it will be to our unspeakable gain.

Sufferers from dyspepsia have only themselves to blame if they fail to test the wonderful curative qualities of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. In purifying the blood, this medicine strengthens every organ of the body, and even the most abused stomach is soon restored to healthy action.

ROMANCE OF A NEWSBOY.

INCIDENTS IN THE CAREER OF EX-GOV. WALLER OF CONNECTICUT.

In an article about newsboys who have risen to places of prominence, a special correspondent of the Boston Sunday Herald thus writes of ex-Gov. Thomas Waller of Connecticut:

Who does not know genial "Tom" Waller of Connecticut, the gallant soldier of fortune, who sacrificed a governorship in 1884 that Cleveland, his chief, might be elected. Tom was for years the leading lawyer of Hartford, twice member of the Assembly in the Connecticut Legislature, once senator and twice Governor of the nutmeg state. He failed the third time because he imolated himself on the political altar to save Cleveland. The President rewarded his self-abnegation by making him consul-general at London, the richest office in the administration.

Tom Waller has a more romantic and even more interesting history than David B. Hill. Forty years ago he was a newsboy on the ferryboats which plied between Brooklyn and New York. There was no big bridge in those days, and the boys hovered around the ferryboats which carried all of the human freight of the two great cities at that time. The lad's real name was Thomas Waller O'Grady, and he descended from a family renowned in Irish history.

One ancestor is the famous Baron-Feather O'Grady, Ireland's greatest jurist and the composer of Grattan, Curran, Phillips and other renowned Irish barristers. His grand uncle was Phos. Standish Waller O'Grady, the bitterest Tory and hardest landlord in the good old ballad of Limerick.

Thomas Waller O'Grady's parents died while he was almost a child in arms. He was adopted by an old Dutch family in New York, but the restrictions imposed upon the future statesman were so irksome that he ran away and became a newsboy. Many is the time in his precarious calling in those days that young Tom was compelled to sleep in a dry goods box at night after an unsatisfactory day's labor. Tom had dropped the family name and was known by his youthful associates as Tom Waller. One day while crossing the Fulton ferry from Brooklyn to New York he met a fussy old gentleman, who wished a copy of the Hartford Courant. It was the favorite paper of his native town, and, as he thought, away ahead of all metropolitan journals. Of course New York newsboys did not sell country papers, and Tom told him so.

"However," said the little fellow, in a reassuring way, "I think I can get it for you." By good luck Tom had seen an old lady in the saloon reading that very paper, which he recognized by the ancient type in its headline, and he forthwith came up to the dame and offered to exchange a copy of a New paper for the medieval country sheet. The lady was a New Englander and ready for a bargain. She had read the Courant, and had no further use for it. She thought she had made a clever deal when she exchanged the country morning paper for a bright metropolitan evening journal. Tom knew he had. When he presented the Courant to the fussy old gentleman, that dignitary gave him a dollar for his pains. Then he inquired his name.

"Tom Waller," promptly responded the newsboy. The old gentleman stood aghast. It was his own name. He took down the lad's address, looked up his references, and in a fortnight adopted him. He had no children and Tom was his idol. He gave him a sound preliminary education and then sent him to Yale College. There Tom graduated with high honors. His subsequent history is too familiar to a pupil of a quire repetition.—"From 'Newsboy Who Have Risen.'"—Boston Sunday Herald, Sept. 24, 1893.

The Picturesque Charles.

This is the name of a new book by Mr. Quincy Pond of Auburndale, containing a collection of 20 reproductions of photographs of the principal points of interest on the Charles river, between Lower Falls and Waltham.

The cover has a beautiful design by Mrs. Valentine Adams formerly of Newton.

The pictures are printed by the Albert type process and show all the marvellous details of a photograph, together with the beautiful softening effect which has given this process its great reputation. There are five colors used in the prints, all chosen so as to harmonize with the subject of the picture. The paper is of the finest plate and each picture is separated by tissue paper, which bears the name of the following view.

The greatest care has been used in both, in the selection of the subject and in the photographic work. All the different effects of atmosphere are shown, from the heavy summer afternoon haze on the meadows to the strong and bold effect of bare trees in early spring.

A notable picture is the one of the Newton Boat Club house, which is printed in a brown tone. Another is the rapids below County rock, which depicts the water in motion, as well as the lights and shadows of the trees. The artistic picture of Norumbega, as well as the view of the city of Waltham, are fine specimens of work.

Altogether, the book is a beautiful souvenir for canoeists, and others interested, of one of the most picturesque and popular rivers in New England.

Answered.

(From the Detroit Tribune.)

Agony of mind distorted her classic features.

Kneeling upon the tufted floor of the front parlor she held her clasped hands aloft.

"What have I done," she moaned, "that I should be thus cursed?"

Then she went on to relate amid sobs how many young and eligible men had come to call on her; how they had uniformly shown symptoms of an acquaintance ripening into love; how they had suddenly become cold and left with a few perfunctory words of farewell.

"Heaven help me," she cried with all the earnestness of a distracted soul.

And even as she spoke a breeze stole into the window, and gently turned her cooking school diploma toward the wall.

Ere yet another month had passed the cards were out.

A BRIGAND LOVER.

Why do you look at me so, Germaine?
Why is that glare in your scornful eyes?
Problems we must have, you know, Germaine.
Then you're a fool to let temper rise.
What though your hair be a crown of flame,
Need you enliven my hate to fire?
Love her! Yes, and that's why she came,
So you may stifle your futile ire.

Deep are her eyes as the dusk, Germaine,
Deep as the dusk and of mournful brown,
Smiles like the faintness of musk, Germaine,
Brows like a queen's, but too soft to frown.
After your passionate love and hate,
Sweet, full sweet, will her softness be,
Like cooling winds when the day dies late,
Like harbor after a stormy sea.

There, will you never be still, Germaine?
Strange that you're woman enough to cry.
What! you would strike me to kill, Germaine?
Taste my good blade for your pains—and die!
Here ye are, men, with the other one,
Yes, dead is Germaine, as ye see.
There wasn't room enough 'neath the sun
For the old love, the new love—and me!

—R. G. Welsh in Springfield Homestead.

TWO OF THEM.

Early in the winter of 1893 I was ordered to report at Benton barracks, St. Louis, to assist in organizing new regiments.

It looked like snow when I left Philadelphia, and it did snow worse and worse as we sped farther west. By the time we reached Terre Haute, Ind., things looked very blue for getting on.

Anxious not to lose a chance to reach my station, I "held the fort" in the cars, the conductor assuring me that the engine and mail car would go ahead anyhow, and that I could be thus "put through."

I was awakened by the brakeman, who informed me that the conductor had gone to the hotel, leaving him to wake me and say that there was no hope for anything on wheels going out that night. My disappointment rendered me angry and unreasonable. I rose up in my wrath and anathematized the road and all connected with it, high and low. As he advised me to stay in the cars, I determined not to do so.

I had been for some eight months at my home, recovering from an ugly wound in the face received in our first advance against Richmond. This was not entirely healed, and my head was "in a bag"—a large covering inclosing my face and head, leaving only the left eye and mouth visible—and this, while it appealed to the patriotic, made me a queer looking figure.

In the baggage car, chained to my trunk, was Mac, my dog, a large English greyhound, a pet I had brought from home through a feeling of sentiment. Once determined to sail forth, I went to the baggage car, untied Mac, opened my trunk, exchanged my dress overcoat for one of rough blue, drew on long boots outside my trousers, and strapped on a belt with two six shooters in holsters. Receiving information as to the direction of the hotel from the brakeman and calling Mac, we plunged into the storm. On and on and on we blundered and stumbled, the poor dog keeping close to me and whimpering piteously.

Suddenly I heard a noise, and forcing my way against the wind and snow toward it came "bang up" against the side of a house. Under this partial protection I looked along and was cheered by the sight of a gleam of light which came from an open window. I quickly found the door of the house, and with Mac entered the dingy barroom of a third rate lager beer saloon. It was about 11 o'clock at night. The proprietor was a rough, surly German. He stared with astonishment as we burst in upon him.

"Can I stay here tonight?"

"Naw!"

"Why not? Look here, old man, I look pretty rough, but I've got money to pay for everything I want or order," and I showed him a large roll of greenbacks. "If you can't give me a bed, make up your fire here so it will keep all night, and I'll pay you well to let me sleep on chairs in this barroom."

"Vell," he replied, with hesitation, "I haf von room got, unt in't two bed is, bud der is von man dare already."

"I don't care if there's an elephant in the one bed, so I get the other," said I. "Let's have it right off."

"Der dog he will here shlay, eh?"

"No, sir-ee. That dog goes where I do. I'll pay for him like any other Christian. Put it in the bill."

With a grunt and a shrug the heavy old fellow lighted about half an inch of tallow candle, and telling me, "Come on, then," led the way out of a side door and up dirty, rickety stairs to what might be called the "front attic." As we passed a door on the second floor a woman's voice called to the man. I suppose she asked him what he was doing, as he answered that he was only going to show "dis feller to bet."

The room in which he placed me was mean in every way—one strip of rag carpet in the middle, a poor bed under each slope of the roof. He placed the candlestick on a rude shelf, and with a grunt took his departure.

I looked around—and did not like the appearance of things. I saw a lot of rough clothing piled on a broken chair by one bedside. I took the candle and went quietly over to survey my roommate. I was not prepossessed in his favor. He was a sallow looking chap, with a big black beard and tangled hair. The outlines of his figure, curled up under the blankets, seemed to indicate that he was about 7 feet high, and I could see that he was feigning sleep and watching me.

I determined to "bluff it through," if possible. Placing the candle again on the shelf, I unbuttoned the overcoat and threw forth my big "navies," putting them on half cock, I twirled the cylinder around and looked carefully into each chamber; then with a sigh of relief, and as if to say, "That's good for six shots anyhow," I laid them on the bed I was to occupy. Then I pulled the old slouch hat as far over my ears as possible, turned down the blankets, and with boots, overcoat and hat on, turned into the bed.

The pistols I placed one on each side of me; the knife I laid under my back. I awakened Mac who, totally exhausted, ed, was asleep on the floor, made him jump in and lie down close to me, and then pulled the blankets over us both. I quickly dropped into a half sleep. A movement from the other creaky bed awakened me. I opened my eyes, and by the dull snow light which straggled through the single window could see the outlines of the man in the other bed, and he was sitting up.

In an instant I was on the alert, but made no movement. He leaned forward and seemed to listen. Then he dropped down again. In about five minutes he once more raised himself and for a time was motionless. Then one leg was put outside the cover; then the other, and he stood erect. With the utmost caution he invested his long legs in their proper garments, and then gathering up his other clothing and boots in his arms he stole quietly as a robber out of the room.

I heard him descend the stairs and knock lightly on the door of the landlord's chamber. Several times he knocked. Then the doors opened, and I could hear the dull muttering of the big German, the shrill whispers of a woman, and earnest though low tones, which must be those of the stranger. Then the two men went down into the barroom, and I decided that I was "in for it." I crept out of bed and went to the door—no lock or catch was there. I looked for something to brace against it. Nothing could be found. One of the two chairs had only three legs, and neither had any back. I was caught in a trap.

I had fought my way through every grade from private to captain, in the field, and done every line of duty from picket to pitched battle, but I never had such trying hours as I passed in that bed. I could recognize the shuffling of stocking shod feet on the first floor and could hear a steady conversation for about 15 minutes. Then all was quiet for a time. Next I heard a heavy, but cautious tread, ascending to the landlord's room, and the woman's whispers were renewed.

The garret room door was opened just a crack. There I fastened my gaze. To that point I directed the barrels of my pistols. I heard the stairs creak and the wind howl.

I watched and waited and finally I fell asleep. When I awoke, Mac was licking my face and broad daylight was streaming through the window. My pistols lay where they had fallen from my hands. I felt in my pockets. There was my money all right. Quickly I made my way down stairs. In the barroom, which seemed rather cozy by morning view, was the host, who now looked an honest, sturdy fellow. "Can I have breakfast for myself and dog?"

"Well, I guess so; after a bit."

And all the time he was eying me most curiously. I took a seat by the hot stove. He came and rattled it a little with the poker, and at last said:

"Say, vat mit dat other feller you do last night dot you so much him skeer?"

"Dot!" said I. "I didn't do anything, and as to 'skeer' I'll bet a horse he wasn't half as much 'skeered' as I was—the thundering big border ruffian!"

"By shimminy! dot a good one was. He comes down all mit der drimbels und vakes my wife, und she myself vakes, und he say to me, 'Wot fer you sent to mine petroom od dot feller mit a vite mask his face on, unt two pistols unt dot pig ploothoun dog? I shay not der room in mit no such ploothoun unt murterin cudtore.' I haf de shairs in de kitchen for him fix, unt he at de daylight leaf mitout his breakfast wot for he der last night paid."

In spite of its very tame, though decidedly satisfactory ending, that was as trying a night as ever I passed in my life.—Romance.

Fanny Kemble and the Shopman.

I went out shopping with Fanny Kemble one spring morning when she thought her room would look the brighter for a muslin curtain to admit the light. She carried a long purse full of sovereigns in her hand. We drove to Regent street to a shop where she told me her mother and her aunt used both to go. It may have been over that very counter that the classic "Will it wash?" was uttered.

The shopman, who had assuredly not served Mrs. Siddons, or he would have learned his lesson earlier in life, produced silken hangings and worsted and fabrics of various hues and textures, and Mrs. Kemble's great annoyance. I had gone to another counter and came back to find her surrounded by draperies, sitting on her chair and looking very serious. Distant thunder seemed in the air.

"Young man," she said to the shopman, "perhaps your time is of no value to you; to me my time is of great value. I shall thank you to show me the things I asked for instead of all these things for which I did not ask." And she flashed such a glance at him as must have surprised the youth. He looked perfectly scared, seemed to leap over the counter, and the muslin curtains appeared on the spot.—Mrs. Ritchie in Macmillan's Magazine.

A Ghost Story of the Victoria Disaster.

A ghost story is told which hinges upon the disaster to the British warship Victoria. It takes the familiar form of the ghost on the stairs and is as follows: At Lady Tryon's party, given on the evening of the fatal collision between the Victoria and the Camperdown, a well known lady saw the figure of Sir George Tryon on the stairs and watched it pass down into the refreshment room. Lady — was surprised, and coming across a friend told her what she had seen, adding, "I must go and tell Lady Tryon what a pleasant surprise she has given us all, and I must find Sir George to speak to him." Upon this the second lady, who is also well known in society, said: "Do not say anything to Lady Tryon. I saw Sir George, too, and I spoke to her, and she seemed annoyed. She says that Sir George is not here. He is with his ship."—Exchange.

Encouraging.

A Big Lobster Pound.

There is a lobster farm, or pound, as it is called, 12 acres in extent at Southport, Me. This pound is the most successful on the coast, whence 1,000,000 lobsters are shipped each year. The pound is formed by building a solid dam across a tidal water cove. This dam does not quite rise to high water mark, but across the top is placed a fence of iron rods, permitting a daily change of water and preventing the lobsters from escaping. In the spring and fall business is most brisk.

When the fishermen bring the lobsters to the pound, the "fish," as they are called, are hoisted to the dam, measured, and those which are more than 10½ inches long, the legal limit, are thrown in. If a lobster is clever, his life in the pound may be long and full of joy. If he is stupid, he will be fished out with a drag seine and packed in a barrel, with a piece of ice for a pillow, and sent to Boston. The seine is made of about twelve and is weighted at the bottom with a heavy chain. Along the top is a row of corks, which sustain the weight of the seine while the chain drags on the bottom of the pound.

A single cast of this seine will bring up lobsters enough to fill 11 barrels. The chain as it sweeps along the bottom stirs up the lobsters, which immediately shoot backward into the slack twine. In taking them out the men wear heavy mittens, though even then they are often nipped. In the pound the lobsters are fed on salt herring, men rowing about in skiffs and pitching the herring overboard. This is called "feeding the chickens," and it takes about six barrels to make a light luncheon for the flock.—Boston Globe.

The Cat in Ancient Times.

The cat was so very highly regarded in England at one time, both as a rat and mouse catcher, and as an ornament to society, that we find the following salutary law passed by one of the princes of Wales:

"If any one steal or kill a Cat that guards the Prince's Granary, he is to forfeit a milch Ewe, its Fleeces and Lamb. Or, as much Wheat as, when poured upon the cat suspended from its tail, with the head touching the floor, would form a heap high enough to cover the tip of the former."

Though the Welsh had a high opinion of the cat, the ancient Egyptians had a still higher. These intelligent and civilized people treated cats with great distinction. It was a crime to kill them, and when they died they received a public burial, at which the people mourned, having first shaved off their eyebrows as a token of sorrow. The most prominent cats were upon death embalmers in drugs and spices, and cat mummies have been found side by side with those of kings.

When Cambyse, the Persian, attacked the Egyptian city of Pelusis, he cunningly provided his soldiers with cats instead of shields. When the host advanced, the Egyptians retired in confusion upon discovering that they would be unable to do damage to their enemy without seriously imperiling the lives of vast numbers of cats. And so the city was taken easily and without the loss of blood or of a cat. It cannot be disputed that the ancient Egyptian cats must have enjoyed life very much.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

"Yankee Doodle."

The tune of "Yankee Doodle" has had seven or eight treatises written upon it in the last 80 years, ascribing it to various dates and origins, even back to The Netherlands and the days of Cromwell and the Charleses. Dr. George Grove of London, author of the "Dictionary of Music and Musicians," has investigated thoroughly the various musical libraries and the British museum in England, finding no traces of it whatever, thus exploding all the mystical, traditional and apocryphal accounts thereof.

But "Yankee Doodle" had an origin and has a history. It was written by Dr. Richard Schuchburg, whose commission dates 1787, in the French and Indian war of 1755 under General Jeffrey Amherst and was intended as a "take off" on the "rag, tag and bobtail" recruits of the colonies that came into the army. It "took" so well, however, that the Americans have ever adopted it and would not part with it for anything. The first words,

Father and I went down to camp, were in the Boston Journal in 1768, and the first record of the tune is in Arnold's "Two to One," 1780, so that "Yankee Doodle," although written by a British surgeon, is really American.—Boston Transcript.

Economy in Foot Wear.

The neatest and most economical possible foot wear is a low cut shoe of a special pattern to be worn with gaiters to match each dress. This style of foot clothing has many advantages. The low shoe is easily aired, and the inner sole will retain the odors of the feet with the neatest of persons if not properly aired, especially when one walks much. The gaiter breaks the apparent size of a large foot and forms a very attractive finish when matched to costumes.

Skirts rubbing against the front of high kid boots will wear the seam, while the lower part remains in perfect condition. Gaiters, upon the other hand, can be changed as soon as defaced and worn with the same boot. Many pretty gaiters are possible for different occasions and styles of dress.—Jenness Miller Monthly.

Effect of Music on Penn.

Walter Savage Landor introduces Peterborough in conversation with William Penn and makes him applaud Penn cynically, when the latter declares that there is something in a violin if played directly that appeareth to make hot weather cool and cold weather warm and temperate, not, however, when its cords have young maidens tied invisibly to the end of them, jerking them up and down in a strange fashion before one's eyes, and unless one taketh due caution wafting their hair upon one's face and bosom, and their very breath, too, between one's lips if peradventure one omitteth to shut them bitterly and hold tight.—Musical Courier.

From A Photographic Gallery to the Stars.

(Written for the Graphic.)

"Fatherless and destitute at the close of the war he began at the age of eight to work in a large photographic studio in Nashville, and followed the occupation of photographer until 1883."

"In 1888 he was offered a position in the Lick Observatory, then about to be opened with the largest equatorial and the best equipment of astronomical instruments in the world. There he commenced a series of brilliant observations and discoveries which are familiar to the astronomical world and to the readers of scientific literature. They are recorded in the standard astronomical periodicals and publications of the world. In July 1892 he discovered the fifth moon of the planet Jupiter, and on the night of Oct. 12th, he discovered a new comet."

Think of the contrast which these quotations from a recent biographical sketch present. A poor boy of eight who had but two months instruction in a common school, going to earn his living as errand boy and helper in a photographic saloon. That was in 1865. In 1892 the same boy grown to manhood, but only 35 years old, one of the foremost astronomers of the age, known to scientific men the world over, and an authority in some of the most difficult problems presented by the study of the starry heavens.

The story of the life of Professor Edward Emerson Barnard shows what can be done when an earnest soul applies itself to noble work. He was faithful to his employers and acquired a full knowledge of photography, but in 1875 when he was about 18 years old a friend loaned him a copy of D. De la's "Practical Astronomer." He read it with avidity, and there was awakened in him that thirst for astronomical knowledge which led on to the wonderful achievements which he has since accomplished and which may lead to others still greater.

His first telescope was made with the common lens of a spyglass which he mounted in a paper tube. In 1877 after careful economy he saved up enough to buy a 5 inch telescope, and then began his careful observations, the results of which were sent from time to time to the scientific journals.

In 1881 he began to search for comets and was successful in finding several. He gave up the photographic business in 1883 having received a fellowship in astronomy at the Vanderbilt University. He had been working by day and studying by night before that, to acquire a good education in all the ordinary branches, and then while at the university took a thorough course in English, French, German, Mathematics and Physics and graduated in 1887.

What an industrious fellow he must have been during those years to have accomplished so much, but we must remember that his industrious habits began far back when as a little chap of eight he had to earn his own living. The case of Professor Barnard is both a rebuke and an encouragement. Think of the scores of boys in our towns and cities, surrounded by rare opportunities for study, and yet how few of them seem likely to rise above the average in any useful department. They seem to have no decided leaning in any direction except to have what they call "a good time" and to drop into comfortable, easy places where they can make money.

Especially is this so with many who come from families in easy circumstances. One might well think that living in a cultivated atmosphere, with access to libraries and with so many helps at hand, they would rise from the common place and take rank among the world's benefactors in some of the many avenues which are always opening to distinguished ability. It is sad to realize that with all of the increase of opportunities for culture not a large proportion of our boys are making that full use of them which we have a right to expect. Here was a boy without early advantages required to earn his living when he was only eight years old, and yet rising up before he was thirty years old to such eminence that his reputation became world wide in one of the most exacting sciences.

But if his case rebukes the sloth and lack of ambition of so many it is also an encouragement to any boy who is determined to be something, and to do some good work in this world while he stays here.

If young Barnard conquered difficulties and rose up to prominence other boys can do the same. There are numberless ways opened and "there is always room at the top."

STATEMENT WORTH REMEMBERING.

From one of Maine's Leading Physicians.

To the practicing physicians and the public generally. I wish to state that in my practice I have used in wasting diseases, such as consumption, loss of appetite, etc., Cod Liver Oil as a food when the patient could retain it, but in many cases they could not take it on account of the nauseous effect but recently I have used the Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil prepared by the Rodolf Medicine Co., of Brooks, Me., known as Rodolf's Cream Emulsion and I consider it one of the finest preparations of its kind on the market, it contains more oil and is more easily digested than any Emulsion I have ever used and I cheerfully recommended it to all practicing physicians and the public.

THE GOVERNORSHIP.

The drift in favor of nominating Mr. Greenhalge seems to be too strong to be overcome, from present indications, and the frequent Greenhalge conferences that have been held all over the state show how carefully the boom in his favor has been worked up.

Evidently the experiences of the last few years is to be again repeated. Each year popular sentiment seems to be distinctly and decidedly in favor of some particular candidate, and apparently nothing can interfere with his nomination. Then the political workers begin to take up the matter, conferences are held, and "missionary" work is done, with the result that the candidate who seemed to be the popular favorite is left and another man is chosen. But it is one thing to get a candidate nominated and another to secure his election, as the history of the last two or three years has proved. History has an uncomfortable way of repeating itself, especially in politics.

The Pillsbury men may not make much of a showing at the caucuses, but they all have votes, they are said to feel very bitter and they especially dislike the combination between the friends of Greenhalge and Hart, by which many caucuses have been carried against their candidate, especially in Boston. There is trouble too from the friends of Mr. Wolcott, who have had Mr. Pillsbury for their second choice. A good deal of amusement has been caused at the expense of some of Mr. Wolcott's friends, by the story that they were induced to attend the Greenhalge conferences, on the ground that the Greenhalge men had Mr. Wolcott for their second choice. It seems incredible that any intelligent men could have believed this, as the reasons against nominating Mr. Pillsbury apply with equal force against Mr. Wolcott, but such appears to have been the case.

The situation is likely to become unpleasant, and the Pillsbury men are already pointing out that Mr. Greenhalge has often run for office in Lowell and been defeated, and that although he is an eloquent speaker he is quite as apt to make enemies as friends by his speeches, and they say that it will take an unusual amount of enthusiasm to elect him. They also point out that John E. Russell is an exceptionally popular man, and a very pleasing speaker, and that the Republicans will need every vote they can possibly get, to win this fall. Those Republicans who voted for William E. Pillsbury or Mr. Wolcott, but they will not be any more likely to vote for Mr. Greenhalge than for Mr. Allen or Mr. Hajle.

Evidently the election, which promised at the start to be all in favor of the Republicans, will be close enough to be exciting, if Mr. Greenhalge is nominated.

A SUCCESSION TAX.

The will of the late Fred L. Ames, which disposed of some thirty millions without a public bequest of any kind, has revived the talk about a direct succession tax, and the next General Court will probably have to consider the question of passing such a law. Many think that the greatest danger this country has to fear is the control of enormous fortunes by a few individuals, who considers their private interests as of paramount importance in every question that comes before the public. It is well known that legislatures have often been influenced by financial considerations, and even Congress has not escaped the imputation of passing laws for the benefit of the wealthy few, which were against the interests of the greater public. If private fortunes keep on increasing the danger from this source will only be increased, and one means of counteracting it is the direct succession tax, which will be carefully graded, so that the state may derive some benefit from these enormous fortunes.

A Chief Justice of the United States advocates a law that shall prevent the giving by will of more than one million to any single individual. This is rather radical doctrine, but the influence of such a law would be for the public good. If a man could not leave so many millions to his family he would not be under the temptation to resort to sharp practices, to call them nothing worse, to build up an enormous fortune. No man can earn a million dollars in these days by strictly honest business methods, and if he accumulates one of the modern big fortunes, he does it at the expense of the public. The many lose and one man gains. Jay Gould was the best known example of how a large fortune is built up from the losses of the many, by the wrecking of railroads in which the many had invested their small means, and by other such methods. No one man can make such enormous gains except at the expense of the public, which is a fact often forgotten in the deference we pay to the great millionaires. The methods followed may have been what we are accustomed to call legitimate, but they will hardly bear a too searching investigation. It is for this reason that when one of these many times a millionaire dies the public feel that they have been defrauded if he makes no large public bequests, as a sort of restitution. For this reason the demand is increasing every year that the law shall take hold of and regulate this matter, and the nationalists and populists are growing in strength and numbers. If the law does not take hold of the matter, many apprehend that the time will come when there will be a revolution directed against the plutocracy, which, although it may be bloodless, will bring about a radical change from present methods. Other countries have had such, and in some of our Western states signs of revolt against present methods are becoming frequent and threatening.

The fatal accident at the Centre street crossing, this week, by which a young and promising life was lost, was a deplorable affair, and the more so because the grade crossings ought to have been abolished months ago. The delay in the matter has been a needless one, and this terrible accident ought to forcibly call attention to this fact. Narrow escapes at this crossing are of daily occurrence, and the utmost care on the part of the flagman and the public are needed. The local trains come out from Boston, and the passengers have had time to reach the crossings, some express train thunders past, and dozens of times a day the flagman has to forcibly detain passengers who can not see the express on account of the local train. Of course it is easy to say that no one should cross the tracks when the gates are down, but life is not long enough to wait for the brief occasions when the gates are lifted. It is frequently the case that one local train will be standing at the station, another is approaching, and freight or express trains are passing on the through tracks. Public safety would demand that no through train should pass the station when a passenger train is stopping there, and the same is true of the crossings in Newtonville, and West Newton, which are equally dangerous. Such a rule should be enforced, although it would be very objectionable to the railroad company, and would cause an emphatic demand for the abolition of all the grade crossings at once. In behalf of the railroad company it should be said that they were ready more than a year ago to make arrangements for the separation of the grades, and that they are not responsible for the long delay. How many more fatal accidents must we have, before some steps are taken to remove this source of danger.

There was some sharp criticism of the street lighting, by some of the aldermen, on Monday night, but the gas company officials say that they visit the police station every morning to receive reports of lamps that are not in perfect order, and that men are immediately sent to attend to them. Newton is a very large district to cover, and it is not surprising that among the many hundred of lights, some do not work satisfactory every night. As for the new incandescent lights that are ordered, they are scattered over a large extent of territory, and the new lamps necessitate the rearrangement of the circuits, so that putting up the new lamps is a matter of time, but they say they are pushing the work as fast as possible. A good deal is said of the excellent way the Wellesley streets are lighted, but Wellesley has been wise enough to adopt one system, and does not have as lights here and there, which make all other lamps seem feeble by contrast. Streets that are heavily shaded by trees whose branches are not kept trimmed up, are also almost impossible to light with any kind of lamps.

The Republican caucuses resulted in a divided delegation as far as the candidate for governor is concerned. All sorts of claims are made by the friends of both candidates, each claiming a majority, but one of the most reliable estimates we have seen, indicates that Mr. Pillsbury will have eighteen of the Newton delegates, and possibly more. This would also represent very fairly the sentiment of Newton Republicans, who are by a large majority in favor of Mr. Pillsbury, believing that he will prove the strongest candidate on election day, by attracting those voters who have wandered from the fold. The Greenhalge men are the straight party men, who would vote for any candidate bearing the party label, so that their preferences would hardly count in estimating a candidate's chance of election in a close contest. Mr. Pillsbury on the other hand would attract all classes of voters, and if it is desired to elect a candidate, it would seem to be the wisest policy to nominate the man who can get the most votes. Some of the Greenhalge workers ask what Mr. Pillsbury has ever done for his party, but the majority of voters like him for the very reason that he has not been a mere party man and wire puller, for they believe that he is a good deal more of a man for that very reason.

The Representative question promises now to be settled by the renomination of Messrs. Estabrooke and Chester, although it is impossible of course to say what may develop before the convention is held. Mr. Estabrooke has only held office one term and is entitled to a renomination, and those who approve of faithful discharge of duties should see that he gets it. Mr. Chester has held office two terms, and it looks now as though he would be renominated for a third term without opposition, as he has been a valuable member for Newton to have in the General Court. His position is said to be that while he will not do anything to secure a renomination, or even ask a man for his vote, he will serve another year if the people of Newton want him. There has been some talk of other candidates, but so far no one seems to be seeking the office, which is something so unusual in Newton politics as to cause surprise. Perhaps this may be due to the recent hard times.

The railroad commissioners gave a hearing in the Concord street crossing at Lower Falls, this week, a report of which will be found on another page. This is a dangerous crossing, as it is not possible to see the approach of trains in one direction, and that some terrible accidents have not happened there is due more to the good luck of those using the crossing, than to anything else. Every crossing in the city ought to be protected by either gates or a flagman or both. And the railroad corporation can well afford to give Newton people such protection. Grade crossings ought not to be allowed in the city, in the first place, but since we have them, they should be made as safe as possible.

The burning of negroes in the South has prompted the Forum to secure for its October number an explanation of the attitude of the Southern Whites. Bishop Atticus G. Haygood and Major Chas. H. Smith ("Bill Arp") unite in protesting that the "rightful" crimes of negroes need peculiarly swift punishment. The Bishop, however, thinks these crimes would diminish if the negroes were better educated, while "Bill Arp" thinks the negroes have already not only too much education, but too much liberty.

The Cheesecake Brook boulevard, which has been left in an unfinished and unsightly condition, is now to receive attention, and the sum of nine thousand dollars has been appropriated, which will permit of the finishing of the section between Watertown and Crafts street, and possibly the completion of the lower sections. The improvement might be a very attractive affair, and the residents in the vicinity are much gratified to find that it has not been forgotten in the rush of other boulevard projects.

The Democratic caucuses will be held in the different wards this evening. Unlike their opponents, they have no contest over a candidate for governor, but are all enthusiastic for Hon. John E. Russell. As to the several district conventions the contest is never sufficiently close to make the election very exciting, as far as they are concerned. The Republican nominee is generally sure of his election.

The Milford Journal, which is not in favor of Mr. Greenhalge for governor, has this comment on the situation: Mr. Greenhalge was in Worcester again last week, as a political missionary in his own behalf. That's right—boom! boom! boom! and then wonder why the people get tired? This eternal booming, with all that it implies, has more to do with the lost ground for the Republican party in this state than any other one thing.

A Wife Lie in the Pillory.

Weeks before the royal wedding it was openly whispered that the Duke of York, a gallant sailor and a gentleman, had made a false step, had been forgetful of his princely and knightly duties and obligations, and had, in fact, been secretly married and involved himself in a mesalliance, repugnant to his sense of honor and illegal in the eyes of the well known statute law. That law is simple. None of our blood royal can legally contract marriage without the consent of the reigning sovereign. Morganatic marriages have been recognized as such, and such love inspired sanctity as attaches to these unions when faithfully adhered to. The world knows all about them and sympathizes with them. But what said the quidnuncs, the tattlers, the irresponsible, the chattering sparrows who build under the eaves of palaces?

Blankly this, that George of Wales was married; that the name of the place and the name of the lady, alleged to be the daughter of a naval officer of high degree, were known, and both names and places changed and fluctuated as the price of scandal shares rose or fell in the gossip market. Like ill winds, the ugly rumor grew apace over the dinner table and afternoon teapots. Men talked of it—more shame to them—women murmured it with giggles and innuendo; the very "outsiders" got hold of it, and all the time the story was positively and absolutely untrue. Think you for an instant that the head of our church would have married our prince and princess had he not first satisfied himself, as we have reason to know he did, that the silly story was wholly untrue, absolutely baseless? The question carries its own answer. We contradict it directly with authority.—London Gentlewoman.

A Woman Who Got Along.

The ability of a woman to get on alone in the world is sometimes questioned by her big brothers. But there are plenty of instances where women have been left in circumstances which would try the powers of the stoutest hearted man to the utmost and have come out triumphant. One of these was mentioned to a reporter the other day in connection with a rough side hill farm in a remote part of an inland town. "There," said our informant, pointing to the place, "lived Aunt Abby S— when her husband died. She then had three small children, and another was born soon after. The farm was in poor condition and had about all the mortgage it could bear. Her husband's old father, feeble and fussy, was left on her hands.

"Did she send the old man to the poor farm, think you? Not a bit of it. She kept him a year or two, and he was so fussy he couldn't live with him. Then she hired a neighbor to take him, and she paid his board 12 years, when he died. She raised her children and brought the farm into good condition. She paid the mortgage, and when she died she left a good property free and clear of all debts. The boys hadn't the old lady's spunk, for there's a mortgage up there now, and nothing in the world but laziness did it. They had everything left ready to their hands and ain't had no drawbacks, 'cept losin their mother, but somehow the weeds have got the start of 'em, and I guess they'll keep it."—Lewiston Journal.

Will's Grave.

"That grave on the right hand of the path as you go down to the porch door; that heap of air with no growth, not one blade of grass on it—that's Will Pooley's grave that was hanged unjustly."

"Indeed! But how came such a shocking deed to be done?"

"Why, you see, sir, they got poor Will down to Bodmin, all among strangers, and there were bribery and false swearing, and an unjust judge came down—and the jury all bad rascals, tin and copper men—and so they all agreed together, and they hanged poor Will. But his friends begged the body and brought the corpse home here to his own parish, and they tured the grave, and they sowed the grass 20 times over, but 'twas all no use, nothing would ever grow—he was hanged unjustly."

"Well, but, Tristram, you have not told me all this while what this man Pooley was accused of; what had he done?"

"Done, sir! Done! Nothing whatever but killed the excise man!"—Rev. R. S. Hawker.

In Northern Alaska.

Juneau is the most northerly stopping place on the regular Alaska excursion route, and while it is not sufficiently near the pole to meet the midnight sun there is time during the summer season of the year for a good deal of light work.

What most troubles strangers is to know when to go to bed. The sun is apparently unwilling to pass and leaves its halo behind.

Twilight waits for dawn, or if there is an interval between I have not discovered it. It is not difficult to read ordinary print at 11 o'clock, and sitting on the deck at midnight (the ship keeps San Francisco time) watching the shadows cast upon the smooth water and the snowcapped peaks at a few miles distance is not uncomfortable with an overcoat.—Cor. San Francisco Bulletin.

The Tapping of the Deathwatch.

The so called deathwatch, dreaded by the superstitious, is a small beetle which has a very powerful joint in its neck and calls its mate by tapping with its head on the wall or on any surface where it may happen to be located. The noise is similar to that which may be produced by tapping with the finger nails on a table, and the insect can frequently be made to answer such taps.—New York Evening Sun.

The meeting was in part the result of a growing sentiment that some effort was to be made to secure Pillsbury delegates in some of the wards. Some of the most prominent Republicans of the city attended, and the circular sent out announcing the conference was signed by many gentlemen who have been both prominent and active in Republican circles here for many years.

—Matthew, 26th chapter 66th verse, "What think ye" was the topic of Rev. Mr. Priest's sermon at the Universalist church last Sunday morning. The man who thinks shall rule the world. As we think so shall we be. The universal excuse we did not think, is no excuse. Ignorance of the law does not save any one from its penalties. God does not save a man because he is a fool. Careful thought marks the difference between the brutes who may have some reasoning powers and man with his ability to study and reflect. Life is made up of little things that must be thought of. —There has been considerable inquiry in regard to the movement started here recently to raise funds to erect soldiers' monuments under the auspices of the Sons of Veterans. The movement purports to have been endorsed by the members of J. Wiley Edmands camp 100. The camp has addressed a communication to division headquarters in which it is stated that it knows nothing about the matter, but that two persons claiming to be members of the order were promoting the scheme and soliciting funds to carry it out. The parties referred to were formerly members of camp 98, from which they received honorable discharges, and became members of camp 114. When camp 114 collapsed they received transfer orders, and were believed that they have not yet deposited the same with any camp, and are, therefore not entitled to recognition as active members. At any rate, the movement is not sanctioned by either the division officers or the Newton camp. —Boston Herald.

—An Alderman Was Referee.

You have read in the yellow covered story book of the "solitary horseman who might have been seen," etc. Well, this wasn't a horseman. Last night after the fire investigation had adjourned a group of aldermen might have seen on the sidewalk on Nicollet gathered around a bright spot under an arc light watching a prize fight between two beetles, one of the big, vicious looking variety that flutters around the street lamps every night and another of a smaller kind. One of the members of the council was acting as referee, and the others occupied reserved seats on an area rail. These aldermen must have relaxation from their arduous duties in these days of investigations and things. —Minneapolis Journal.

—Trout Killed by Disinfectants in Drains.

The heavy storm which visited Sleaford on Monday thoroughly flushed the drains, and the storm water carried the carbolic acid with which the drains had been disinfected into the Sleaford river, killing almost every fish they contained. On Tuesday Superintendent Rickhale took out 75 beauties, weighing from 1 pound to 34 pounds, and it is feared that scarcely a single trout will be left alive. —Westminster Gazette.

—Fruit Good at Any Time.

All fruit is said to be most wholesome the first thing in the morning—and surely no fruit is so cleansing and refreshing and very little so delicious at that hour as a big juicy melon, cooled over night and almost cracking open and voluntarily exposing its red heart after the knife has gone partly through it. Such a melon, however, is just as good at other hours in the hot days, for which it seems to be especially provided as a refreshing experience, something more than the shadow of a great rock in a weary land. It is no wonder the southern darkies are so fond of watermelons. In these most trying days of the long summer of the south the melon is more refreshing than chill dewdrops on the early morning grass, and to the overheated, overworked and thirsty soul a good juicy ripe one "comes home to the business and the bosoms" of darky and white man alike. —Hartford Times.

—Easy Tests For Proving a Diamond.

It is an easy matter to detect the difference between a genuine diamond and an imitation. Take a tube of filtered water and drop the stone therein. If it is paste, it can be seen as it passes through the water, but if pure the eye is unable to see it at all. Another test is to place the stone upon a pencil dot made on a piece of white paper. If the dot is duplicated upon the facets you can rest assured that the stone is a fraud, but if not it is a good stone. The common belief that a stone can be tested by filing is erroneous, for the best diamond ever cut will splinter and break when rasped with this instrument. —St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF NOISE.

Aversion to Disturbance Is a Symptom of Neuritic Degeneration.

A woman suffering from neuralgia stations her son to keep boys from making a noise in front of the house. A boy comes by whistling—a performance in which we must recognize a natural, wholesome and boylike act, whereupon there ensues a short, sharp fight between the pair, in which one is accidentally cut. The upshot is not important; the origin of it is.

It has long been usual to accord special privileges to invalids in relieving them against noise. Formerly straw would be strewn in the street, and thousands of persons who were not sick would be inconvenienced to ease the pains of one who was. In part, this custom was one of ostentation. It could be practiced only by the influential who were exalted by making themselves a nuisance. When death ensued, a hatchment was set up in the same spirit of vainglory. All the windows in the house were closed for a term, the duration of which was fixed by custom, but which bore a relation to the estate of the deceased and the consequent degree of exaltation descending upon his heirs.

All healthy animals delight in noise. The description includes barbarous folk and children. Dogs bark (curs only sneak off), birds scream, boys shout, girls clap hands to their ears in sweet confusion, horses paw, all animate nature responds to the exhilaration of noise. The sick do not. In every form of sickness the nervous function is deranged. As we have seen above mankind has shown its appreciation of this fact by its customs. Excessive sensibility to noise is thus one symptom of neuritic degeneration. It is the mark of one broad distinction between the state of civilization and its opposite. It testifies to one part of the price which that state exacts from man on his physical side.

Within civilization itself indifference to noise is one of the distinctions of a system rudely healthful, both in body and mind. The converse of this proposition is equally true. Whenever a person displays peculiar sensitiveness to noise we may know that the case is one of an unwholesome mind in an unwholesome body. From the fact that the disturbance is essentially a neuritic one it follows that it is controllable to a great extent by the will. Much of the disturbance that is experienced from noise can be put completely aside by exercise of the will. A barking dog may keep one person awake while his healthier or wiser neighbor sleeps the sleep of the just. Under the pinging of the cable car bells a valetudinarian subsides into frenzy while his younger clerk is lapped in dreams of the equally unconscious typewriter on the next floor. The contrast here need not be one of relative strength of mind merely; one of the two minds is sick.

In such a case the will power is impaired. It would probably be found that the complaining person is also irritable, passionate, perhaps consumed by self contemplation. In many cases of this order relief could no doubt be gained through treatment by suggestion. But in vastly the greater number the patient is competent to minister to himself. He is still capable of exerting the will, and in this exercise lies complete and permanent cure. Furthermore, the cure does not apply alone to the particular noise that may have called for it. It will be found to have influenced the mind permanently. The injurious effects attributed to noise do not proceed from without, but from within. They do not inhere in the aerial vibrations, but in the mental response made to them.

Finally it ought to be observed that the disease is one that increases by being yielded to. The noise that is first noticed as an annoyance in some moment of irritation, anxiety or other nervous disturbance can be nursed into an object of horror. Time was when folks thought sensitiveness to noise to be evidence of high strung character. They were rather proud of it and trotted it forth in public. The world knows better now. It erects hospitals for the Mrs. Wittitertly, whom it rather admired in Nicholas Nickleby's time. It no longer holds poor Tom of Bedlam for inspired, and since it has learned how much sickness is either a fruit or a phase of ignorance it is getting a little sick of those sick folks, at least of whom it has a right to look for something better. —New York Evening Sun.

THE BEAUTEOUS BEGINNER.

She stands all sweet and tremulous
Before our ravished sight.
In dainty garb, a vision fair
Of youth and beauty bright.
A ribboned essay in her hand
She trembles holds and reads
Its sage reflections as to what Humanity most needs.

She is so fair, so sweet, so pure,
As we behold her there,
That who of us hears what she says,
Or who of us can care
If all her thoughts are all her own
Or taken from some book,
Or if her practical mamma
Has taught her how to cook?

THE RED RIBBON.

Uncle Fred was simply a very nice fellow whose name was Frederick Barois. He was of a good disposition. That could be read on his youthful face, such a youthful face that on seeing the narrow red ribbon in his buttonhole people sometimes asked him for his story. And he, to avoid the embarrassment felt in speaking of one's self, answered somewhat maliciously:

"I was born 26 years ago, and since then—nothing ever happened to me."

But it was not so. It happened to him that he had bravely won this red ribbon which showed so advantageously upon his breast. Having been sent to Tonquin as a cavalry officer, he had freed a battery of artillery which the enemies already believed in their possession.

Unfortunately it also happened to him during the fight that he had received a bullet in the side.

As he had been too recently appointed lieutenant to be promoted to the rank of captain, he received instead the cross of the Legion of Honor, and this greatly helped to heal his wound. Still, however well healed it might have been, he remained very weak. He was sent home to become stronger.

And this is how, for the last fortnight, he had been living in clover at the home of his sister, Mme. Julia Duchemin, whose husband owned a glass works at Boves, near Amiens.

Frederick was happy there, for he loved his sister, and his sister loved him. There was but one drawback to his happiness. His brother-in-law, Jacques Duchemin, had been obliged to leave on the day following the young officer's arrival.

As a compensation there was between the brother and the sister the latter's daughter, a girl just over 5 years of age, who appeared delighted with Uncle Fred and with the gold lace of his uniform, and for whose benefit Frederick became a boy again.

All the acquaintances they had—but with whom they sustained almost constant intercourse—were Mme. Bourgeois, a widow, and her daughter Antoinette, a young girl of 18.

How pretty she was! Not so much in regularity of feature, but in her simplicity, her natural grace, her personal charm.

As for Mme. Bourgeois, she was kindness itself, but a jovial, indulgent, sensible, smiling kindness.

Mother and daughter were a charming pair.

That is what our young man had ascertained at once, to his small satisfaction. He found an attraction he had never before experienced in meeting these ladies. Were they late in coming? Time seemed heavy to him. And if his sister advised him to go for them off he went at once.

It was not far, it is true. Three hundred yards, over the glass works. They lived in a large villa, surrounded by a fine park, which belonged to the young girl in her own right, without counting other property which it was rumored amounted to over a million.

But Frederick did not care for that. It was the young girl's character which attracted him.

One morning after breakfast Frederick was smoking a cigar in the garden by his sister's side, in whose skirts the little Martha was diligently curling her doll's wig.

At the table they had spoken of Antoinette, and now—now they still spoke of her. Then after a moment of silence Frederick said, with a sigh:

"What a pity she is so rich!"

"Why?" asked Julia, looking steadily at her brother, with eyes full of anxiety.

"To woo a young girl you know to be a millionaire, when besides your salary you scarcely have $3,000 a year, would not be acting like a gentleman."

To her brother's surprise, Julia did not answer. She had turned her head aside. He put his hand on her shoulder, with a heavy heart, exclaiming:

"You are crying! What is the matter? What ails you?"

"Nothing!" she replied, with a smile browned in tears.

The young man knelt before her, and putting his arms around her said:

"Julia! Julia! I have but you in the world. You have some sorrow. Oh, I beg of you do not hide it from me! Sister, dear little sister! You have no right to conceal it from me."

She hesitated for a moment; then in a low voice, in accents choked with sobs, she whispered her confidence. It was simple and short.

riage which might have saved his relatives. But while lowering his eyes he saw his red ribbon, and it seemed to him he heard an interior voice repeating the sentence he had just uttered, "It would not be acting like a gentleman."

He also saw that Martha no longer curled her doll's wig. Sitting on the ground motionless and silent, the child was looking at her mother, who wept silently. She wept—in silence also.

"Julia," said the young man soberly, "go, in my name, to ask for Mlle. Bourgeois' hand."

"At last!" triumphantly exclaimed Antoinette's mother after Julia had formulated her request. Then calling her daughter she added in the same joyful tone: "Come—he has come to it! Answer, darling. Tell—tell how backward we found him!"

A lovely smile, so chaste in its frankness, lit up the young girl's face and without speaking she advanced toward Mme. Duchemin with extended hands. Then, kissing her:

"I am so happy," she exclaimed bravely.

The very next day Frederick began his "wooing," as it is called.

Yet what a strange thing! He, so outspoken till then—so open and so gay—was formal now, circumspect, stilted, almost unpleasant. Goodby to intimate "chatter," to all freedom! He chose his words carefully. No more jokes now!

At first Antoinette was disconcerted by it, but surmounting her painful impression she appeared happy enough for two. She was the first to speak of their plans, saying, as if inadvertently, "these dear plans."

He still called her "mademoiselle," while she called him "Frederick." She consulted him about the details of their future home. What shade did he prefer for the curtains? And when they were passing the glass works, stooping to kiss Martha, she prompted:

"Say 'Good morning, Aunt Fred.'"

The attorneys had taken the matter in hand. Everything was ready, for the lieutenant had told his sister:

"Act for me. Have the settlements drawn to suit yourself."

As for him, to all questions he answered:

"Yes. All right. As you please."

So much so that at last Julia took him aside and said to him:

"Take care, Fred. Take care lest you grieve this child."

"Grieve her!" he repeated, startled. "It would cause me the most bitter remorse."

"Yet one would think you do not love her."

"Not love her!" exclaimed the young man. "I would be the most ungrateful fellow. Oh, on the contrary, I love her with all the power of my soul, of my conscience and of my probity. Devoid of feeling as I may appear, my heart is all her own. I admire, and I adore her. Ah, why is she not poor? You would see—you would see then, Julia," he added, relapsing into his darker mood.

The eventful day was fixed. The bans were to be published.

After dinner the lieutenant accompanied the ladies home, walking by their side along the road. At the door they bade one another goodbye. After that word had been spoken Antoinette remained at Frederick's side, very close to him. She appeared to await something.

He understood. And once more lowering his eyes he saw the red ribbon lit by the last rays of the setting sun. And as in an hallucination in the rustling of the leaves he thought he heard again, "It would not be acting like a gentleman."

Then, dazzled, he stepped back, and in a choking voice said: "Listen! My heart is bursting. Even if I unsettle everything, I must speak. I must tell you!"

What? Everything! He stated everything indeed—the situations, his scruples, his great sorrow.

Antoinette and her mother sought to interrupt him, repeating, "But—but!"

He did not listen. He went on to the end. And then only were they able to finish their sentence:

"But—we know it!"

"What! You know that my sister and her husband are threatened with?"

"Certainly, we know it," said the widow. "And this is why we hurried the conclusion, which will at last give us the right to ward off the misfortune they do not deserve."

"And you, Antoinette?"

Somewhat confused, she replied:

"Oh, I had but one fear—not to please you!"—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Polly as a Pastor.

There was a parrot once that belonged to a clergyman. In the circumstances of that gentleman's household Polly naturally became religious and learned several phrases of his master's profession. One day this irresponsible worshiper got, nobody knew how, into church while service was going on. As it was behaving itself nobody disturbed it, where it sat perched on a pew, for the remedy might have proved worse than the evil.

As for evil, the parrot never thought of it. At last the clergyman announced a hymn.

"Let us sing," said he, "the four hundred and first hymn."

But at this point it was found that Polly was in another frame of devotion. Immediately after the priest's announcement of the hymn it exhorted the congregation contradictorily, "Let us pray."

DEGENERATE CAPTIVES.

Where waters tremble into hillside lights
From rocky crevices and shaded pools
The wild stag pauses, watch, fulfills his cool
His shapely limbs. His proud head towers the heights
He lifts to look in contemplative mood.
On his companions feeding freely there From nature's lavish feast, spread every-

And asking no man's friendship or his food.

Where men betake themselves in tacit shifts
Of city foulness runs a deer glen girl
With close set barriers. Here, tame, inert,
The deer caress men's hands for paltry gifts.

A Telegraph Line Before Morse's.

Honor to the pioneers in the vast field of science! Mr. John Sims has published at the Chiswick Press in pamphlet form a very interesting memoir of Sir Francis Ronalds. Twenty years before Wheatstone and Cooke or Morse had patented their improvements in the telegraph, indeed while the first two were respectively lads of 12 and 14 years of age, Ronalds had sent messages over eight miles of overhead wires of his own construction and had laid and worked a serviceable underground line of telegraph of sufficient length to demonstrate the practicability of communication by telegraph between long distances.

Details of his overhead telegraph wires were published by him in 1823. Ronalds' residence at Hammersmith, where these experiments were carried out, is the house now and for long past occupied by Mr. William Morris, the poet, who has caused a tablet to be placed on the wall bearing the inscription, "The first electric telegraph, eight miles long, was constructed here in 1816 by Sir Francis Ronalds, F. R. S., etc. An autotype facsimile of a portrait of this father of electric communication accompanies the publication."—London Telegraph.

Calculating the Distance of a Storm.

Although lightning and thunder occur always simultaneously, an interval of shorter or longer duration is usually observed between these two phenomena, which is due to the fact that sound travels only at the rate of 1,100 feet per second, while the passage of light is almost instantaneous. Based upon this fact, it is an easy matter to tell, at least approximately, how many miles a thunderstorm is away. A normal pulse will beat about one stroke to the second, and by counting the pulse beats during the interval of the lightning and the thunder the lapse of seconds is arrived at and consequently the number of feet, which can be reduced to miles.

For example: If 30 seconds elapse between the flash of the lightning and the crash of thunder, the storm center is at a distance of 33,000 feet, or about 6 1/4 miles. An almost accurate calculation can be made by using a watch with a minute dial. —St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Use Pure Water Freely.

Unhygienic habits report themselves unmistakably in the skin both in color and odor. To health and beauty it is essential that one should use pure water (rain water is best) frequently and freely and follow its use with brisk friction all over the body with a piece of coarse flannel, which is a wonderful aid to a soft and glowing skin, as it stimulates healthful circulation. Sun and air baths are necessary to the proper nutritive functions of the skin, and daily attention to the promptings of nature is imperative to save it from becoming a vehicle for offensive exhalation. Care will do much to put off the evil day of wrinkles and decay. —Exchange.

They Make Auroras to Order.

Artificial miniature auroras of the borealis variety have been produced by both De la Rive, the French savant, and Lenstrom, the Swedish astronomer. In Professor Lenstrom's experiments, which were made in Finland, the peak of a high mountain was surrounded with a coil of wire, pointed at intervals with tin nibs. The wire was then charged with electricity, whereupon a brilliant aurora appeared above the mountain, in which spectroscopic analysis revealed the greenish yellow rays so characteristic in nature's display of "northern lights." —St. Louis Republic.

Worse Than Wicked.

If more people understood that any appearance of haste or carelessness was out of place in formal correspondence, they would not use such expressions as "many thanks" any more than the hardly less objectionable phrase, "thanks," in conversation. Such curtness is like the old story, "Worse than wicked; it's vulgar." —Philadelphia Press.

The Tramp's Loyalty to an Ideal.

In one of his delightful essays Mr. Lowell tells of a tramp whom for seven years he assisted with money to enable him to get from Boston to Portland.

"He was as fine an example," Lowell adds, "as I have ever met of hopeless loyalty to an ideal." —New York Tribune.

HORSE STEALING RECORD.

ALL PREVIOUS ONES BROKEN BY THOMAS COLEMAN.

For an itinerant horse thief, Thomas Coleman, alias John Murphy, who is wanted by the police of Nashua, N. H., Shirley, Lincoln, Maynard and Malden, has a record unequalled for a short career.

Some three weeks ago he hired a team in Nashua, N. H., and drove to Carlisle, this state, where he traded the entire rig for a cow, a watch, several hens and $5 in money. The latter was not paid him at the time of sale, but was promised in a few days.

From Carlisle he went to Shirley village, where he hired another rig from Stablekeeper Fairbanks, ostensibly to take a fishing trip. From there he drove back to Carlisle to collect the $5 due.

The woman of the house, where the trade was made, informed him that Nashua officers had been there and taken the team, and that they were after him.

He immediately left without his $5, and went to Newton, where he traded the horse hired in Shirley to a Frenchman, getting in return a roan mare. In what manner he disposed of the latter animal is not known.

Coleman next appeared in Malden, where he hired a team at a livery stable and immediately returned to Newton, making trade No. 2 with the Frenchman, receiving the Shirley horse and $15 in money for the Malden horse.

He next appeared in Waltham, Sept. 2, where he put up his rig—the Shirley horse and the Malden buggy—at G. E. Kirwin's stable. Here it remained until Labor day, when he drove to Mr. Kennedy's in Lincoln, where he remained until the 18th, when he took Mr. Kennedy's harness and express wagon and drove to Maynard. Here he hired a team at the livery stable of Samuel King, leaving Kennedy's harness and wagon, and leaving the Shirley horse. In Waltham he traded the latter to a band of gypsies for a dog and other property.

Going from there to Barlett's stable in Somerville, he traded King's buggy for a road wagon. A short drive brought him to Buxton's stable in Cambridge, where he put up his rig. Taking his harness he started for Boston, saying he had another horse at a sale stable in that city. Since that time his whereabouts have not been known.

The Malden horse which was traded to the Frenchman in Newton has been recovered by Malden officers, and the Shirley horse, traded to the gypsies, was recovered by Inspector McKenna of Waltham and Officer Conroy of Watertown, and its owner was notified.

Coleman is described as being 26 years old, about 5 feet 10 inches in height, weighs about 170 pounds, is of sandy complexion and has a sandy mustache. He has several other aliases. The amount of his stealings in the three weeks amount to about $2000.

A Gentleman

Who formerly resided in Connecticut, but who now resides in Haverhill, writes: "For 20 years past, my wife and I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor, and we attribute to it the dark hair which she and I now have, while hundreds of our acquaintances, ten or a dozen years younger than we, are either gray-headed, white, or bald. When asked how our hair has retained its color and fullness, we reply, 'By the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor—nothing else.'"

"In 1868, my affianced was nearly bald, and the hair kept falling out every day. I induced her to use Ayer's Hair Vigor, and very soon it not only checked any further loss of hair, but produced an entirely new growth, which has remained luxuriant and glossy to this day. I can recommend this preparation to all in need of a genuine hair-restorer. It is all that it is claimed to be."—Antonio Alarum, Bastrop, Tex.

BOSTON AMUSEMENTS.

GLOBE THEATRE.—Mr. Richard Mansfield opened his annual engagement at the Globe Theatre, Boston, on Monday evening last, to a large and appreciative audience.

Next week, the last of Mr. Mansfield's engagement, the following repertoire will be presented: Monday and Friday evenings, "Beau Brummell"; Tuesday, "A Parisian Romance"; Wednesday, "The Scarlet Letter"; Thursday evening and Saturday matinee, "Prisoners of Conscience"; Saturday evening, "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde."

Several changes in the company have been made since last season. It now includes Messrs. D. H. Harkins, Norman Forbes, Aubrey Bonicelli, W. N. Griffith, A. G. Andrews, J. F. Graham, C. W. Butler, W. E. Bonney, J. W. T. Weaver, T. E. Brown, Chas. Lunjack, Thos. Yore, J. M. Conboy, John Watson, Misses Beatrice Cameron, Kate Lester, Adele Messor, Maud Vanner, Eleanor Markellie, Rolinda Bainbridge, Agnes Leigh, Grace Sherwood and Mrs. Sherwood.

Following Mr. Mansfield, Mr. A. M. Palmer's New York Company will, on October 2d, begin an engagement at the Globe Theatre in Oscar Wilde's remarkable play, "Lady Windermere's Fan," which created such a deep impression last season on the drama-loving world.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.—A new play and a star new to Boston will visit the Grand Opera House next week. The play is "The Pay Train," a realistic drama of today replete with gorgeous scenic effects and thrilling in plot and in the development of the story. Miss Florence Bindley is the star, a particularly bright and versatile little actress whose stage work has been recognized by the theatre goers in nearly every city of the country. This is Miss Bindley's first visit to Boston as a star, but some time ago she was a favorite as a sourette and her sweet voice and piquant manner won her favor in this city. "The Pay Train" is in four acts, full of strong scenes, exciting climaxes and novel mechanical effects, prominent among which is an incline wreck scene, a railroad scene when the pay train is uncoupled, a boiler explosion and other truly realistic pictures. Following "The Pay Train," the Grand Opera House stock company will begin the regular season at this house with even a more lavish production of "Rosedale," than marked the run of the play last season. "Rosedale" will run two weeks when the company will make a tour of New England.

BOSTON THEATRE.—"The Black Crook" with its gorgeous costumes and scenery, its clever people, superb dancing and its star specialty features, is playing to very large audiences at the Boston Theatre. It has a new attraction in Paquerette. She is a Parisian, a graduate of Les Ambassadeurs, Paris, and is one of the brightest stars of the vaudeville stage. Success has followed her from the French capital to London, New York and Chicago, and apparently is not going to desert her in Boston, for she has been received with much favor. The burlesque and the grotesque are the prominent features of her characterizations. The "things that she does" are extremely funny, and "the things that she says"—well, they are in French, but they are not essential to the enjoyment of her performance, which is exceedingly entertaining and free from any of the improper suggestiveness which not infrequently attaches to comic actors of the French school. Paquerette is rather slight in figure, but well formed and graceful. Her costume are unique. As a ballet dancer she wears a red wig, which she disingenuously takes off before the audience, only to show that her own black hair is far more becoming.

BOWDOIN SQUARE THEATRE.—Manager Atkinson's attraction at the Bowdoin Square Theatre next week is the great spectacular production, by A. Y. Pearson's company, of Edwin Barbour's romantic drama, "Land of the Midnight Sun." The drama deals with scenes and incidents in the lives of the natives of Iceland, and its story follows closely, in its main events, that of Valentine and Orson. The scenic effects promise some magnificent pictures. In the first act on the coast of Iceland, enormous ships are seen crushed by towering icebergs under the rays of the glorious Aurora Borealis; the shipwrecked mariners who come from the ice are rescued by the sturdy fishermen of the polar seacoast. The leading parts will be played by Wm. Harcourt, Logan Paul, Wm. Humphrey, Edwin Barbour, Olive West and Ad. Lytton, those well known players being supported by one of the largest companies on the road.

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE.—Only one more week remains in which that charming comic opera "The Fencing Master" can be seen at the Hollis Street Theatre. The business for the past two weeks has been characterized by success and prosperity. Laura Schirmer Mapleson has proved herself to be a lyric artist of a high order, and her impersonation of Francesca has been applauded to the echo. She has a charming figure, and possesses a personality which, in addition to her high artistic talents, has made her many friends and admirers during her brief engagement in this city. Miss Lilly Post, who sings the role of Francesca every Saturday night, has been most capable and artistic in that very important part. Mr. Hubert Wilke, Mr. Charles Bigelow, and in fact all the members, are worthy of commendation, and "The Fencing Master" as produced presents one of the most charming forms of evening entertainment in the city.

COLUMBIA THEATRE.—On Monday evening next a new romantic Irish drama will be presented at the Columbia Theatre under the poetic title of "Glen-de-lough." It is a drama of two acts. It is under the personal supervision of W. H. Power, and introduces an excellent company headed by the clever Irish comedian, J. K. Murray, and the sweet singer, Clara Lane. The production will be noted for its completeness, being the most elaborate and expensive ever given to Irish drama, two carloads of scenery being used, in addition to the historic properties imported expressly for this production. A decided novelty will be the artistic display of statuary from the studio of Professor De Bessel, an Italian artist. The company give excellent portrayures of their characters, and Mr. J. K. Murray will sing a number of Irish songs in his own inimitable manner.

TREMONT THEATRE.—On Monday next, September 25, will begin at the Tremont Theatre the annual engagement of the eminent English actor, Mr. L. S. Willard, supported by his own able company, which includes the charming artist, Miss Marie Burroughs. The repertoire of the first week will be as follows: Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday nights, September 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, and Saturday matinee, September 30, the intensely strong play by Henry Arthur Jones, "Wealth." During Mr. Willard's engagement at the Tremont, he will appear at an extra matinee each week, on Wednesday afternoon. The first matinee, Wednesday, September 27, will be of "The Professor's Love Story," which will also be given on Saturday night, September 30. Two seasons ago Mr. Willard gave four performances of "Wealth" at the very close of the season, and made a superb triumph by his impersonation of the role of Matthew Ruddock. To many of the Tremont's patrons this play will be entirely new. All the critics of Boston gave to this performance unstinted praise. During Mr. Willard's engagement the curtain will rise at 8 p. m. evenings, 2 p. m. matinees, precisely, and it is earnestly hoped that the audience will find it convenient to be seated at that time.

BOOKS AND MAGAZINES.

IDEALA.

Miss Sarah Grand takes herself very seriously in her new book, Ideala. The heroine is a beautiful woman, with no small mental ability, writing and painting very well, witty and learned, but lacking in imagination and discretion, and as prone to make embarrassing speeches as to do kind deeds. Her husband being false to her, she bestows her affections upon another man, and is saved from eloping with him only by being shown that she will certainly make him unhappy. Having descended to this depth, she conquers her love, and devotes herself to loving her fellow-women, striving to make them happier and better, and here the author leaves her. She is not a very attractive or very lovable person, in spite of the efforts of the narrator, an artist secretly in love with her, and lavish in endowing her with clothes that are "works of art, light in weight, but rich in color and texture," but on the other hand, the artist himself is a very noble being. Published by D. Appleton & Co. in their Town and Country Series.

THE TRANSLATION OF A SAVAGE

is one of the dainty volumes in Appleton's Summer Series, and Mr. Gilbert Parker has made a very entertaining story. The heroine is the daughter of an Indian chief, who is married by the son of a wealthy and high bred English family, and sent home to them as a refuge for their treatment of his pre-vious affair, while he remains in Canada. The Indian girl makes a very pretty figure of romance, and the way in which she is "translated" into a civilized woman makes an interesting story.

WANT GATE AND FLAGMAN.

NEWTON LOWER FALLS ASKS FOR PROTECTION FOR CONCORD STREET CROSSING.

The railroad commissioners gave a hearing Tuesday morning to the matter of the petition of the mayor and aldermen of Newton asking that a gate and flagman be placed at the Concord street crossing of the Boston & Albany railroad at Newton Lower Falls.

By request of Chairman Sanford, City Solicitor Slocum stated the nature of the travel at the point where the gate and flagman were desired. There were about thirty-six trains a day at the crossing, he said. The locomotive was compelled to run often at the back of the trains, which made the running of trains somewhat hazardous, the engineer not being able to see well ahead of him.

William P. Morse of Weston, an employee in the city engineer's office, was the first witness examined. He explained to Chairman Sanford the nature of the section about and near the crossing, maps of which he presented for examination. He considered the crossing should be guarded, as desired in the petition.

Witness admitted to Counsel Hoar that the smoke from the locomotive could be seen from the back of the trains when run that way.

Edward A. Hunting of Newton Lower Falls, who said he and his family were in the habit of driving across the railroad crossing, considered it very dangerous at that point and should have a gate and flagman.

Herbert S. Ware of Auburndale also thought it a dangerous point. Had driven an ice wagon across the track there. The greatest danger was going toward Weston.

To Counselor Hoar he said he had never known of any one being injured by the crossing was, however, limited.

Arthur R. Andrews of Newtonville considered the crossing dangerous. He admitted the crossing could be seen before approached.

Lewis E. G. Green agreed with the previous witness. His experience with the crossing was, however, limited.

Edward E. Hardy of Auburndale said trains could not be seen well coming from Riverside. It was dangerous.

Bernard Early had the same story to tell as Mr. Hardy.

Similar testimony was given by a number of other witnesses, and Counselor Hoar then called General Manager Barnes of the Boston & Albany railroad, who said he had been an official of the road thirty-eight years, and general manager since 1884, and had never heard of a death or an accident on the crossing at Concord street. The city of Newton had never complained, and the first information he had of the matter was when he saw a notice of the hearing in the newspapers. He afterward received notification from the railroad commissioners.

The matter of the cars preceding the engine, he said, should be remedied at once, as he didn't consider that a proper way to propel cars. He had not known personally that it was being done. He didn't consider that the crossing needed a gate or a flagman. The trains ran by at the rate of ten miles an hour, and from that he had caused to be taken he found that the average travel over the crossing was eight foot passengers and four teams per hour.

To questions of Chairman Sanford, Mr. Barnes said the expense of the flagmen would be $1000 a year, as two men would be required. The expense of putting up the gates would be about $200 or $300. The care of these gates would also require two men.

Chairman Sanford suggested that Mr. Barnes and Supt. Chesley should meet the Newton authorities and that, with them, the railroad officials should inspect the crossing and go over the ground, and then see what was needed.

The matter, until that had been done, was held under advisement.

One of my children had a very bad discharge from her nose. Two physicians prescribed, but without benefit. We tried Ely's Cream Balm, and, much to our surprise, there was a marked improvement. We continued using the Balm and in a short time the discharge was cured.—O. A. Cary, Corning, N. Y.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address, F. J. The corner stone which will be the largest in the block, if not in the city, is to be occupied when the building is completed, by George F. Richardson & Co., the Station street provision dealers and the corner store on Institution avenue, it is expected, will be occupied as a pharmacy.

—Rev. H. E. Brady, who graduated at the Institution this year, is now at Dalton. The Berkshire Eagle has this item in reference to his work: "There was a good congregation at the Baptist church at the morning service to hear Rev. H. E. Brady who gave a pleasing sermon. In the evening there was a gospel service and a large number of the Methodist church people attended to give a welcome to Rev. Mr. Brady. The church was filled to overflowing and the meeting was the most edifying sort. Mr. Brady besides being a good speaker and deep thinker is a pleasing tenor singer and has thus found a warm place in the hearts of his people as well as those in the other churches. At a business meeting held following the regular evening service, the treasurer announced the receipt of a $70 check which came through the mail, and which has been applied to the church building fund."

—The sudden departure last week of Mr. Chas. B. Garey, senior partner in the firm of Garey & English, carpenters and builders, came as a shock to his many friends and business acquaintances. Of course all kinds of stories have been afloat this week regarding the affair, on very few of which any reliability can be placed. The affairs of the firm were turned over to Harry W. Mason as soon as Mr. English ascertained how matters stood. One of the rumors to be heard after Mr. Garey's absence became known was that eighty per cent of the firm's outstanding accounts had been collected. With this came the report that various parties had loaned the firm large sums of money, recently, varying in amount from $3,000 down, but nearly all of these reports when investigated are found to have little or no foundation in fact. One gentleman loaned Mr. Garey $300 a few weeks since, which was promptly repaid. Another loan of $250 was later made by the same party and was also promptly repaid. On the day before he left Mr. Garey came to him with a request for another loan of over $1,000, which was not made, because the gentleman could not spare the money at that time. He had then told a GRAPHIC reporter, if he had had the money he should have let Mr. Garey have it. There are two or three parties who have loaned the firm sums and taken their notes for the same, but these gentlemen are not greatly worried about the matter and believe things are not so bad as they might seem. One case in particular is known which happened only a short time before he left town. Mr. Garey was at a note of $800 against him would go to protest as he had only $200 to meet it, and was very much worried. He managed by great exertion to raise $400 more, which he paid on the note. Some go so far as to claim Mr. Garey has taken from $6,000 to $8,000 with him, but facts will not bear this out, and it is probable he had less than $100 when he left town. No definite information except in one instance has been gained as to his whereabouts. This instance is furnished by Capt. Rowe, who on his return from Maine last week, says he saw and talked with Mr. Garey in Waverley, Me., on Friday, knowing nothing at the time of the firm's embarrassment. It is stated that Mr. English has received a letter advising him regarding the disposal of certain business matters, but it revealed no clue to Mr. Garey's whereabouts. The firm has been doing a very large business the past two years and have some very valuable contracts on hand at the present time. The business has been conducted largely on a cash basis, the firm asking very little credit, but the recent stringency in the money market drew largely on their resources, and to meet their liabilities became necessary to issue time notes. Financial difficulties followed and it is generally believed that the pressure brought to bear by certain creditors was more than Mr. Garey could stand and that his mind became unsettled. Mr. Garey managed the entire finances of the business, his daughter keeping the books of the firm, which are found to be correct, and Mr. English superintended the carrying out of the contracts. Mr. Garey has been a resident here a greater part of his lifetime, and has borne an enviable reputation as a citizen and business man, and it is hoped to see him back again after a short absence, and there is little doubt his friends would take hold and help the firm through their present embarrassment. At the creditors' meeting held Wednesday in Mr. Mason's Boston office, a committee of three, with Alderman Rolfe as chairman, was appointed to investigate the affairs of the firm and report at a second meeting to be held Monday. The liabilities are estimated at about $16,000, which the assets are expected to cover.

CITY GOVERNMENT.

MIXED FIRE ALARM SYSTEM ESTABLISHED—PERTINENT FACTS ON STREET LIGHTING IN NEWTON—THE RESULT OF COUNCILMAN GREEN'S INVESTIGATION.

The city council held meetings last Monday evening at the City Hall, West Newton, and in each branch some decisive work was accomplished. The order for five new fire alarm boxes of the Municipal pattern which was passed by the lower branch early in the summer and has since laid upon the table in the alderman's chamber was taken up and passed, after a vigorous protest from Alderman Thompson, against a mixed system of fire alarm service.

The lower branch listened to a lengthy account of the manner in which the city's contract with the Newton and Watertown Gas Light Co., for lighting the city highways, was carried out.

THE ALDERMEN.

The mayor presided at the board of aldermen and all the members were present except Alderman Emerson.

Records were read and approved.

The mayor submitted a communication from the Boston Fire and Police Notification Company requesting the passage of an order authorizing the introduction of its service in Newton, which calls for some privileges accorded to employees of the city at fires and the notifying of said company through the fire and police departments of all fires within the city limits. The communication was received and placed on file.

The bond of Timothy Stuart in the sum of $2000, as a private sewer layer with James Simpson as surety was received and accepted.

A communication was received from Fred A. Jackson of Wellesley relative to injuries received from colliding with a lamp post while riding on Washington street, Lower Falls. Received and filed.

Alderman Bothfield presented a petition from W. P. Ellison and others asking for the extension of Hunnewell terrace. Referred.

Notifications of intention to build on Dalby street were received from Chas. Frazier and John Clafin.

James Shay of Adams street was licensed to drive a wagon.

Notification of intention to build stable 12x14 feet and shed 12x20 feet on Irving street was received, also from E. M. Rich for dwelling house 25x30 feet on Irving street.

Horace Cousins, et al presented a petition for the extension of Union street from Station street to Beacon street.

S. A. Thorpe, petition for permit to erect carriage house 16x16 feet at Newton Highlands.

A petition for concrete walk on Columbus street, Ward Five, was referred.

Alderman Bothfield reported recommending the granting of petitions for concrete sidewalks from F. O. Stanley and W. F. Bacon, and later an order granting the petitions was passed.

LICENSE FOR ENGINES WANTED.

At 8.15 o'clock a hearing was declared on the petition of C. C. Bragdon of Lasell Seminary for permit to set up and operate one 15 horse power and one 25 horse power engine.

Prof. Bragdon was present and said his intention was to light the seminary with electricity from his own plant. The engines for generating power would be located at the rear of the present boiler house.

No remonstrances appeared and the hearing was closed.

A hearing was next opened on the petition of Mr. A. Robinson of Medford for permit for a five horse power engine to be used in a carpenter shop on Crescent street.

The hearing closed without remonstrance.

Alderman Hunt reported for the committee on sewers recommending that the petitions of Geo. Bulleu for sewer on private land and for sewer in Webster court be granted. Orders were passed appointing a hearing on these petitions on Oct. 16 at 7.30 o'clock before the board of aldermen and at 7.45 o'clock, Oct. 23, before the common council.

GRANTED.

Alderman Plummer moved that the petition of C. C. Bragdon for engines be granted the board, voting favorably.

An order was passed authorizing the water board to lay 700 feet of six inch pipe at an expense of $711.

An order was passed authorizing the highway committee to construct concrete sidewalks and place edgestones on various streets.

Alderman Bothfield presented an order which was passed authorizing the highway committee to lay at the accepted portion of Hunnewell avenue and authorizing the receipt of certain sums from citizens interested, as a consideration.

An order transferring the sum of $1,000 from the appropriation for street lights to the appropriation for printing was passed.

BUILDING ORDINANCE.

Alderman Thompson moved at this time that the ordinance relating to buildings be taken from the table. The motion was carried, and on motion of Alderman Bothfield the ordinance was passed to be ordained.

The petition of P. C. Baker for permit to erect stable, and of Wm. Kendall for stable on Prospect street, were recommended by Alderman Rolfe in a report, and granted.

MUNICIPAL BOXES.

The order which came from the common council last June (and which was tabled by the aldermen) authorizing the fire committee to purchase five fire-alarm signal boxes, for which an appropriation of $750 was provided, was unheeded. It was tabled practically because it did not provide for the purchase of signal boxes of any particular device, and as it had been the outcome of a contest concerning the respective merits of the boxes manufactured by the Gamewell Fire Alarm and Municipal companies.

The fire committee was in favor of the Municipal box, and there was opposition to its introduction in the upper branch because of an objection to the use of a combination system, the Gamewell box having been used heretofore exclusively in the city.

Alderman Rumery, chairman of the fire committee, moved to take the order from the table for action.

Alderman Thompson favored further delay in part, he said, because of the absence of a member of the board. He read a communication from the Gamewell Company which called attention to the good results attending the use of its boxes in Newton, alluding to the injuries which had resulted from mixing systems. The terms offered by them were as favorable as those submitted by the Municipal Company, and they had offered to the city a box guaranteed to be equal in every respect to the Municipal box, at 20 per cent. less. Mixed systems never worked any considerable length of time without serious results, and attention was called to Worcester, Quincy, Indianapolis and Richmond, Ind., and Toronto, Canada, as notable examples. None of these had any serious trouble at first, but the final result was failure to work.

A large petition protesting against mixed systems had been received by the board and since then representatives of the Municipal Company made earnest efforts to secure action by the N. E. Insurance Exchange, calculated to lessen the force of that remonstrance. Their petition to the Exchange was referred to the committee on fire applications and the report emanating was as follows:

"In view of the examination and investigation, which has been made, that the Exchange place the Municipal Fire & Police Telegraph Co. fire alarm apparatus on its list of approved apparatus and that they also approve of the placing of the Municipal and Gamewell boxes on the same circuit should it be desirable to do so." It appears there was no investigation but the matter was turned over by the committee to a single member of the exchange not on the committee. This gentleman is a resident of Newton near the Municipal company. This action is therefore based on the opinion of a single citizen of Newton.

The company claim they did not have proper representation before the city, being refused a hearing by the city council, and being allowed only a limited time in which to exhibit their apparatus, whereas the Municipal Company were given ample facilities.

Alderman Rumery said regarding the petition presented by the Gamewell company, that most of the gentlemen whose names were upon it were there through misrepresentation, and were just as ready now to sign a petition in favor of the Municipal company. He read a letter from the N. E. Insurance Exchange stating that the Municipal company's box had been placed on its list of approved fire alarm signal boxes. He said this action of the exchange was that no trouble need be apprehended from the use of the Municipal box in connection with those of the Gamewell company. Lawrence had been in just the same predicament and had decided in favor of the Municipal box. The committee had thoroughly investigated this matter.

Alderman Thompson asked from whom was the letter from the N. E. Insurance Exchange. He thought it well to know how authoritative such a statement was. Did it come from the secretary of the exchange?

Alderman Rumery said it was signed by C. M. Goddard, a member of the exchange.

Alderman Thompson did not wish to see the matter hurried through. A Newton citizen who has property amounting to about $100,000 in the city and controls about $200,000 more, had said he intended to buy the Gamewell boxes and present them to the city to show how he felt in this matter.

Alderman Plummer placed little faith in petitions. They were very easy to get and he doubted not he could get 200 men to impeach every member of the board.

The order then passed in concurrence. On motion of Alderman Plummer the communication of F. O. Jackson was referred to the claims committee.

The ordinance relating to street lights was passed to be enrolled. The latter provides for a new city office, that of superintendent of street lights.

Alderman Bothfield presented an order which was passed, authorizing the highway committee to advertise for proposals and contract for teams to complete the Cheesecake brook improvements.

After a recess an order authorizing the construction of cross walk on Waltham, opposite Webster street, was presented by Alderman Hunt, and passed.

Petitions came up from the lower branch and were referred in concurrence as follows: From J. H. Wheeler for street lights on Lowell and Sterling streets; from E. A. Ellis for arc light on Centre street; from W. P. Upham and F. E. Macomber for sidewalks.

The board adjourned.

Common Council.

There was a sensational phase at the session of the common council when Councilman L. E. G. Green of the street light committee sharply criticized the Newton and Watertown Gas and Electric Light Company for failing, he said, to carry out its street lighting contract with the city.

It develops upon me, said Councilman Green, to make some reply in the way of correction of certain statements relative to the manner in which the Newton and Watertown Gas and Electric Light Company has fulfilled its contract with the city, in an editorial in a local paper; he added, the claim was made that the company was furnishing the city with more gas than it was paying for. This is not true. The street light committee has caused a measure of merit of the hours, and the discovery has been made that the average amount of gas burned is 2.6-10 feet per hour, and the contract calls for four feet.

It has been said, too, that the company was supplying gas to Newton at a price much lower than other suburban cities were paying. It does not appear to be a fact, as Newton is paying for more gas than is actually consumed.

The claim has been made that the company is obliged to hire cheap help on account of the low price received from the city by the terms of the present contract. It is true enough that the company employs cheap help, and the service is naturally poor.

Another statement in the local paper which I desire to correct was to the effect that the street light committee had made but one deduction from the bills presented by the company this year. The fact is the aggregate deduction to June was $281, and that there has been hardly a bill that has not undergone some process of deduction.

The committee has a letter from the company which intimates that it is its intention to give the city the best service possible. As an illustration of the sort of good service we obtained, it may be interesting to know that soon after the letter was received, all the lights in the city were out, and that the same thing occurred on several dates during the month of January. The superintendent of the company was, apparently, much surprised when he learned these facts and remarked that the inspector must have neglected his duties.

The police of the city make a daily report of all the lights not burning. The record of September shows more or less out every night. On Sept. 8, 31 incandescent lights were out. Sept. 16, 23 arc lights in ward 1 and 7 and 38 arc lights in other parts of the city; Sept. 19 all the lights in the city out.

The complaints average two or three pages per month, take the year through. Another point is that the electric lights are lighted quite often three-quarters of an hour later than they should be, and put out sooner than the contract calls for. For instance, on March 5, they were lighted at 6.45 o'clock when they should have been lighted at 5.55 o'clock. They were out at 2 o'clock, and should have been kept burning until 6.27 o'clock. It frequently happens that the electric lights are put out at 2, 3, or 4 o'clock. They are most needed, in the judgment of the committee, between 3 and 6 o'clock.

It appears that the company has a monopoly, having no competition, and that the only remedy for the city is to establish its own plant. The street light committee, said Councilman Green, in conclusion, will have a recommendation to make ere long concerning the advisability and necessity of installing a municipal plant. It will undoubtedly result in the securing of far better service at less cost.

It should be borne in mind that the contract specifies that the lanterns shall be kept clean and the broken glass replaced. It is not done as it should be. Another thing relative to the point made in the local paper that the company was furnishing the city with more gas than it paid for. Since August 1, the company has changed some of the gas burners so that we get one-third less light than before. It was done during the night between 8 and 12.30 o'clock. An employee of the company who was questioned concerning this move is said to have made the statement that it was done because the city was getting too much gas.

None of these statements, added Councilman Green, are made at random. They can be substantiated. The city pays $100 for arc lights. The cost to the town of Peabody, maintaining its own plant, is $68.72. Newton pays 36 cents for incandescent electric lights, Waltham pays 24 cents and has much better lights. In 23 of the smaller cities of the United States, maintaining their own plants, the average cost of arc lights is $53.04 per annum. Allowing for depreciation of 12 per cent and the cost would be $58.64 per light. The average cost by the contract system in 29 cities of about the same character as Newton is $106.01. These figures would seem to show that Newton is paying fully as much as most communities and getting poor service.

ABOLISH GRADE CROSSINGS.

A move in the direction of getting rid of the grade crossings was made in the lower branch and the following resolutions offered by Councilman Briston were adopted unanimously:

Resolved, that in the opinion of this board, the rapidly growing population along the line of the Boston & Albany railroad and the consequent necessity for additional trains to accommodate the increased traffic, render the grade crossings of the main line of said railroad in Newton a constant menace to the public safety.

Resolved, that the report upon the separation of said grade crossings by the expert civil engineers appointed by order of the city council of 1892, presenting a solution of the problem (that of elevating the present road bed), which, it is believed, is generally accepted as best for the city and in harmony with the plans of the railroad company; be it therefore the public interest demand early and decided action in the premises, and respectfully requests the mayor and aldermen to proceed, without delay, with due regard to all provisions of law governing the matter.

NEWTON SCHOOL BOARD.

FINANCE COMMITTEE CALLS FOR $145,301 FOR NEXT YEAR'S EXPENSES.

The first full meeting of the school board was held at Newtonville Wednesday evening, the mayor presiding.

The yearly report of Supt. G. I. Aldrich was presented. It called attention to the extension of nature study in Latin and algebra instruction as recently introduced in the grammar schools. Its success had been marked, and he predicted that it would result in a great broadening of the course of instruction in the High School. Attention was also called to the establishment of kindergarten schools, of which seven are now in full operation in different parts of the city.

In his monthly report, the superintendent recommended that the city council be urgently requested to provide an addition to the Pierce school of six rooms. The cost of the addition, it was stated, would be about $14,000.

A hearing was granted on a petition to change the name of the Prospect school to the Wade school, in honor of the late Hon. Levi C. Wade, who was its first master. There were no remonstrances, and an order requesting such change, together with the petition, was forwarded the city council.

The sum of $114,749.00 was appropriated for expenses of the current month, and report of the finance committee called for an appropriation of $145,301 for next year's expenses, an increase over last year of about $9,000.

Miss Nellie B. Rind was granted one year's leave of absence from the Lincoln school. Clara M. Woodard was appointed first assistant at the Oak Hill school, with a salary of $700, and Lillie E. Brown was appointed assistant in the Mason school, with a salary of $620.

The board adjourned.

BOSTON AMUSEMENTS.

BOSTON THEATRE.—In "The Black Crook" Manager Eugene Tompkins has devised an entertaining melange which has enough and sufficiently varied attractions to satisfy and please the multitude. In preparing this great spectacle, the object was to furnish amusement to people of decidedly different tastes, and judging from the large houses that have prevailed and the liberality with which the applause is bestowed upon the performers and on every feature, the venture has been remarkably successful. As a spectacle, lavishly produced, with a wealth of scenery and expensive costumes, bewildering transformations, brilliant ballets and intricate dances, the performance has attractive elements of a fascinating character. Miss Pasquerette with her Parisian songs and eccentric dances, is making a great hit. The Heras, acrobats; Fielding, the juggler, and others equally clever in their lines, are to be seen at every performance.

GLOBE THEATRE.—A. M. Palmer's New York Company, in "Lady Windermere's Fan," which created such a sensation upon its presentation in this country last season, will be the attraction at the Globe Theatre, during the coming week. So much has been said and written about this remarkable play, since its first appearance, that it is doubtless familiar to most theatre-goers. Briefly, it is a play of the highest order, and upon the foibles of modern society. The plot is an ingenious one, rich in opportunities for the display of real ability, yet the dialogue and action of the piece has been carefully bereft of ranting, melodramatic, unlikely situations. It is remarkable in the portrayal of cynicism and pungent wit, and in every way a most interesting and powerful piece of drama. The advance sale of seats has been remarkably heavy and a good engagement is promised. A. M. Palmer's company includes Wilton Lackaye, J. H. Stoddard, E. J. Henley, Edward Bell, E. M. Holland, Frederic Robison, Miss Julia Arthur, Mrs. D. P. Bowers, Miss May Brooklyn, and others.

COLUMBIA THEATRE.—"Glen-da-lough" will begin its second week's engagement at the Columbia Theatre next Monday, and if the business of the past week can be taken as any criterion, it will enjoy a most prosperous season at that house. "Glen-da-lough" has more than fulfilled all the promises made for it, and has proved itself to be an Irish drama of a new and most interesting type. The customary accessories of red cloths and evictions are missing, and it is simply a story of Irish life, admirably depicted by J. K. Murray, surrounded by a competent cast. The same embellishments and accessories are spectacular and especially prepared for this production. There is no reason why "Glen-da-lough" should not prove the success in Boston that has attended it in New York and other large cities.

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE.—Of the three high-class stock companies now in existence in the United States, "Americans Abroad" is easily in the lead. There has been but little doubt upon this subject in New York for the six years in which this organization has had an existence, nor in this city, which they have visited yearly with the novelties of each of the New York seasons. The announcement, therefore, that this company begins an engagement at the Hollis Street Theatre on Monday evening will be hailed as one of the leading events of our dramatic season. The opening play will be a new comedy by Victorien Sardou, the greatest master of dramatic writing. It is the only instance of a play written by this prince of dramatists being produced in this country before it was seen in that of its author. It tells of the happenings of a rich American girl in Paris who desires to be loved by herself only. It is a grandly told story of fashionable life, and not in the least like "Fedora," "Diplomacy" and other works of this author. It is, however, a marvellous instance of the versatility of this writer, and in the last act gives strong evidence of his great power of intricate dramatic construction. Many familiar names will be found among the list of members of the Lyceum company, which is practically unchanged since its last visit here, including Herbert Keeler, Georgia Cayvan, W. J. LeMoine, Effie Shannon, Charles Walcott, Mrs. Charles Walcott, Edward J. Ratcliffe, Mrs. Thos. Whitton, Augustus Stock, Miss Helen Fritz Williams, Madge Carr, Eugene Ormonde, Jennie Leland, Charles W. King, Annette Leland, Robert Weed, Charles Robinson and Vaughn Glaser. The scenery will be the same as was used during the New York run last season. Performances will begin promptly at 7:45 and close at 10:20. The final Wednesday and Saturday matinees will be given.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.—The most notable event of the far this season at the Grand Opera House occurs next week, when the regular season of the new stock company of this theatre begins. The play selected for this occasion is Lester Wallace's famous military drama, "Rosedale," which had a most remarkable run at the Opera House and concluded the eventful season there last summer. The piece will run for two weeks and will then be taken around the New England circuit. In the production 100 people will take part and the cast will be exceptionally notable. Joseph Haworth will present his old part of Eliot Grey, Miss Sadie Martin will be the new Rosa Leigh and her conception of the play promises to add to her many successes. Miss Annie Clarke will again be seen in the role of Lady Florence May, a part to which this favorite artist has always brought her skill and naturalness. William Masterson, the well-known and popular comedian, has in the part of Bunberry Kobb a character which he is sure to make delightfully amusing. Frank J. Keenan will play Miles McKenna, the role which won him so much success last season, Mark Price is cast for Col. Cavendish May, Charles E. Innes for Mat New Leigh, Miss Kate Ryan for Tabitha Stock, Miss Helen Stokes for Sarah Lykes and Miss Belle Stokes for Lady Edela Grey. The role of Sir Arthur May will be played by Little Olive Smith, a pretty child of six years. Little Olive last season was a member of Richard Golden's "Old Jed Prothy" company. She promises to make a pretty Sir Arthur and will be the smallest child ever seen in the part. The production will be sumptuously staged, new scenery having been painted by Samuel Brooker. "Rosedale" will have a production the equal of which in cast and environments has never been given before on a Boston stage.

BOWDOIN SQUARE THEATRE.—Manager Atkinson announces at the Bowdoin Square Theatre next week, the appearance of Robert ("Bobby") Gaylor, the gifted comedian in his great success, "Sport McAllister." The popularity of this clever farce comedy last season will make this revival a source of rare pleasure to the patrons of the Bowdoin Square, and the return of Mr. Gaylor and his associates will without question call out big audiences next week. Among the specialties introduced here will be a very clever reproduction of all of Lot Fuller's skit dances by some most artistic "trippers on the light fantastic" who are said to make this a strong feature of the production. The pleasing Swedish singers Dagmar and Decille are still with the company and Patrice, who was with the "Trip to Chinatown" during its entire New York run of 750 nights, is the subbrette of the company. A taking feature of this production is the baby's ballet introducing 20 little children. "Sport McAllister" will be followed Monday, Oct. 2d, by the Howard Athenaeum Specialty Company, with Lottie Collins in its membership.

His Appeal to Republican Fairness.

To the Editor of the GRAPHIC:—

If I know the intelligent Republicans of Newton, and I think I do from a residence of 20 years, I feel certain that they want every citizen to vote as his conscience dictates. In that spirit they selected that just man, Hon. J. R. Leeson to counsel with the Governor. I have admired his fairness in the petty Councilor squabble of 1893, Newton demands his renomination. With intelligent Republicans I crave a hearing. The Massachusetts Bill, of Rights, Art. IX, declares "All elections ought to be free; and all the inhabitants of this Commonwealth, having such qualifications as they shall establish by their frame of government, have an equal right to elect officers, and be elected, for public employments."

The Republican party legislature of a strict party vote, is the first that ever dared to ruthlessly trample upon that sacred right. It deliberately disfranchises 10,000 Prohibition party voters. With malice and aforethought at an unsuspecting moment in 1890 it enacted an amendment to the Australian ballot law that declares every Prohibition party caucus null and void, if it cannot muster 25 qualified voters, who must be present and participate therein, while two Republicans, no matter what their qualifications, may constitute a caucus of their party and make its nominations. This amendment is no part of the original Australian ballot law. This means that 10,000 Christian, patriotic voters, many of whom are veterans of the war, cannot make their party nominations as they have done for years. Why is this done? Because the Prohibition voters refuse to vote the Republican ticket. One chairman of the Election Laws Committee told me "that he'd teach the Prohibitionists what to do." Now I declare this is an unrighteous, unjust discrimination to be treason.

Messrs. Dwight Chester and E. J. H. Estabrooks I claim misrepresented the City of Newton when they voted with the unbroken Republican phalanx, against all measures designed to relieve these disabilities from the Prohibition party voters. I recollect one republican, who dared to vote to deal fairly with all parties, was jeered at by his confederates near his seat. Intelligent Republicans of Newton, do you countenance such bitter partisan bigotry and intolerance? Why can't you nominate large minded citizens to represent you? Men who are unprejudiced and will deal fairly with the suffrage rights of those who differ from them? Select able men that can think patriotically and on broader lines. Don't nominate men who consider party first and country last.

Young Republicans, your impulses are right and generous. Rise in your might in your caucus and rebuke such injustice and intolerance. Can you be worthy descendants of Adams and Otis, Phillips and Garrison, Sumner and Andrew, and quietly submit to such misrepresentation? It may some day be in a minority. As things look now, you will soon have to be.

The Prohibition party for 25 years has made its nominations in the regular way. Now to make these almost impossible an infamous caucus change is made. Last year two of your citizens could not be voted for nor could the prohibition voters vote for them, because we could not get names of Republicans on our nomination papers to secure our wanted place on the official ballot. Is this just? Is it fair? I ask you to wipe out this stigma on Massachusetts Legislation.

We have to suffer losses and indignity in simply asking Republicans to sign our nomination papers. Will you not do what you can to right this infamous wrong. We are in with the Massachusetts Supreme Court will stamp on such unjust legislation as unconstitutional. I write strong. I feel incensed at such outrages. You would do the same if in my place. Nothing is ever lost by fair play. Politics must not be robbery. This is all God's truth. WM. H. PARTRIDGE.

The Case of Mr. Pillsbury.

To the Editor of the GRAPHIC:

I notice that you have professed quite an admiration for Mr. Pillsbury in your editorial columns, which is perfectly proper, but I should like a little space to tell why many people have not that ardent admiration for him that they might have had.

I see you quoted an ardent Greenhalge man as asking "what has Mr. Pillsbury done for his party?" That might have been extended by asking what has Mr. Pillsbury done for the benefit of any party? I have nothing to say against his character or standing, which may be as high as any of his admirers desire, but from what I hear there seems to be a popular impression that he is chiefly interested in Albert Edward Pillsbury. This is not a popular theory to refer to the Borden trial, but there are some points about that that may explain the absence of enthusiasm for him as a candidate, and the failure of his boom.

For months we were told that Mr. Pillsbury was ill and the poor woman was kept in jail that the state might have the valuable services of the attorney general in the trial. Months went on, the evidence "petered out," and public clamor became so great that the trial took place. The prosecution had a very weak case, and a conviction was seen to be impossible. Mr. Pillsbury was well, but some one else represented the state. All this was a matter of public comment at the time and one still hears it in private conversation, and people are still asking why Mr. Pillsbury did not appear at the trial.

A good deal has been said about the "workers" for Mr. Greenhalge, but if they had had Mr. Wolcott, for instance, to work against, the fight might not have been such an easy one. If the "respectability" of the party, as some call it, wish to have their candidate for governor nominated, they should choose some candidate who has something in him to rouse public enthusiasm.

REPUBLICAN.

Hear what F. W. Brown says, Mr. Brown was formerly Postmaster of the town of Brooks and is now chairman of the Selectmen of the town, and has been for five years.

To Rodolf Medical Co. Your agent called on me to inquire in regard to the case of Mrs. Jeremiah Bowen who claims to be cured of consumption by Rodolf's Medical Discovery. I will say in 1882 I lived the same house with two sisters of Mrs. Bowen and within one year from that time they both died with that disease which heretofore there has been no cure for, consumption. I also know that one sister died the year previous with consumption, and the mother, all had died of the same disease. I also know that Mrs. Jeremiah Bowen was sick with the same disease that carried off the remainder of her family and very near death's door. I also know that she recovered from the sickness and is alive and apparently enjoying good health.

I will further state that Mrs. Jeremiah Bowen is a highly respectable lady who now resides in the town of Monroe and her statements are entitled to full credit and confidence of the people. To cure consumption which has always been considered an incurable disease seems impossible and incredible to some, but other strong cases of a similar nature as Mrs. Bowen's can be produced where a perfect cure has been effected, and I am fully convinced that science has found at last a cure for that dread disease consumption, and if taken in the early stages of the disease will effect a permanent cure. I do know and have seen wonderful effects from its use in large Scrofula Swellings and Scrofula Sores and one only need try to be convinced it is truly a wonderful discovery and discovered tested and compounded by highly respectable and scientific physicians whose names alone guarantee the quality of the medicine.

One Eye and One Lung. On 1, a venerable New York Chinaman who pronounces his name "One Eye," has made a vacancy in one of the best families of Baltimore by complaining against William Kuhn before United States Commissioner Shields. Even first families resort to laundries, it seems, and when Mr. Kuhn called for his goods at 60 Third avenue and failed to produce the ticket which was supposed to be their equivalent, there was considerable trouble, which he promptly pacified with a counterfeit $5 bill.

The $4.13 which he received in change completely wrecked Mr. On's exchequer and might have furnished Mr. Kuhn with funds for a prolonged racket had not On and his partner, One Lung, chased him down the Bowery and had him called up before Commissioner Shields. On I may have some chance of getting justice, as he was born on "Malch 17, 1839."

A man who would pass a $5 counterfeit on an inoffensive heathen who had helped him on the path to godliness by administering to his cleanliness would steal sheep and might even remove the copper appendant from the eyes of a deceased African.—New York Recorder.

Readiness to Help Germany. We are happy to give assurance to Germany that we shall be pleased to supply her with all the breadstuffs she may need this year. We shall ask only a fair price for them. We can also supply her with other kinds of agricultural products, quantities of them. We have some Indian meal to spare, and it can be fed to the army horses, as the Kaiser has ordered. We have yet some hay left. If Germany needs fruits or wines, we have them for sale. We can supply her with the best pork and bacon in the world, besides other meats, fresh or salt, in cold storage or otherwise. This is the market to which Germany ought to come whenever she needs anything, whatever it may be.

We must trust that Russia will not feel badly because we stand ready to supply Germany with food for man and beast. We stand thus ready at this time and nearly always. When once the German people and their cattle get accustomed to American products, we are sure that it will be hard to induce them to feed upon anything else.—New York Sun.

An English View of America. The announcement that an influential syndicate has been formed in Brixton to send an expeditionary force of pickpockets to the World's fair is a little belated. Gratifying to national pride it will be no doubt as showing that English spirit of enterprise still springs fresh and vigorous in the Briton's breast. But from the point of view of commercial speculation it is to be feared that the syndicate has been as completely whipped by American firms as have all previous exhibitions by the White City. Considering that the ashes of Christopher Columbus were all but stolen on the very opening day, and that the czar of Russia's jewels and the queen of Italy's lace have disappeared outright, we gravely doubt whether English competition will have much chance. Obviously native talent has every advantage of local knowledge, and though we could see the adventurers cross the Atlantic without a sigh we should advise them in their own interest to confine their operations to the narrower sphere of Brixton.—Pall Mall Gazette.

ALL IN ONE DREAM.

WORK ACCOMPLISHED BY A MAN IN A SHORT SPACE OF TIME.

A Story Showing the Remarkable Swiftness With Which the Mind Works When It is Supposed to Be Taking a Rest—How Long It Took to Do Ten Hours' Work.

A few evenings since a number of newspaper men were in an office awaiting the arrival of a gentleman who was to call together a meeting that they had been directed to report for their respective papers.

A number of topics was discussed, and one of these was dreams and the extreme rapidity with which mental operations are performed. A number of experiences were given, but the one that attracted the most attention was that of a Call representative, who narrated what he had done in a dream.

"It was," said he, "in 1868 that after a hard day's work I reached home and lost no time in retiring. Glancing at the clock as I turned off the gas I noticed that it was just 16 minutes after midnight."

"I shall tell you at this point how long I was dreaming or tell first what I did in my dream? That you all may better appreciate what was done, I will defer the matter until the end. Bear in mind that what is to be told was all in the dream. Seated in the old office on Commercial street, above Montgomery, I was endeavoring to put into presentable shape the facts of a trial that had taken place in the district court, when in came E. A. Rockwell, who was the chief editorial writer, and calling me by name said: 'You had better get ready and go to San Leandro. There's been a terrible railroad accident. There's 50 or 60 people killed, and I don't know how many injured.' George E. Barnes, at that time one of the proprietors and managing editors, had overheard Rockwell, and in that quiet way of his suggested that no time be lost in reaching Oakland, and there procuring a buggy and a pair of horses, to go to San Leandro or wherever the accident was."

"Rushing down to the ferry landing at the corner of Pacific and Davis streets, I reached there in time to find that the steamer for the other side of the bay had just pulled out, and that I would have to wait half an hour for the next boat. The delay was vexatious, and then when the ferryboat did move eastward it seemed as if she would never make her landing, she seemed to be going so slowly. When the slip on the other side was reached, there was some accident to the local train, and there was not any prospect of starting for an hour or more. There was not a team of any kind at the landing, so I had to walk to Oakland. "A desire to make up for the time lost urged me on, and I think the time made from the landing to Broadway and Washington street has never been beaten by man. Near the corner I went into a livery stable and ordered a pair of horses hitched up. There was a delay there, for the proprietor had his doubts about the ability of the team making the trip out and back. Finally I started, and the way those horses flew over the road was a caution. When the scene of the disaster, some distance beyond San Leandro, about 14 miles from Oakland, was reached, I proceeded at once to gather the facts.

"Down on the notebook were pencilled the names of 30 odd men, women and children who had either been killed outright or burned to death in some of the cars which had caught fire. Then followed the names of about 40 who had been injured, a description of their injuries and the opinions of the physicians who were in attendance as to the possible outcome in each case. Now, any of you who have had experience in gathering information of that kind can fully appreciate that it was not child's play, for the injured were in different places, and it required time to get around to them all.

"Then there was the obtaining of data about the dead. A number of them were well known residents of this city, others were from San Jose, so it became necessary to obtain enough to give each a decent obituary notice. In addition to this it became a part of my duty to get the statements of passengers, so as to describe their feelings when the train derailed and went over on its side down a little gully and be able to write up the narrow or fortunate escape of each. Then there were railroad officials to interview, and, as you all know, they are the hardest kind of people to obtain facts from.

"Well, it took nearly three hours to get all the matter that was needed for a sensational article that was to appear under a half column scare head. Then there was the ride back to Oakland settlement with the livery stable man, who swore that he would never rent a team to a newspaper man again, a rush in a hack to the ferry landing and the trip to this city. Without waiting to get anything to eat I made my way to the office and at once commenced to write up, telling every one who came to ask for details to let me alone. I did not write on copper plate style, and for that matter I never did, but I wrote and kept on writing until I had enough to fill what would make about four full columns of The Call of the present day and wrote that big scare head. As I handed the last line to the foreman to set up I heaved a sigh of relief and exclaimed, 'Thank goodness, that's done!' That is my dream.

"At that moment I felt a hand on my shoulder, jumped from the bed and heard my wife ask, 'What are you dreaming about?' I lit the gas, looked at the clock and discovered that it was 174 minutes after midnight, or, in other words, that in my dream of less than two minutes I had performed all that I have related.

"I have figured on the time it would take me to do what I did in that dream and find that it could not be done in less than 10 hours under the most favorable circumstances."—San Francisco Call.

The failure of the Senate to take action on the silver repeal bill is giving rise to a discussion as to the usefulness of that branch of our government, which has been already brought into a good deal of disrepute by the scandals attached to the more or less open purchase of seats by millionaires, and by pocket-boroughs like Nevada, whose whole population is hardly equal to that of one ward of the city of Boston. The theory was that the Senate would be valuable as a check upon the lower branch, and the theory is all right. The framers of our government had the English parliament before them as a pattern, and the Senate was modeled after the House of Lords. But the latter has fallen into great disrepute in England, as it is found to stand in the way of all progress and there is a vigorous demand for its abolition. Our House of Lords, many of whom are mere millionaires, is also losing prestige, and the great regard paid to Senatorial courtesy and precedent is interfering sadly with its usefulness. The people elect a Congress to remedy some unpopular legislation, but it does not meet for nearly a year after the election, and then the delay of the Senate entails a still further delay. The Senatorial dignity is a very precious thing in the eyes of the members, but it is fast becoming a very ridiculous thing in the eyes of the voters. Many are asking if our system of government is not a too ponderous and unwieldy machine, as its "checks and balances" are so nicely adjusted as to interfere with any progress save in the nature of drifting. From present indications it will take a generation to repeal the silver bill or to pass any other measures the people are demanding.

The Democratic convention was a very enthusiastic assemblage and the nomination of Hon. John E. Russell went through with perfect unanimity. The Democrats are fortunate in getting such a leader for the coming campaign. Like all political conventions there was a good deal of the "cut and dried" order about it, but the man is very foolish now-a-days who thinks that a convention is a deliberative body. The real work is done beforehand, and with such immense gatherings as our state conventions are getting to be, it is fortunate that this is so, or a convention might prove as long-winded as our National Congress. The platform adopted was very outspoken and shows that the Democracy are still true to their professions of a year ago. Evidently the coming campaign will be a very spirited affair on both sides, and lovers of political oratory will have it in abundance.

The action of the Board of Aldermen in voting for the Municipal fire alarm signal boxes is rather of a surprise to the public, as there was no public sentiment in favor of a change from the Gamewell system, which has always worked satisfactorily, and as the Gamewell company offered to furnish boxes on as favorable terms, there seemed to be no reason for mixing up our fire alarm system. This mixing up of different systems of fire alarm signals is an experiment at this time. The Gamewell boxes have always worked satisfactorily, the men in charge of the fire department, who were best qualified to judge, opposed any change, and it is difficult to explain the change that has been made. Citizens who have much valuable property at stake object, and are bringing a good deal of pressure upon Mayor Fenno to veto the order, as they consider the action of the city council ill-advised and not in accord with the best interests of the city.

MR. W. H. PARTRIDGE has one of his characteristic letters on another page. While our readers may not agree with much that Mr. Partridge says, they will all probably acknowledge that the act to deprive the Prohibitionists of a chance to have their candidate on the official ballot was not a wise or just measure, although they may doubt if it was the result of a conspiracy, as Mr. Partridge charges. The Prohibitionists feel very strongly on this matter, and that is the reason, we suppose, why they can not be as temperate in their appeals through the newspapers, and in their public speeches, as they believe all men should be in the use of intoxicating liquors.

MR. GREENHALGE evidently does not wish to be considered an abject follower of Mr. McKinley, for in an interview with the Boston Globe he says:

"The notion that I was then, or am now, a rigid protectionist to the full extent of the McKinley bill, is altogether wrong. For harmony and justice I favored the bill, but, as I stated then, as the Congressional Record will show, there were important clauses in the McKinley bill that I strongly objected to and that I would have done all I could to have changed had the opportunity occurred, as would have been the case had I been returned the following year."

THE acquittal of Asa P. Potter last week does not mean that he has escaped punishment. There is still a sentence hanging over him of 60 days in jail and a fine of $100, imposed last February, which is now before the United States Supreme court on some law points, and the prosecution expects action early in the winter. The counsel for the prosecution also intimates that further indictments will be brought against him.

THE building ordinance, which establishes the office of building inspector and provides regulations for new buildings, will be found on another page. It is an important document and will be found useful for reference.

WORK on the Cheesecake brook boulevard will be resumed next week and it is hoped to finish the improvement this season.

SECT. 48. No furnace for melting iron or making glass and no stationary steam engine or steam boiler to be used for mechanical purposes and in which any other fuel than coal is used or to be used, shall be hereafter erected or put up to be used without a license first obtained from the board of aldermen, and in no case shall a stationary engine propelled by steam or other motive power be hereafter erected or put up for use within the limits of a dwelling-house or public building, unless a license therefor has first been obtained from the board of aldermen; and upon the granting of such license in either of the cases referred to in this section, the person or persons receiving it shall before setting, erecting, or placing said boiler, engine, or furnace, obtain a permit from the inspector of buildings, who shall prescribe such regulations for the setting or placing thereof as in his judgment the public safety may require.

SECT. 49. No permanent smoke-pipe or flue shall project through an external wall or through any window, door or opening in said wall.

SECT. 50. All floor timbers, headers and trimmers of every brick building hereafter erected, or altered, in which a chimney is built, in a brick wall, shall be placed distant at least two inches from the outside of every chimney flue, and the space between such timbers and the brick work of the chimney shall be closed by a proper fire stop of incombustible material.

SECT. 51. If any chimney, flue, or heating apparatus on any premises, in the opinion of the inspector, endangers the premises, he shall at once notify in writing the owner or agent of such premises. If such owner or agent fails to commence to make such chimney, flue or heating apparatus safe by twelve o'clock noon of the next day following the service of such notice, and diligently prosecute the work to completion, he shall be liable to a penalty of not less than ten dollars nor more than fifty dollars.

SECT. 52. No boiler to be used for steam motive-power, and no furnace for melting metal or melting glass, shall be placed on any floor above the cellar or basement, unless the same is set upon masonry built up from the ground, or upon iron beams supported on masonry, and all wood-work and timber shall be removed from the floor under the same, provided, however, that furnaces for melting such metals only as fuse at a temperature not exceeding eight hundred degrees Fahrenheit, and that are connected with the chimney by a steel metal pipe exposed to view, may be placed upon hollow brick or stone hearths, supported by the wooden floor of the first story or basement, the air spaces in which hearths shall be not less than three inches in perpendicular height, and connected by suitable air passages with the atmosphere of the room.

SECT. 53. All hot air register boxes hereafter placed in the floors or partitions of buildings shall be set in soapstone borders not less than two inches in width, firmly set in plaster of Paris or gauged mortar, or in such other protection as shall be in the judgment of the inspector be equivalent to soapstone; said boxes shall be made of tin plate with a flange on the top to fit the rabbet in the soapstone, and shall have an open side of one inch on all sides extending from the under side of the ceiling below the register, or the back shall be partitioned to the soapstone in the floor or partition, the outside of said space to be covered with a casing of tin plate, tight on all sides and extending from the under side of said ceiling or back side of said partition to, and turning under, the said soapstone; said register boxes of fifteen by twenty-five inches or more in size shall have a space as above of two inches.

FIRE GUARDS.

SECT. 54. The inside of all fired brick walls of every brick building hereafter erected shall have a fire belt or stop, composed of some fire-proof material, at least six inches wide and thoroughly set up between each story divided or separated by a fire-stop, so as to check effectively the draft from one story to another, and from the vertical spaces in the walls to the horizontal passages between the floor timbers. The spaces between stringers or carriages of all wooden staircases, unless said stringers or carriages are left exposed, shall be closed at intervals not exceeding three feet by substantial stops of incombustible material, all ventilating ducts shall be of incombustible material.

SECT. 55. The various forms of construction tending to create or form air passages from one story to another, such as spaces around pipes, ventilating shafts, or chimneys turned off to form breasts, in every building hereafter erected or altered, shall have a fire and smoke stop at each floor approved by the inspector, which fire and smoke stop in all brick buildings shall be of incombustible material.

SECT. 56. No bay-window, balcony or other projection shall be built upon the front wall of any building, so as to project over the line of the street.

SAFEGUARDS DURING BUILDING OPERATIONS.

SECT. 57. Whenever any person is about to erect or alter an exterior wall of a building, within five feet of the line of a street, he shall cause the portion of the site of the building bordering upon the street to be enclosed by a proper fence not less than four feet high, and at least five feet from the line of such building; and the fence shall be made as much higher as the inspector of buildings shall direct, and the same shall be maintained until all liability to accident from falling material ceases, and he shall maintain proper lights, if so required by the inspector, at both ends of such enclosed space from sunset to sunrise. In erecting any building, no person shall place, deposit, or suffer to remain in any street or highway any lumber or other building material, rubbish, or remains of any old building, for a longer period than may be necessary for the prosecution of the work which may be going on; and in case such material, rubbish, or remains of an old building shall necessarily remain after dark, a sufficient light shall be placed over or near the same, and kept from sunset to sunrise. All rubbish from the erecting or repairing of any building, or the removal of an old building, shall be carried away by the person so erecting or repairing or removing such building, at such time as the superintendent of streets may direct; and in case of neglect or refusal so to do, it shall be removed by the superintendent of streets, at the expense of such person. Any person violating any provision of this section shall be liable to a penalty of five dollars.

SNOW GUARDS.

SECT. 58. Every building erected upon the line or within five feet of the line of any street, and having a slated pitch roof sloping toward said street, shall be provided with suitable snow barriers or guards upon said roof to prevent the snow sliding therefrom, the same to be constructed and applied to the satisfaction of the inspector of buildings.

CITY BUILDINGS.

SECT. 59. Every building hereafter erected for the use of the city of Newton, except wagon sheds and buildings for temporary use, shall be built of stone or brick, and have slate, metal or composition roof covering and metal gutters.

PLUMBING AND HOUSE DRAINAGE.

SECT. 60. Every plumber, before doing any work in a building shall, except in the case of the repair of leaks, file at the office of the inspector of buildings, upon blanks for that purpose, a notice of the work to be performed; and no such work shall be done in any building without the approval of said inspector.

SECT. 61. The plumbing of every building shall be separately and independently connected with the public sewer when such sewer is provided, or with a proper and sufficient drain connected thereto outside of the building; and if a sewer is not accessible, with a proper cesspool.

SECT. 62. Pipes and other fixtures shall not be covered or concealed from view until approved by the inspector, who shall examine the same within two working days after notice that they are ready for inspection.

SECT. 63. Plumbing work shall not be used unless the same has first been tested by the plumber, in the presence of the inspector, with the water test, or if that is not practicable, with the peppermint or other reliable test, and approved by the said inspector.

SECT. 64. Drain and connecting ventilating pipes shall be of sufficient size, and made of extra heavy cast iron within the building, and for a distance of at least five feet outside, except that lead pipes may be used for short connections exposed to view. Such pipes shall be of uniform thickness throughout, free from all defects, and shall have an average weight not less than that here specified, viz:

2 inch pipe,	5 1/2 pounds per foot.
3 inch pipe,	9 1/2 pounds per foot.
4 inch pipe,	13 pounds per foot.
5 inch pipe,	17 pounds per foot.
6 inch pipe,	20 pounds per foot.
8 inch pipe,	33 1/2 pounds per foot.
10 inch pipe,	45 pounds per foot.
12 inch pipe,	54 pounds per foot.

No tar coated cast-iron pipe shall be used. Drain-pipes shall be properly secured by irons to walls, suspended to floors, or by other means, and hangers, or notches in flooring, laid to uniform grade in brick trenches, of sufficient width to admit of access to all joints, and provided with movable covers.

Every drain pipe not connected with a public sewer shall be supplied with a running trap of the same size as the drain, placed with an accessible clean-out, at or near the point where it leaves the building, and shall have a fall of at least one inch to a foot.

If the trap be inside the cellar wall the clean-out shall be on the house side of the trap. When the house-drain is connected with the public sewer the running-trap may be omitted.

If the house drain is not connected with a public sewer there shall be a fresh air inlet entering the drain, between the main trap and any other connections, of not less than four inches internal diameter, extending into the external air at least three feet above the ground and away from all windows and doors, the upper end to be protected by a cow or return bend securely fastened. When the house-drain is connected with a public sewer and the running trap is omitted, the fresh air inlet shall be omitted.

That portion of the house-drain which is outside of the building, and more than five feet from the foundation walls, shall be constructed of extra heavy cast iron soil pipe or of the best quality of vitrified drain pipe. No house-drain or private sewer shall pass under another house nor within four feet of the cellar wall of another.

Drainpipes shall be carried above the roof open and undiminished in size, and to a sufficient height not less than two feet above the roof, and not less than five feet above the top of any window within fifteen feet. Changes in direction shall be made with curved pipes, and all connections with horizontal or vertical pipes shall be made with one-eighth bends and Y branches. All drainpipes shall be exposed to sight where practicable within the building, and shall not be exposed to pressure where they pass through walls.

No trap shall be placed at the foot of a vertical soil-pipe.

SECT. 65. No rain water conductor shall be connected with the house-drain, sewer or cesspool. No rain water conductor shall be used as a soil, waste or vent pipe, nor connected therewith, nor shall any soil, waste or vent pipe be used as a rain water conductor.

SECT. 66. The waste pipe of each and every sink, basin, bath, tub, water-closet, hopper, and each set of trays or other fixtures, shall be furnished with a separate trap, which shall be placed as near as practicable to the fixture that it serves. Traps shall be protected from syphonage or air pressure by special cast iron air pipes of a size not less than the waste pipes they serve, run from the crown of the trap. Lead air pipes may be used only when they are exposed to view. Air pipes for water-closet traps shall be of two inch bore if thirty feet or less in length, and of three inch bore if more than thirty feet in length; other air pipes shall be as large as the waste pipes from the trap. Air pipes shall be run direct as practicable. Two or more air pipes may be connected together with a drain-pipe; but in every case of connection with a drain-pipe such connection shall be above the upper fixture of the building.

In no case shall a soil or waste or air pipe from a soil or waste pipe be connected with a chimney. No ventilation shall be required from a deep drain trap in cases where there is no other plumbing than a sink waste and in which no soil matter is admitted. Air pipes shall be so constructed as not to allow the formation of a trap nor be used as waste pipes.

SECT. 67. All waste or overflow pipes from safes under water-closets and other fixtures or from tanks shall be run separately to basement or cellar, and left open in no case shall they be connected with a soil pipe or any other waste pipe.

No waste pipe from a refrigerator or other receptacle in which food or provisions are stored shall be connected with a drain, soil or other waste pipe, but shall be separated therefrom by an open air sink or tray furnished with a trap.

No steam exhaust, blow off nor drip pipe shall connect with a sewer, house-drain, rain water conductor, soil, waste or vent pipe. Such pipes shall discharge into a suitable tank or condenser from which a proper outlet to the house-drain shall be provided.

SECT. 68. Every water-closet, or line of water-closets on the same floor, shall be supplied with water from a tank or cistern, and shall have a flushing pipe of not less than one inch in diameter, but this flushing pipe shall not apply to water-closets substituted for vaults, where the same are located outside of the building proper; and such water-closets may be arranged so as to receive their supply directly from the main, with proper fixtures approved by the inspector, the water board and the board of health.

SECT. 69. No saddle hubs will be allowed on any plumbing.

No return bends will be allowed except by special permission of the inspector.

SECT. 70. Every joint in earthen pipe shall be made in hydraulic cement, care being taken that the inside of the joints and of the pipe is properly cleaned out before the connection is made with the house. Every joint in lead pipe shall be made in solder, and wiped joints are to be used where practicable. Every joint of an iron and a lead pipe shall be made by a brass or iron ferrule of the same size as lead pipe, set in the hub of the branch of the iron pipe, and caulked with lead; the lead pipe to be attached to the ferrule by a wiped solder joint. Every joint in a cast-iron bell and spigot pipe shall be made with packed oakum and mottled lead caulked, at least one and one-half inches deep, and made water and air tight, and no joint or putty shall be allowed until it has been tested.

SECT. 71. No person shall connect the plumbing of any building with any sewer without a permit from the board of health.

SECT. 72. No person shall discharge any contents of any privy vault, manure pit or carriage wash into a public drain or sewer except through an intervening catch-basin, the outlet pipe of which shall be high enough above the bottom to prevent any but liquid contents from passing over into the drain or sewer. A sufficient trap shall be placed in every drain connecting such catch-basin with a sewer.

SECT. 73. A grease trap shall be constructed under the sink of every hotel, eating-house, restaurant, or other public cooking establishment so as to be easily accessible for inspection and cleaning.

SECT. 74. Every privy vault shall be of brick and cement, of a capacity not less than eighty cubic feet, of easy access, convenient to open and clean, and make tight. The inside shall be at least two feet from the next lot, and from any public or private way.

SECT. 75. Water pipes in exposed places shall be properly protected from frost.

SECT. 76. All questions as to the intent and meaning of the provisions of this ordinance shall be decided by the inspector of buildings, provided that any person dissatisfied or aggrieved by his decision may appeal to the board of aldermen whose decision shall be final.

SECT. 77. In this act the following terms shall have the meanings respectively assigned to them:

"Alteration" means any change or addition.

"Cellar" means a basement or lower story of which one-half or more of the height from the floor to the ceiling is below the level of the ground.

"Foundation" means that portion of a wall below the level of the street curb, and where the wall is not on a street, that portion of the wall below the level of the highest ground next to the wall; but if under party or partition walls, they be constructed by the inspector to mean that portion below the cellar floor.

"Chimney" shall apply to any permanent or fixed flue, or passages built into any building for conveying away the products of combustion from furnaces, stoves, boilers, ranges or fire-places.

"Inspector" means the inspector of buildings of the city of Newton.

"Building-house" means a building in which persons are accommodated with sleeping apartments, and includes hotels and apartment houses where cooking is not done in the several apartments.

"Party-wall" means every wall used, or built in order to be used, as a separation of two or more buildings.

"Partition wall" means any interior wall of a building.

"External wall" means every outer wall or vertical enclosure of a building other than a party wall.

"Repairs" means the reconstruction or renewal of any existing part of a building or of its fixtures or appurtenances, by which the strength or fire-risk is not affected or modified, and not made in the opinion of the inspector for the purpose of converting the building in whole or in part to a new one.

"Tenement-house" means a building which, or any portion of which, is occupied, or intended to be occupied, as a dwelling by more than three families living independently of one another, and doing their cooking upon the premises; or by more than two families above the second floor, so living and cooking.

"Thickness" of a wall means the minimum thickness of such wall.

SECT. 78. All buildings hereafter to be erected in this city of a description not specified in this ordinance shall be constructed in a manner that shall be satisfactory to the board of aldermen.

SECT. 79. Whoever violates any of the provisions of this ordinance shall be liable to a penalty of not more than one hundred dollars, and another penalty is specifically provided herein.

SECT. 80. The ordinance relating to plumbing, approved March 14, 1892, and all ordinances or parts of ordinances inconsistent with the foregoing ordinance are hereby repealed, but such repeal does not deprive any one from any rights obtained under previous ordinances, nor revive any ordinance theretofore repealed.

SECT. 81. The provisions of this ordinance shall not apply to buildings and structures owned or occupied by the United States or by the State of Massachusetts, nor to bridges, quays and wharves.

Passed to be ordained.

Undertaker McGourty took charge of the body and it was taken to-day to the residence of distant connection in Cambridge. —Let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us," Hebrews, 12th chapter, 1st verse. These were the opening words of Mr. Priest's sermon last Sunday at the Universalist church. There was a large audience to listen to the remarks that followed the above opening sentence. After a brief explanation of the circumstances under which those words were uttered and the occasion that called forth the speaker took up the race of life as applied to us here on this earth. The text itself was a gem of poetry and a complete sermon of exhortation. We are all in this race of life and no matter whether we will or not we must run it to the end. There are many conditions under which this race is to be run, but we are all entered therein and must do the very best we can. We have many weights to carry that are burdensome! Sins that keep us down. Hindrances to the free action needed to win. Those must be laid aside that we may be able to compete with the best. In looking at the success of life, we see only one side and do not know that often the race which has the appearance of being won is in reality a failure. In the world of politics, it is not always the man who has secured the coveted seat in the government that has done so honestly. He may have put the old time slavery of men's bodies in the South shame by the slavery of men's souls. By the purchase of their votes he may have made men worse than slaves. In the business men follow! what is often looked upon as a success may be a dismal failure. He who has lost their souls and now that they would like to take real enjoyment in life, find that their minds are all sold for the gold which they have and cannot read a book or employ the intellects God has given them, having become only business machines. God has so created man that no good thing can be neglected and laid aside without being ruined. If we will help others along the way, forget the selfishness that does so easily beset us, we shall win the race of life. Let our lives be helpful to all and keep ever before us the character of Jesus who laid down his life for the world, and doing this won the prize of life.

—The smoking car of the last train from Boston on the Boston & Albany railroad Saturday night was filled with a crowd of men who were fighting drunk. There were about ninety in the car, the aisle being well filled, and nearly half of the men were intoxicated. The swearing, manly singing and quarrelsomeness were kept up until Station Street reached. Between Newton and Newtonville two fellows had a wordy war for a minute, and then a third interfered, and the result was that two plate glass windows were smashed. The conductor and baggage men, after a severe struggle, separated the combatants and the two principals ran, one in each direction, out of the car. One of them was caught in a rear car and at the station here was delivered to the police. Patrick Kelly, one of the men, was in court Tuesday morning and fined $10 under the provision of the railroad law.

—Rev. H. J. Patrick, D. D., pastor of the Second Congregational church, preached his 33d anniversary sermon Sunday. At the close of his discourse he read his letter of resignation which he said he should offer Tuesday when he completed a service of 23 years as pastor. In his letter of resignation he alluded to the pleasant relations which had existed between pastor and people, and expressed his appreciation of the kindness and forbearance shown to him. He would present his resignation, he said, with relief, but he believed that it was his duty to do so on account of his failing eyesight. A few months ago, at a meeting of the church, the question of resigning Rev. Dr. Patrick came up for consideration. His eyesight had perceptibly failed, and although his vigor in the pulpit had not diminished, there were those among his congregation who thought that he would be relieved from the active duties of the pastorate. One plan suggested was that of securing an assistant clergyman to help him in his work, and another that of retiring him with a pension. Since that time no action has been taken. It is probable now that Rev. Dr. Patrick's resignation will be accepted. A meeting of the church and parish will be called soon to take action, and in the event of the acceptance of the resignation to make provision for supplying the pulpit.

Two Remarkable Cures.

An old Irish woman's cow was sick unto death, so she turned to the priest to save it. "I can't do anything to keep your cow from dying," he said impatiently. "Fath an begorra it's you that can if any one can," the answered in simple faith.

Unwilling to have her reverence in him shaken, the old man went to her cabin. The sick cow was brought out into the yard and propped up, then the priest began a solemn march around it, chanting monotonously, "If you die, you die; if you live, you live." When at last the tired priest sat down, the cow was reviving, and it afterward lived to a green old age. Some years later the priest was at the point of death with a terrible quinsy, when the old Irish woman presented herself at the house and told the doctor she could cure him. She was laughed to scorn, but at last had her own way. She insisted upon having the dying man's bed brought out into the middle of the floor, and around it she slowly cantered, singing, "If you live, you live, and if you die you die." The humor of the situation tickled the suffering priest so that a hearty laugh broke the quinsy, and he also lived—to a green old age.—Springfield Homestead

Power of the Imagination.

"I never was more firmly convinced of the power of imagination," said a man, "than I was by something that happened to me on the occasion of a visit to a friend. It had been an extremely hot day, and when I went to bed at night the heat seemed almost insupportable. I seemed to me that if I should open the door from my room into the hall it would make a little circulation and make the air more comfortable, and I felt safe in doing this because I am an early riser, and I knew I could get the door shut before anybody was stirring in the morning. So I opened the door, with the pleasant result that I had anticipated, and when I went to close it in the morning I found that I had opened not the door into the hall, but the door into a closet."—New York Sun.

A Plea For Egoism.

Ask yourself hard questions about yourself; find out all you can about yourself. Ascertain from original sources if you are really the manner of man you say you are; if you are always honest; if you always tell the square, perfect truth in business deals; if your life is as good and upright at 11 o'clock at night as it is at noon; if you are as good a temperance man at a fishing excursion as you are at a Sunday picnic; if you are as good when you go out of the city as you are at home; if, in short, you are really the sort of man your father hopes you are and your sweetheart believes you to be.—Panola (Tex.) Watchman.

People who do not believe in dog stories are really subjects for heartless commiseration. They have either been unfortunate in their canine acquaintances or have not the penetration requisite for proper interpretation of dog characteristics.

A Conversation by Noted Authors.
"I never heard distinguished people talk among themselves but once," declared a young lady the other day, "but then I was quite satisfied. It was even more interesting than I had expected."

"What did they talk about?" asked her companion curiously, "and who were they?"

The young lady named them—two noted authors, a gentleman and a lady. "And they talked," she added, with a smile, "about pokers."

"Pokers?" ejaculated the friend incredulously.

"Pokers!" repeated the first speaker firmly. "The authoress had just built a new house, and her furnace did not work well. She thought her companion had one of the same kind in the house and asked about it."

"He gave her information and advice, and then they branched off to pokers and the iniquity of manufacturers who make them of soft iron so that they bend out of shape the first time they are red hot. You have always heard, haven't you, that his style is exquisite and his English singularly clear and vigorous? Well, it is so, I assure you, when he talks of pokers, and she is charming when she talks in a humorous vein about back dampers and cold air boxes. I was delighted with the entire conversation, though it certainly was not what I anticipated."—Youth's Companion.

A Bright Lad,
Ten years of age, but who declines to give his name to the public, makes this authorized, confidential statement to us:

"When I was one year old, my mamma died of consumption. The doctor said that I, too, would soon die, and all our neighbors thought that even if I did not die, I would never be able to walk, because I was so weak and puny. A gathering formed and broke under my arm. I hurt my finger and it gathered and threw out pieces of bone. If I hurt myself so as to break the skin, it was sure to become a running sore. I had to take lots of medicine, but nothing has done me so much good as Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It has made me well and strong."

THIRD IN RANK.

THE PLANS OF THE NEWTON ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION.

The Newton Athletic Association has shown such unmistakable signs of growth that at present it ranks as the third largest association in the state.

It is expected that by another year a fine clubhouse will be built in some of the Newtons.

At present the all-absorbing topic of interest to the club is their foot ball eleven.

Mr. Charles N. Fitz, who has been elected manager, has zealously pushed affairs, so that aside from the scheduled games in the Suburban league, the N. A. A. eleven has every available date filled up to the end of the season.

The play for the Suburban league bowl this fall, which was the primary object of the eleven's formation, will doubtless create a great deal of interest, and many of the "wise ones" seem to think that the real struggle for ownership will be between the Newton Athletic Association and the West Roxbury team.

The team which at present is striving for the honor of sporting Newton's emblem, the fleur-de-lis, in the opening league game with the Needham A. A. on Oct. 14, is made up as follows: Full-back, Harold Blake; half-backs, W. R. Knight and A. W. Thibault; quarter-back, C. N. Fitz; left end, Hosmer Linder; left tackle, Fred Bond, Edward Crane and Frank Booth; left guard, F. S. Pratt; centre, Willis Bond and Nathan Cutter; right guard, Leon Thomas; right tackle, Robert Gardner and Albert Carter; and the right end, Dan Dewey and H. F. Page.

Blake, who is well known in foot ball circles, has done some fine work behind the line.

On the line, Pratt, the Harvard bicyclist, Linder, also of Cambridge, and Dan Dewey, the Boston Athletic man, have distinguished themselves.

The N. A. A. eleven has played three games thus far this season, and have each time secured a victory, for which much credit is due the manager, Mr. Fitz.

A series of cross-country runs has been arranged for this fall by the governing committee, and emboldened by the success of their Labor Day meet, another on a larger scale is to be held during the winter months.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla does what no other blood purifier in existence can do. It searches out all the impurities in the system and expels them harmlessly through the proper channels. This is why Ayer's Sarsaparilla is so pre-eminent effective as a remedy for rheumatism.

FAVORED HON. JOHN E. RUSSELL.

SENTIMENT OF DELEGATES ELECTED BY THE NEWTON DEMOCRATS.

The Democrats of Newton held ward caucuses last Friday evening. In Ward 3 there was a large attendance and quite a lively contest over the election of members of the ward committee. The five men who served in the last state and national elections were retired, a ticket headed by George M. Cox receiving the largest number of votes. Cox is said to be a candidate for postmaster at West Newton, and the change made in the committee is thought to be a move in the interests of his candidacy.

At some of the caucuses there were spirited addresses predicting the success of the Democratic ticket at the polls in the state election in November. The sentiment of the gentlemen chosen to represent the Democratic voters in the state convention seemed to be unanimously in favor of the nomination of Hon. John E. Russell for Governor.

But It Served the Purpose.

(From the Washington Star.)

"That was a most considerate speech of Senator Blank's," said a statesman.

"I didn't hear it."

"That's just it. Neither did I. I understand he delivered it in an undertone so as not to wake anybody."

A Degree Worse.

Saint Botolph.

"Well, Johnny, how are you? Do you find dollars scarce, as everybody else does?"

"I'm worse off than that. I even find half dollars scarce."

Little city girl: How funny! You get your milk from a cow and we get ours out of a can.

Little country girl: But it's just the same kind of milk.

Little city girl: Oh, no; I noticed a great difference right away.—Saint Botolph.
